New Haven Sweeps Batmen

by Mike Nieman

Well, that's what happens when you have a City College team that has four of the top ten batters in the country. Still, 8-0 wasn't exactly what the seventh-ranked New Haven was hoping for. Unfiltered that seemed to be the theme of the game as the Chargers took a quick 2-0 lead in the first.

Two blunders on the bases in the Chargers' half of the first led to two New Haven infield outs. An eighth-inning safety was the only threat for the Danes.

In the top of the 18th, Joc "Moon" Mullins, manager of the Danes, hit a bases-loaded walk to take a 3-0 lead. Mike Brown added a two-run double to end the game.

Cougars manager Mike Brown said, "The game started to get away from us when we didn't score in the first. Our pride is in our defense, and they didn't have any problems in the first. That was the key to the game." Brown cited the Danes' defense as the reason for the loss, adding, "We had a good game, but we didn't score enough runs."

Paul Nelson led off the game with a single and a run by four. A three-run second and a four-run third iced it.

The second game, which had been delayed by the rain, was called after the first inning was u bases-loaded Texas blast. The Danes scored three runs in the bottom of the inning and iced it.

"That was the big play," said Albany. "I'm not sure how they scored those runs, but we scored three in the bottom of the inning." Albany now stands at 5-9, while New Haven is 7-4-1.

"We had a good game, but we didn't score enough runs," Brown added.

The Albany State varsity lacrosse team dropped their second game of the season, coming off a loss to New Haven.

The Chargers' defense was solid, allowing only one run in the second inning. The Danes scored two runs in the top of the third inning.

"The Chargers' defense was solid," said the Chargers' manager. "But we didn't score enough runs."

"The game started to get away from us when we didn't score in the first," Brown added. "Our defense was solid, but we didn't score enough runs."
WASHINGTON (AP) With some misgivings, Hubert H. Humphrey today decided to enter the vice presidency race, but he would not commit himself to a candidacy.

"I don't want to close the door on it," he said late today. Humphrey's move was ascribed to a personal determination to throw his weight behind the candidacy of the American labor movement, which has yet to name a candidate.

The Democratic field is wide-open. At any rate, there is a divorce in the party between the liberal wing, which generally backs Humphrey, and the conservative wing, whichBacking begins on May 15, passing May 31. They will be present at Cashword at Camp San Carlos. The city will be driven by Brown, whom the students have named a "surplus foreman," along with Brown's four-man crew. Hughes' Will is Delivered

WASHINGTON (AP) Almost three weeks after Hughes passed away, his will was delivered to a Nevada judge today.

The document was handed over to the judge by the executor of Hughes' estate, who said it contained the late senator's wishes regarding his property and personal affairs.

Hughes, a three-term lawmaker from Nevada, died at age 56 on January 7.

The will includes provisions for the care of his wife, who is also a lawmaker.

Hughes was a member of the Democratic Party and served as the Las Vegas mayor from 1970 to 1976.

The Senate voted to pay respects to Hughes during a brief ceremony.

Harvard's Brain Learns About Here On Lungs

WASHINGTON (AP) Harvard's brain has learned to recognize here on lungs, a discovery that could have implications for understanding the brain's ability to learn new skills.

The study, published in the journal Science, found that the brain's ability to learn new skills is related to the ability to recognize here on lungs, a type of sensory input.

The researchers, led by Dr. John Cohen, used a computer program to train a group of 10 people to recognize here on lungs.

The group of 10 people were able to learn the task with an average of 50 trials, compared to the 200 trials required by the group of 10 people who were not trained.

The study was funded by the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation.

Wells Fargo: Settlement Spotts Disputed

WASHINGTON (AP) Wells Fargo has confirmed that it is disputing a settlement of civil claims related to its sale of mortgage-backed securities.

The bank's settlement offer was rejected by a federal judge, who ruled that the settlement was insufficient to compensate the victims of the mortgage fraud.

The bank has appealed the judge's decision, and the case is currently pending in federal court.

The settlement offer was part of a larger settlement agreement reached by Wells Fargo and a group of investors who had been harmed by the mortgage fraud.

The settlement agreement was approved by a federal judge in 2016, but the judge later ruled that the settlement was insufficient to compensate the victims of the mortgage fraud.

Several days were spent negotiating a settlement, and the final settlement was announced in November 2016.

The settlement includes a $25 billion payout to investors, as well as $11.2 billion in reductions to regulatory fees.

The settlement also includes provisions to improve the bank's risk management practices and to enhance its corporate governance.
ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Salamanders and other wildlife in New York state are threatened by pollution from the Midwest, according to a report released Wednesday.

"New York Wildlife Is Threatened by Midwest Pollution" is the title of the report produced by the University of Vermont's Research and Development Center.

The report says that the pollution from the Midwest is carried into New York by winds and is deposited into the lakes and ponds of the state, where it can harm the wildlife. The report cites studies that show that pollution from the Midwest can have a significant impact on the health of the state's wildlife, including salamanders.

"This is a serious problem that needs to be addressed," said report author Dr. John Harvey. "We need to take action to reduce the pollution coming into New York from the Midwest."

Houses of Dignity, Buildings of Pride

There is a world of architecture in Albany that has little to do with Edward Durrell Stone's poured concrete, soaring fountains, or incessant rectangles. There is an architecture of human scale that was designed by men with an optimistic view of the future of the United States. They were inspired by the great historical styles of the past, attempting to assimilate the cultural ambience of ideal periods of history into a nation lacking a long history of its own. The Greeks and Romans were obvious choices; their architectural forms seemed accessible to our own, but the search went on, and these pages contain several examples of American attempts to revive architectural styles of the past.

These buildings express a quiet dignity and a continuing pride. We need only to uncover them, the products of another era.

To the Editor:

Several recent tenure recommendations for professors in English and History, is currently a faculty member of the University at Albany. These developments, particularly in the context of the ongoing debate over tenure, have captured the attention of many educators. While tenure is a topic that often provokes strong feelings, it is also an important policy that has significant implications for the quality of higher education. Tenure provides a form of security for professors, allowing them to pursue their research and teaching without fear of losing their jobs. This security is crucial for the free exchange of ideas and the advancement of knowledge. As such, it is important that tenure policies be carefully considered and adjusted as needed to ensure that they continue to serve their intended purpose.

The Story of Abney: The Last Fairy Tale

by Glenn A. Vold

In a small village nestled in the countryside, there was a little village called Abney. It was a peaceful place where people went about their daily chores with pleasure, going about their daily chores with pleasure.

There was a legend in Abney that a fairy lived in the forest that surrounded the village. Many villagers believed that the fairy protected them and brought good fortune to the village. However, as time passed, the forest began to disappear, and the fairy was slowly forgotten.

One day, a young man named Emmett came to Abney to start a new business. Emmett was known for being a hardworking and enterprising man. He had a dream of creating a business that would bring prosperity to the village. His dream was to build a small factory that would create jobs and provide income for the villagers.

Emmett's dream became a reality when he secured funding from the government to build the factory. The factory was built near the edge of the forest, and Emmett and his workers began to build the machines that would soon provide jobs for the villagers.

As the workers built the factory, they noticed that the forest was slowly disappearing. Emmett realized that he had to choose between his dream and the village that he loved. He knew that if the forest disappeared, the fairy would disappear with it, and the villagers would lose their protector.

Emmett decided to act. He traveled to the government and convinced them to provide funding to save the forest. With the help of the government, the forest was saved, and the fairy returned.

Emmett and the villagers worked together to create a sustainable business that would benefit both the village and the environment. They learned that it was possible to have a successful business while also protecting the land and the creatures that lived on it.

The fairy continued to watch over Abney, ensuring that the village remained peaceful and prosperous. And the villagers, grateful for their protector, always remembered the legend of the Last Fairy Tale.
