A QUESTION

When twenty-two was a fresh-\mn class, JoaBSO begins June second; by the end of the first week very much had passed that a fresh-\mn class, JoaBSO begins June second; by the end of the first week very much had passed that a freshman could learn from the college. It seems that a student never learns to be a young man until he is an old man. I have been a student for many years and have not yet learned to be a young man. The reason is that I have not had enough time to learn.

A LIFE OF ABBIE A.

Abbie Augusta is a junior; yet no one is really aware of the fact. The reason for this is that Abbie came to college with one desire, "to go through" college, and that is precisely what she is doing. Just as she might walk through a park, unchanged by the passing years. When she was a freshman she was afraid to go off for fear of spoiling her cream on her second last, or being obliged to get acquainted with someone she never knew existed. She never went to a class meeting, or the head desk, and never spoke to an upper classman and was never seen alone with one but herself. And all this time the other Co's were having the time of their lives, making friends, talking in the libraries and getting the whole student body into their corners. So Abbie Augusta kept right on "going through" college, with only a few people, such as registrars and professors, knowing she existed. As a student, even the professors regard her as a mere name on a class card. To end her college career will be listed in the Pdude the title a "sinner." Could any college be more pitiable than this? No, never.

When does Abbie A's in the last five years, because there are a lot of you right here. Wake up, start making friends, no matter what class you are in; do something for March 17th. Spring is in the air, and you begin to feel the weight of your education. Don't just "go through," but dive into college life. Make splashes, because here is the place to be seen and heard! 24.

ED SAYS.

Get, London, get! Perhaps you have been a wreck when I came here, but I sure am reckless now. Yes, they've got me off the football team. I recently told my coach that I couldn't get there some day. And I can't, because they've put me in college in Collidge. Rather don't have a college, because, heaven help us! A cross me to London, oh London! They can't keep a good man down, can they? There's one that can't be-just by Jimminy.

Says, London, dey tell me what to happen to me and I was up on the stairs right in lack of a mill pair of liars. All of my friends, one of them dropped her handkerchief. I don't suppose you're a known what to do. I was a person like that, wouldn't you, London. I didn't think so. But I didn't buy Fanshine's "What to do in Earlie and Pussies and at Parades" for nothing. No, sirree, bob. I just learned more about life and got for it. You'd better hear the compliment she paid me.

"Ice, he looks as if he had a strong back," she says aloud to her friend. Then she said something under her breath. That doesn't seem to be quite right. All I could hear was "sweep about." But she was telling her girl friend that she thought I must have a strong mind, too, oh London. It kind of called for a good feel to hear some one himself talk about himself, to be once in a while, a London. You bet.

Then, "You saved my life," she says kindly thoughtful.

I knew she was going to say that. Leave it to me, London. I can tell when they're thinking, can't I, London? You bet. So's I was ready for her. "I'm not, I'm a mitch, that's all," she says, "I just had a strong back," she says. "That stuff may be a little different," says London, "But I'll tell you, I'm not a mitch, I'm full of devil. I'll just say what I have to say, I'll say it in the all time, I can. Louise, you're right, I can't just go on for it in a while. And, would you believe me, here's what she slings back at me. "Where was you when that was pulled off first," she says. "You know what's going on." Then, "You saved my life," she adds. "Give me a nickel, Hints all its something. Then, "You saved my life," she says. "I'll say so. Besides you can't keep it in all the time, can I, Louise? You're right. I can't. I just got to get it out in a while. And, would you believe me, here's what she says. "I know where you were. You weren't," she says. "She says, sarcastic. "I know where you were. You weren't," she says.

ROUND THE COLLEGE

Grace Turpen, '21, spent the week-end at 186 Western avenue. She is teaching at Westport, N. Y., and is to remain in Connecticut for several days at her home.

Elaine Vinson, '21, was the guest of Elinor Buell, '23, Saturday night.

Psi Gamma welcomes the following into full membership: Emma DeLorm, '23; May Woods, '23, Elizabeth Strong, '24.

Cecile Coughlin, '28, spent the week-end at the Psi Gamma house. Elizabeth Nade, '24, attended the Princeton-Georgetown game at Princeton, Saturday.

On Wednesday, October 12, Miss Server, supervisor of home economics in Schenectady, visited the home economics department and the college cafeteria with a class in home economics from New York High School. The students were accompanied by their state supervisor who studied the management of the cafeteria, and were interested in seeking fruitful lunch competitors of the managed price.

 Gamma Kappa Phi enjoyed an informal house party on Saturday evening.

Katherine Collier, who is teaching home economics in Illinois, is spending the week-end at a home of her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cummings, '23, was called home by their four sons and daughter, Victoria and Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Archer was Monica Cardiff, '19, a student "cut" in order to go. Particular invitation has been extended to as many of the sessions of the week-end as possible to vote in the closing meeting.

The students are requested to come prepared to finish voting in the closing meeting which has been posted on the bulletin board.

ORGANIZATIONS

Music Club.

The Music Club will meet Friday, October 14, in room II at 4:30. There will be a program and very interesting business. All members are requested to attend.

French Club.

In connection with its first meeting elected Elise Riondard, president; Ruth Henneman, vice-president; and Dorothy Leliicke, treasurer. This year the club is going "over the top" in furnishing good comes for the benefit, and lively meetings for the members, who are to include all students (male and female) who have had two years or more of college French. Every club will have an abundance of pep and loyalty and a financial status of 25 cents per member to be given as dues. All new members will be initiated in order that they may be given to a greater extent the advantages of the club. Prospects please sign up on the bulletin board Wednesday, October 10.

Press Club.

The original aims and work of the Press Club were outlined by Professor Day, Tuesday, October 1, at 4:00, in the gymnasium if you decide to come. We can't speak for him, but here's a hint—if he's a good friend of yours perhaps he will give you the idea of his bono for the year.

There is a misstatement which has been donated to the college orchestra by a member of the Classics department. A special invitation is extended to any volunteer who may wish to take these opportunities. Please notify our editors or some other member of the orchestra.

Although the orchestra is increasingly large, there is still room for you on the Chamber platform, where we practice. We are sure that Mr., Merritt, '25, "Chairman," will not object to "carting up" a dozen more chairs from the gymnastics if you decide to come.

The present orchestra members are: Linda Castleberry, '23; Grace Aromonite, '23; Beatrice Crittlicher, '24; Mr. Merritt, '25; Elise Riondard, '22; Mrs. Corbin, '22; Eleanor Thomas, '24; Marion Van Hoven, '23; Augusta Conley, '23; Allenie White, '22; Ethel Cummings, '23; Lela Cansecker, '22; Alois Carper, '22; Dorothy Koster, '22; Ruth Ellis, '25; Florence Stanbro, '21; Elinee Riese, '22; Gladys Domm, '22; Dorothy Wemits; Berta Randell, '22; Florence Stanbro, '21; Florence Stanbro, '20; Helen Van Ness, '20, as a house girl.

The orchestra is interested in devoting their talent and time to the benefit of the college. They are cordially invited to attend.

springs, curious mud volcanoes and wonderful geysers. These there were, but the greater part of it is a primeval pine forest, covering the slopes of the Great Divide. In it is an exquisite lake in a setting of snow-capped mountains and the Grand Canyon, tinted in all varieties of blue, orange and red, into whose depths drops a stream of clear arapaima. It has also Mt. Washburn, upon whose sides are the gayest flower gardens I have ever seen. Only a few spots were barren, and here are the deliciously famous green and blue hot pools and geysers. The rainbow effects on the borders of these were extremely interesting to the botanists of the party, because they are due to red pigmented algae, living plants, which have acquired the characteristic of colored temperature just under the boiling point. We were fortunate in seeing the Giant, the largest of the geysers, erupt, as he only pours forth his mighty stream of boiling water every 14 days. Even with his tremendous volume, however, could not be compared in sheer beauty to Old Faithful whose graceful stream rises 150 feet into the air every 60 or 70 minutes, true to his name.
