Write Your Own

You know how hard it is to write one of these editorials, once a year?

No, you don't. I didn't think so.

Why do I have to write one?

I don't ask for this. Oh, I was kidnapped from my apartment and at this moment even A. Greenbaum is sitting here with a sweat-off discharge at my head. And he won't quit cawing me.

Just try and make me.

Here — write one yourself.

Knight: Winning Makes Everything All Right?

The title was coined by AP Special Correspondent Will Knight. "It's a concept I've been trying to figure out this season," he said.

"Winning is an attitude that carried the Hoosiers to their 63-50 victory over North Carolina. It's a discipline that carried the Hoosiers to their 63-50 victory over North Carolina. It's a kind of protector of modern virtues that Americans again should shrug off and dump into a plastic container, suddenly is pictured as some thing to be admired. ""What a kind,"" adds another.

"WINNING MAKES EVERYTHING ALL RIGHT?"" asked the Indiana coach in the wake of his team's second straight victory over a top-10 team. ""What a kind,"" he said.

The Indiana coach makes no effort to probe into his own soul or the deeper implications of a victory. ""Let teachers instill young people with the values of a victory,"" he said. ""Let them know what a victory is all about."

""It's a very long way from being real,"" he said. ""It's a very long way from being real.""

Batmen Look To Break With Losing Tradition

by Larry Smith

SUNY Albany's long-standing losing tradition in baseball is set to change this year, according to Rick Skeel, the head coach of the baseball team.

"This year will be different," Skeel said. "Our team has the attitude and players to change our losing record. We have a solid and experienced lineup, and our pitching has improved significantly." Skeel emphasized that the team has the motivation and determination to break the losing tradition.

This year's lineup includes several returning players, such as Keith Duckett, who led the team in home runs last season. The team also has several new faces, including transfer players who will add depth to the lineup.

The season opening game against the University of Buffalo is set for April 7, and Skeel is excited about the potential for success.

AMIA Intramural Hoop Champions Determined

by Thomas Franklin

The AMIA Intramural Hoop Champions were determined this past week as the season came to a close.

The Untouchables, a team that has been successful in previous years, emerged as this year's champions. They defeated their nearest competitors in the championship game, 47-46, to win the title.

Their success has been due to their strong teamwork and excellent defense, according to Skeel. "Their attitude and determination on the court have been key to their success," Skeel said.
