SUNYA General Studies Program Draws Older Crowd

by John Scott

The older student who has taken night courses at SUNYA wonders why so many people are doing in a class full of infants. College age students who come from a part-time program at SUNYA and bear the burden of a difficult full time job

General Studies program and bears the burden of a difficult full time job. He has been with General Studies for almost 15 years and speaks with certain pride about the program.

"The older student is a very important segment of the program, he explained, pointing out that the average age of a student in this program is about 35 with average age of about 20 when he took his first course.

Aging for the Problem

Scott indicated that even though the age gap between the younger and older students is smaller, their problems are quite different. For everything that seems easier in college, the older student has to do the homework and get their jobs done. He mentioned how one student was on a summer course, had to have a job and take care of his family.

With all the older students also finding themselves in a world of 20-something out of high school, they develop an academic and social sense of themselves. Scott explained: "Everyone in college is something to be expected. I think we do, as a whole, what we are called to do very well."

Another key feature of General Studies students is their distinctive demographic profile, which has an older age demographic. Scott also noted: "Everyone in college is something to be expected. I think we do, as a whole, what we are called to do very well."

The Ivy League schools leaned toward the other extreme of the national results, which at least in part was a reflection of the way the students had been raised.

The following are the results of a survey conducted among students at Ivy League schools. The survey found that 65% of the Ivy League students favored the federalization of depression, while 85% of the Ivy League students favored it. However, 15% of the OCC students favored it.

OCC students were asked about their views on the campaign to federalize depression. The OCC students favored the campaign over the Ivy League students by 80% to 20%. The survey also found that 75% of the OCC students favored the campaign over the Ivy League students by 60% to 40%.

The results of the survey indicated that the OCC students were more likely to support federalization of depression than the Ivy League students. This is consistent with the well-known fact that Ivy League students tend to be more conservative than OCC students.

Glistening eyes flash the face.
Make a point and leave no trace.
 Bodies fall
Strangers call
Darkness believes.

A candle on the witch’s chin
Others armed—and not by men
Wanted time
Panicked
Harm is Sacred.

Twisted figures dance with pillars
Some are crying, some are killing.
Paranoid switch,
Springs itch
Freedom lost and found.

Pagues tell of untold stories
Of changing lives, of older glasses
Cloth unravel

Now bico for Halloween.

Lines on Wine

A Single Swallow

by R. Corbin Houchen

The column continues our discussion of their tasting techniques with an actual taste of the wine.

After giving your nose a few moments to recover from the smell of aromatic (as the nose is sometimes carried along), take enough time to note the overall impression the wine imparts upon you. Don’t swallow it yet.

First roll the wine around to make sure it touches all parts of your tongue, and hold the wine an inch or so in front of your mouth. Take enough time to properly imprint the wine on your palate, open your lips very slightly in a somewhat puckered shape and, intermittently so the air passes through the wine, breathe through your nose. Pay close attention to the sensations that occur after the wine has been in your mouth. A wine too low in body tastes watery, and you will very shortly discover the vinous quality appropriate to the occasion. A纪念碑 has been observed in time a 10-year-old wine. The wine is too sharp, like unsweetened lemon juice.

Common Goals

To the Editor:

The following list presents several options, each of which is considered important in the development of a successful and thriving Jewish student community. These options include:

1. Jewish Student Community: Establishing a Jewish Student Community within the University setting will provide a sense of belonging and identity for Jewish students. It will also enable them to explore their cultural heritage and traditions.

2. Jewish Student Organizations: Supporting Jewish student organizations, such as fraternities and sororities, can help to foster a sense of community and belonging.

3. Jewish Student Activism: Encouraging Jewish student activism can help to address issues of concern to the Jewish community and promote social justice.

4. Jewish Student Support Services: Providing support services, such as counseling and prayer services, can help to address the unique needs of Jewish students.

5. Jewish Student Resources: Ensuring that Jewish students have access to resources, such as libraries and cultural centers, can help to support their education and cultural development.

6. Jewish Student Scholarships: Offering scholarships to Jewish students can help to support their academic pursuits.

7. Jewish Student Community Events: Organizing community events, such as cultural festivals and lectures, can help to foster a sense of community and engage the Jewish student population.

8. Jewish Student Leadership: Encouraging Jewish students to take leadership roles within the University can help to promote their development and leadership skills.

9. Jewish Student Representation: Ensuring that Jewish students have representation within the University governance can help to address their concerns and promote their interests.

10. Jewish Student Spirituality: Fostering a spirit of spirituality can help to provide a sense of meaning and purpose to Jewish students.

Together, these options can help to create a vibrant and supportive Jewish student community within the University setting.

"Students willingly have low off campus," says Vice President for Management and Planning John Stanley, and with the SUNY-wide mandate on enrollment for next year, there would be no additional new-campus housing for expected increases in enrollment.

The administration appears to be cautious in its approach. If the enrollment projections are accurate, there is a need to expand the housing capacity of the campus. The administration is also concerned about the financial implications of any new housing developments.

editorial / comment

SUNY's administration projects an increase of approximately 1000 student officers between now and 1980, assuming that funding is received. It is essential that any additional new-campus housing be completed by June 1980, as the SUNY-wide mandate on enrollment for the next year projects an additional 1000 student officers.

"I once again, warmly extend an invitation to the State University of NY at Albany," Zbigniew Dembowski, Minister Consul General, said Saturday before the Polish Students' Organization to the "State University of NY at Albany." They applauded this idea of linking our two countries. I am very confident we will be able to beat Planterburg and not only win, but we will impressively. The most exciting plays better than yesterday."

Sauer's continued, "and questioned the legitimacy of the expenditure. Opponents of the bill argued that the money was spent only on a portion of the gym because the team would only use it for practice. I voiced concerns that the decision not to pursue the Polish Invitation to our country through this Winter was a missed opportunity."

NCAA Tournament Selections Committee Awaits Albany-Brockport And Binghamton-Bartowk Games

by Nathan Tatum

The Albany State University soccer team faces off against the University of New York at Albany on Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the opening round of the NCAA Tournament. The game will be held at UAlbany's FieldTurf, with both teams vying for a spot in the Sweet 16.

Albany State has compiled a 5-3-1 record this season, having defeated Adelphi, Cortland, and Union and falling to Hartwick, Union, and Brockport. They are currently ranked 20th in the nation and will be looking to make a statement against the 12th-ranked Golden Eagles.

Brockport, on the other hand, has a 7-5-1 record and is ranked 12th in the nation. They have defeated Adelphi, Cortland, and Union and fallen to Hartwick, Union, and Brockport. The Golden Eagles will be looking to continue their winning streak against the Golden Bears.

The game will be a battle of two strong teams, with both having a good chance of advancing to the next round. It will be a hard-fought game, and fans can expect an exciting match as the winner is determined. Good luck to both teams!
