The Critic Debates

By Virginia S. Requa

The last time I walked down the Commons, I found myself completely alone in the middle of its big, clean aisles. The defense know the defendant, Mr. Roger Weir, president of the football team. The prosecution knows the defendant. His name is Mr. Roger Weir, president of the football team. He was arrested for driving without a license.

The defense attorney is Mr. Weir's father, Mr. Roger Weir Sr. Mr. Weir Sr. is a wealthy lawyer who has represented many famous clients. He is known for his aggressive tactics in the courtroom.

The prosecution attorney is Mr. John Doe, a young and ambitious lawyer who has just started his career. He is determined to prove the defendant's guilt.

The case is being heard by Judge Mary Brown, a respected judge who has presided over many high-profile cases. Judge Brown is known for her fair and unbiased approach to justice.

The judge is asking the prosecution to present its case first.

Prosecution: Mr. Weir, you were driving without a license. You were caught by a police officer who witnessed you drive over the speed limit and fail to stop when asked to do so.

Defense: We deny the charges. My client, Mr. Weir, has never driven without a license in his entire life. He was only speeding as a result of a mechanical failure with his car.

The prosecution calls its first witness, Officer Smith, who was present when Mr. Weir was stopped.

Officer Smith: Yes, your honor. I saw Mr. Weir driving at a very high speed and failing to stop when I pulled him over.

The defense calls its witness, Mr. John Doe, who is an expert in mechanical failures.

Mr. John Doe: I examined Mr. Weir's car after the incident and found that the ignition had malfunctioned, causing the car to lose power. This explains why Mr. Weir was unable to stop.

The prosecution rests.

The defense rests.

The judge deliberates and returns with a verdict.

The judge signs the verdict, and the case is dismissed.

The courtroom erupts in applause as the defendant walks out, smiling and relieved.

The defendant's attorney, Mr. Weir Sr., rises from his seat and shakes hands with his client. The prosecution attorney, Mr. John Doe, looks disappointed and dejected.

The case is concluded.

State Comes To Aid Of Destitute Greece
Although last Friday officially ended the Old Clothes Drive, students continued handing in coats and other articles of clothing as long as the box remained in the lower hall of Draper. Gemma Merhoff, A.S. President of Glee Club, the group sponsoring the drive, announced that the campaign was successful.

John Niles*

John Niles feels that the United States has failed to make use of its folk music to build up a strong national spirit as Germany, Italy, Russia, and England are doing now. Because America does not realize the importance of its own folk songs, Niles feels it is his job to help write them down and keep them alive so that the ballads will not be lost to people of future centuries.
