Peds End Season with LeMoyne; Robinson, Tuttle to Run Last Race

When Albany State's "undisputed heroes meet LeMoyne College and New Paltz State this afternoon, it will be the last appearance of the Peds' top two runners, Tom Robinson and Dennis Tuttle. State's unassailable dual meet record will also be in the balance as LeMoyne will have encountered this season. The peds have now won eight straight dual meets this year, and fifteen straight over a two year span. The last State loss was in November 1962.

Robinson, who hails from Harrison, New York, has been the number one Pedi for three straight years, leading the barometer to a 2:1 record during that tenure.

LeMoyne Offers Big Challenge

In the first of a three-game series, this will be considered the third of the first two matches and the only one in which LeMoyne has a chance at a victory. The Peds have been known to win in a heated game, but are said to have a 2:1 advantage over the LeMoyne alumni in this particular series.

Tuttle, a senior from Albany, has not shown much form in recent meets, and will probably not be a factor in this game. He has been sidelined with an injury for most of the season, but is expected to return to form in the near future.

The Peds defense was usually weak in this game, but was able to hold the LeMoyne offense to a 0:0 score, driving home a 0:0 lead in the fourth quarter.

Randall Affixes Pluralistic Interpretation to Period

Dr. Randall, a professor of historical analysis at Harvard University, today announced the affixing of a pluralistic interpretation to a period in the history of American thought.

The interpretation, developed in a series of lectures at Harvard, was presented to the class today in the Cambridge Classics Department.

The modernist interpretation that is now prevalent, Dr. Randlaid, is in search of an altern-vate approach that would not emphasize the dichotomies of progress and stability.

The interpretation was put forward in the form of a paper to the American Historical Association meeting in Boston last week.

Dr. Randall said that there is a need for a new interpretation in the light of recent developments in the history of thought.

He concluded that the historical period being discussed should not be seen as a single entity, but rather as a complex web of interrelated events and ideas.

Dr. Randall also discussed the role of the individual in the development of thought and the importance of understanding the context in which these thoughts occurred.

The interpretation was well received by the audience and was followed by a series of questions and comments.

Free Tuition Again Possible

The Democratic capture of the State Assembly and Senate should make the control of the State University by the University administration possible within the State University by September, 1964, if the party lives up to its campaign promises and the past. Tution was initiated by the trustees of the University in 1913, and has increased since that time. The issue was an important campaign issue in 1913, and has been an important issue in most of the past elections. The bill would have made the State Assembly and Senate declare it a State policy that all University tuitions are higher than that on the Residence Quad. The bill was introduced at the University by the Senate and sent to the Assembly for action. This is the first time that an amendment to the State Education Law has been made in the Assembly. The Senate and Assembly have been unable to agree on an amendment to the State Education Law, and have been unable to agree on an amendment to the State Education Law.

Soviet Hierarchy Shifts
by A. Roger Law

Half a month has elapsed since the death of Stalin. The impact of his death on the internal politics of the Soviet Union is still very much in flux. The most pressing questions concern the future course of Party and state policy and the selection of the new central leadership.

The changeover in power in the Soviet Union could produce a number of short-term ramifications in domestic and foreign policies. The Party and state apparatus, which is now in the control of the same people who led the post-World War II regime, is expected to respond to Stalin's absence by implementing some of the major reforms that were anticipated during his lifetime. These reforms include greater emphasis on economic development, increased participation of the masses in political and social life, and a more open approach to cultural and intellectual life.

However, the ultimate impact of the new leadership will depend on how it chooses to interpret and implement the legacy of Stalin. The Party and state apparatus, which has long been characterized by a high degree of centralization and rigidity, may find it difficult to adapt to a new set of circumstances. In the longer term, the new leadership will need to address the challenge of maintaining stability and cohesion within the country while also adapting to the changing international environment.

The immediate aftermath of Stalin's death is likely to be marked by a period of uncertainty and flux. The Party and state apparatus will be working to reassert its control and solidify its hold on power. The new leadership will need to work closely with the Party to ensure that its policies are implemented effectively. The Party and state apparatus are likely to be more cautious in their decision-making processes, as they seek to avoid any potential threats to their authority.

The new leadership may also need to address the issue of succession. The Party and state apparatus, which has always been characterized by a high degree of centralization, is likely to be more cautious in its decision-making processes. The new leadership will need to work closely with the Party to ensure that its policies are implemented effectively. NOTICE

Potter Club Shoots for Tenth Straight AMIA Title Tomorrow

Potter Club has won the championship for the second straight year, last year's win was 11 points to 7. Potter lost the crown in 1984 to a team of war veterans called the Vets. APA finished second in the league, with 14 points, and were defeated by Trinity. The league was started in 1983 by Joe Silverman and John Spaulding, and is now run by the Alumni Association.
