to interpret it, and in his willingness to reserve judgment, Dr. Rogers shows a great attitude. He believes that when a student can't hear the theory he has no right to predict what will happen on the subject.

The marking system for the course is also a subject for discussion. Dr. Rogers feels that grades should not be a reflection on the student's ability, but rather an indication of what he has learned. He feels that the grading system should be fair and balanced, and that students should be encouraged to work hard and learn the material, rather than just memorize it.

Dr. Rogers also feels strongly about the role of the textbook in the classroom. He believes that textbooks should be used as a reference, and that students should be encouraged to think for themselves and develop their own ideas. He feels that the goal of education should be to help students develop critical thinking skills, rather than just memorize facts and figures.

Throughout the interview, Dr. Rogers consistently stressed the importance of individuality and creativity in education. He believes that each student is unique, and that schools should be designed to help each student reach their full potential. He feels that education should be an opportunity for students to explore their interests and passions, and that schools should be a place where students can learn to think for themselves and work together to solve problems.

In conclusion, Dr. Rogers believes that education is not just about acquiring knowledge, but about developing critical thinking skills and creativity. He feels that schools should be designed to help students reach their full potential, and that each student is unique and deserves an opportunity to be challenged and encouraged to think for themselves.
Four Firms Compete
Four firms are competing for the junior ring contract, according to Anne R. Sarensen, '30, chairman of the ring committee.

Shirtliners of Philadelphia, Warren-Kahoe company, the Elliott company of Ohio, and Wallace-Glou-ster company of Alabama, have submitted samples to the committee.

The committee will choose three of the samples and submit them to Miss Edmonds, who will choose the final sample. Miss Edmonds has chosen the samples from the superior firm.

Herbert E. Bemiser, president of the college, was present at the meet.

ANNOUNCES BIRTH

The college announces the birth of Miss Alice Brown, '31, on November 25,
Mrs. Willard Brown, formerly of Annar-non, 27.

Honor Students Must Take Examinations

According to Decision Of Debating Class

Final examinations will be given to Honor students prior to their senior examinations, according to the account of the debate committee. No honor students will be excused from final examinations.

Kennedy, vice-president of the class, announced that the committee is determined to have students do the work for which they are enrolled, and that no excusedes will be given.

Kennedy further announced that the committee will have a grant of funds to aid in the purchase of supplies.

A night program will be given on March 17, and a play, "The College," will be presented.

Kennedy also announced that there will be a dance at the end of the night.

Four College Coaches Come

Students of small high schools will have the right to "flub, rib, and hoo-hah" as freely as any of their neighboring larger high schools. This is the decision reached by a number of State college professors for the benefit of women of the junior and senior classes enrolled in coaching courses, inaugurated this year by Miss Elmer G. Leffert, chairwoman in physical education.

In most of the small town high schools, the men teachers feel that the district or the principal of a small town high school, will be discouraged. The lack of cooperation for such an activity is easily understood.

No college credit is awarded, however, in these coaching courses. It is claimed that the credits given for work in these courses will merely be for the extra work the person does.

Cheers May Rise When...
AVERAGE CHILDREN DO LESS CHEATING

"They Are More Cooperative," Van Klerk Assents in Syracuse

Children of families of average economic status and standing are not given in cheating, in school and out, than the children of either the higher or lower social groups, Edwin V. Van Klerk, professor of education at the University of Wisconsin, said in a comprehensive report on the character traits of school children.

"As a result of the inquiry, the tests showed that the children in Wisconsin, whether in school or out, nearly as much do as the children in the higher social level groups. They are also more cooperative than others.

100 MAY ATTEND ALL STATE DANCE IN LOUNGE TODAY

Fifty copies are expected to attend the All State Dance in the Lounge of Richardson Hall tonight at 9 o'clock, according to the chairman of the committee in charge.

The event is of the kind that is not determined organization is uncertain, the committee reports.

The dance is the result of the cooperation of several of the organizations of the campus.

G.A.A. Vaudeville Head

Dr. Elias Leiberman, principal of the Teacher's College in New York City, will speak before the Council of Jewish Women, Monday night, January 13, at 8:30 o'clock. The Thomas Jefferson High School has a registration of 360 pupils and 28 teachers.

Dr. Leiberman is the author of "Paved Streets" in which appears the popular poem, "I Am An American." Dr. Leiberman is the author of "Social Survey of the City of Peking," professor of sociology at the University of California, and former professor of sociology at the University of California, addressed a joint meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association Tuesday night in room 150 of Husted hall. He showed moving pictures illustrating the work of the education movement for Chinese children.

There are ten hundred million people in China, of which there are one hundred million children of school age. Mr. and Mrs. Grinnell, of the China Inland Mission, have been working in China for several years, and Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Grinnell, have been associated with them. They are among those who have been working for the education of Chinese children. They have been associated with the work of the education movement for Chinese children.

The Grinnells' education work has been the subject of a number of articles in the Chinese press, and the Chinese press has devoted a large amount of space to the subject of education for Chinese children.
