State Prof., Former Student, Gives Opinion on Student Government

By Cynthia Gandar

Dr. Richard Kendall, former professor of English, was back on campus last week to speak about the Student Government. His lecture, titled "What the President Should Be Doing," was a call for the administration to take a more active role in student affairs.

Kendall, who taught at the University for over 20 years, said that the current system of student governance is not working. "The current council is more of a reactive body than an active one," he said. "They are only called upon when there is a problem, instead of being proactive in seeking out issues that need to be addressed."

He said that the council should have more power to make decisions and that the president should be more involved in their work. "The president should be more of a leader, rather than a follower," Kendall said. "They should be setting the agenda and driving the process, not just sitting back and waiting for problems to come up."

Kendall also spoke about the importance of the president's role in the community. He said that the president should be the face of the University, representing it at events and making appearances in the community. "The president should be a visible leader, not just someone who is always behind the scenes," he said. "They need to be out there, interacting with the community and making connections."

He ended his lecture by saying that the University needs a change in leadership. "We need a president who is going to take a more active role in student affairs," he said. "They need to be proactive, not reactive, and they need to be more connected to the community. Only then can we start making real progress on these issues."
The Yula Drama Festival is an interesting experience in theatre. Twelve universities, outstanding in dramatic accomplishment, are invited to New Haven to present one of their recent productions. Criticism and discussion follow each play, and theatre students from all over the country assemble to evaluate the acting, directing, and technical quality of each production. Among the plays presented were "Tartuffe," "O.P.A.," "Hamlet," "O.C.A.," "The Cherry Orchard," "The Gold Bug," "The Cherry Orchard," "Hamlet," and others. All productions were highly praised for their moving portrayal of characters and situations.

Albany Gallery Reaches Unusual Medio-Metric Height

During the month of April, the Albany Art Gallery will present an exhibition of unusual dimensions. The exhibit will feature works by contemporary artists, including abstract paintings, sculptures, and installations. The gallery will also host a series of workshops and lectures led by prominent artists, discussing the latest trends in the art world.

There is also a cabinet packed with fine watches and jewelry, including platinum, gold, and diamonds. This month will be busy for University theatre, as James Leonard, director of "The Minister's Mind," recently finished casting and began rehearsals.

English Evening Theatre

The English Evening Theatre is a very popular event, drawing a large audience every year. This year's production will be "The Cherry Orchard," directed by James Leonard. The cast includes experienced actors from various parts of the country, and the production promises to be a memorable experience.
