Delusions

by Charles Sinibaldi

I don’t know where I am, I don’t know why I am, I don’t know what I am. I’m alone and I did not choose to be here. I’m not sure how it happened, but it seems like I am stuck in a place that isn’t mine. I’m trapped and I don’t know how to get out.

Maybe it’s what life is about, nobody teaches it, nobody talks about it. I’m not sure if I want to believe the delusion. But I know that it is true. I realize the delusions even more.

You can’t do anything about it, the only thing you can do is accept it. And I am ready to accept it.

I drift from one learning time to the next. I try to remember everything, but I forget so easily. I try to learn, but I forget. I feel like I am learning, but I am not.

I have shown that I have learned, during my time, that there is no answer, no thing, no people, no reason for existence. I am empty, I am dead, I am inside when I realize that. I feel like I am learning, but I am not.

I have shown that I have learned, during my time, that there is no answer, no thing, no people, no reason for existence. I am empty, I am dead, I am inside when I realize that. I feel like I am learning, but I am not.

The arc rise, the rise of the liquid life returns. Makes me, it makes me, it makes me, it makes me, it makes me.

I am a new person at the point of break. I am a new person at the point of break.

Phase II of Nixon's Non-Plan

Perhaps the most interesting thing about Richard Nixon's speech last night is what he didn't say. And he didn't say nothing. His statement was not as much a lei to our world as an attempt, a particularly tenuous gesture of peace.

Answered from the "just-kidding" tone (clearly coined from around the nation), the major part of the speech dealt with matters for the "jovial-humor" audience instead of any other audience.

In peace, Shalom

Upsetting the Monopoly

A more sensible way to "knock the competition" off is to do it. The competition would ensue, and save a fortune. It doesn't interest anyone that the man who put most of the national press on its feet by publishing a "Whipping-Boy, John Connally, meets the press. These include a "we could change" attitude to peace negotiations that the Press Committee's policy will be the same.

Remember!

To the Editor:

I have just learned that the Social Studies department of this university is planning to drop the Social Studies Education major program as of next semester. This will affect any freshmen or sophomores currently enrolled in this program and will render those students unemployable. I urge the President to reconsider this drastic step, that at least a similar program be continued.

Colonial Parking

A Resident in "Paine"

To the Editor:

Regarding last week's loiter about the inadequacies of Colonial Quad's vacant lot, I have experienced the hazards of parking legally. Towing and ticket charges seem a small inconvenience in comparison to the damage that my car was further damaged. How can advertisers have a choice of newsprint and publisher as long as we tolerate this practice?

To the Editor:

Colombian finance is still being practiced against broad sheets. The Press is sure to the problem comes, from an being powered every day. This peer thing happens! (The Saudis now pay for the "public services" from the oil they have discovered in the area.) They are not going to let it go on any longer. This is the feeling we are experiencing.

The first amendment to the Constitution prohibits the government from enacting laws which would abridge freedom of speech. This is the feeling we are experiencing.

The Press Committee's policy will be the same.

Let's get rid of Smokey Bear

Did he have to go back and be an old bear again? No, we don't have to sit around feeling sorry for the forest man.

Mr. Smokey Bear has been causing problems for the forest man for years. He has been causing problems for the forest man for years. He has been causing problems for the forest man for years.

But now, we can do something about it. We can put our heads together and come up with a solution.

We can create a new campaign that will educate people about the importance of protecting our forests.

Our campaign will include a series of posters, billboards, and TV commercials that will remind people of the dangers that Smokey Bear poses to our forests.

We will also conduct workshops and seminars that will teach people how to properly care for their property and protect it from wildfires.

Together, we can make a difference. Let's put an end to Smokey Bear's reign of terror for good.

Please sign this petition and help us make a difference.

To Vote or Not to Vote - That Was the Question

Wants to Vote In Hometown

Brian Donofrio, 19, of South Buffalo, has registered to vote and has been thinking about whether he should vote here because he would want to register in New York State if he ever moved there. "I'm not sure if I would vote because I mean in a long time it won't matter to me," he added. "It's just one of those things that I don't really think about."

Registered Democratic

Brian Donofrio, a native of the South Buffalo area who now lives in the city of Albany, has registered to vote. He feels that students should be able to vote in Albany because it's the same county. "It's important to have a say in what's going on around you," he said. "I think it's a good idea to have young people registered to vote." He also feels that the newly registered youth would have stronger ties with the campus had they registered here.

Fears Students May Fall Into Rut

Ilene Klinghoffer, nineteen and a senior at SUNYA, has registered to vote and has been thinking about whether she should vote. "I don't know what I would do with my vote," she said. "I feel like if I did vote, it wouldn't make any difference."

New Sounds Close Saratoga Season

When the Saratoga MC Thursday evening, closing out the No. 1 program in the sequence of the seasonal “Music at the P.A.C.” series in the Performing Arts Center, the audience was to the threshold of the entrance. In that respect it will go down as one of the most memorable and best received concerts of the season. Of that muchskillful stage-hand that thing at hand. They are, then, as"made," as much as the concert is. The sound was enriched of early Stravinsky ballets such as Stravinsky’s “Petrouchka” and

Happiness Is A Nude Dorm

by Steve Dickinson

As an 18-year-old, the idea of a 3 to 4 year experiment in cohabitation and procreation does not seem appealing. Many students come to college planning along these same lines because they want to get married and start a family. However, it is not all students who want to pursue this line of work. Some students may want to continue their education or pursue other interests.

We should remember that the 18-year-olds must be able to make their own decisions about their lives. It is not fair to force them to marry if they do not want to.

We should also consider that the financial burden of marriage and parenthood can be overwhelming. It is important to have a good financial plan before entering into such a commitment.

I feel that students should be allowed to make their own decisions about their lives and not be forced into marriage or parenthood.

Carnegie Commission Report

What Does College Do to You?

By Don McLeod

A college education isn’t worth its weight in dollars or in terms of prestige, a new report claims, but it definitely makes a difference in the world. College graduates do make more money, and they are more likely to vote and to participate Generally in community activities. They also tend to have more open-minded and tolerant attitudes, to be more concerned with aesthetic and cultural values, and to have more integrated, rational and consistent political philosophies. The report concludes that as a general rule “why year of higher education tends to yield greater returns in terms of increased earning power, increased job satisfaction, increased political awareness and participation, increased interest in and readiness to undertake to answer questions related to the social climate at the time of their education.”

The report, “A Degree and What Else? The Correlates and Consequences of a College Education,” will be published by McGraw-Hill later this month.

In its report, the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education has predicted that in American colleges will have a new dimension of community activity. The college experience opens more than do not to make students more experienced and well-read, has cross-trained with students’ planning skills, has increased with academic and social awareness, and has expanded with an ability to express their emotions. The report was issued by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, which is a study of the Carnegie Commission on High Education. Who’s more, says a study for the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, that it is making higher education more liberal. They read more, know more, vote more and take a more relativistic and less moralistic, but more integrated, rational and consistent political philosophies. The report adds, “they become less authoritarian although this may be a problem later in the social climate at the time of their education. They become more aware of themselves and of interpersonal relationships and a greater readiness to express their emotions.”

Noting changes in the labor market, the report says: “More likely to vote and to participate generally in community activities. More informed about community, national, and world affairs. More likely to be Republicans, although their political philosophies are definitely liberal. They read more, know more, vote more and take a more relativistic and less moralistic, but more integrated, rational and consistent political philosophies.
