MARGARET GORNALL AND ELIZABETH WELCH ANOUNCED AS "PLAYFERS"

Margaret Gornall and Elizabeth Welch are announced as "Playfiers" for the play this fall. It is customary of revealing the anonymity of "Playfiers", today announces that she is plural and not singular. However, the other ciclomer was not written in collaboration. It was combining the talents of both students, but neither helped in the other's preparation of the Playfier.

During most of the past four years, Elizabeth Welch, 26 year old, has written the column for the Playfier, and Shirley Assistant Professor, conducted the column for the remainder of the year.

SEATING INSTALLATION IS ALMOST FINISHED

Installation of seats in the auditorium at the University this week has been completed. All new seats have been installed, filling the demarcated section and the front part of the balcony. The remainder of the balcony is being fitted with seats from the manufacturers of Playal Hall.

The old seats were removed and transferred Tuesday. On account of the humidity yesterday, these seats have not yet been placed, but the contractors expect to have them installed today.

Work on the new chairs is still going on. Curved rails were hung Tuesday, and the installation has been completed.

The lamps are now being hung. The worst which appeared in the newspaper advertisements of the installation of seats have not interfered with the progress of the work.

TIES WHICH BIND

A common feeling is to be found among both problems, sure plans which should be dismissed immediately. A few weeks ago, Mytskina announced her intentions on the basis of an article in automobiles, and likewise, free walks, had been aboliished. A woman teacher, in the common, traditions, and interclass rivalities exist. It was further announced that the party would be merged with the women’s executive committee. Furthermore, a lax abolished barrel rolling and free jumping for a potentially more serious function. The women’s executive society must now outline the character of the function which they will sponsor.

It seems that the intended new function should be as thorough as its extra-curricular orientation of the freshmen class. It is that the party members in its intellectual orientation of the class. If that is the case, they suggest to their party, then what form will the new event assume? Shall we wholeheartedly accept Thirsk’s and the more progressivist practice in education by assigning them to realize rivalry regulations and commonplace rules? Shall we line up the members of the faculty around the gymasmum and tag them as we mold them in a tailoring establishment? Shall we put them through a process of handshaking which will leave them unable even to enjoy their ice cream and animal crackers.

Some colleges conduct a series of addresses by members of the faculty who give entering students a perspective of the college and its policies. Student leaders, also, outline the work of their organizations, not in a two minute “jun-in-y-club” speech, but in group conferences to which interested freshmen are invited. These are only two suggested plans which might be presented to the class. Whether the new organization is successfully planned will depend on the interest and the efforts of the organizers, and is in the hands of the students.

The second play, “Wrong Number,” was presented by the Dramatic Club of the State College. It is the story of a young man (John F. Lefevre) and a young woman (Mary Goodwin) who are married on the stage. The comedy as an art form, as a picture of human life and nature, is as real to the people as are facts. The characters in the Texas Beauty Is Sorry That Marks Stump To "B" Grade

An Ohio, a Texas, and a New York university girl, Lydia Engberg, is proving that it is possible to possess beauty to spare, work nine hours a day to pay college expenses, and still rate high scholastically. The blonde beauty, named one of the school's fifteen under graduates, works as a stenographer in the house of rep-erentatives. She credits to a private relationship.

Miss Enright's greatest regret is that some of her grades have slipped in "B." Last year she maintained a consistent "A" average.
