few thousand other people, others who are still in school, or anyone else.

So if you do

But who's to say that we can't use technology in a way that's useful and practical? For example, in our Applied Research

Laboratory, the latest systems of their kind, and applied research in the areas of electro-optics, information systems, and computer systems. We think we have a product for you. And if you think we have

AMIA Causes Controversy Doody Involved

The AMIA basketball team is once more in the process of making plans with the stress of the basketball season and the approach of winter. The team is currently in a heated discussion over the topic of who will be the starting quarterback for the upcoming game against Union College in Cape Town.

According to Coach Butterfield, the decision will be based on merit and potential for success. "We need some new blood on the team," he said. "Doody has shown great promise in practice and we believe he has the potential to lead us to victory." However, Captain Brown argues that Doody is not yet ready for the high-pressure environment of a varsity game.

"I think it's important to have a experienced leader on the team," he said. "Right now, we need someone who can handle the pressure and make wise decisions under the heat of the game." The team is currently in the process of deciding who will start the game against Union College on Saturday, January 21st.

Up Against the Wall

The Stony Brook University hockey team has been struggling this season and is currently in last place in the Atlantic Hockey Conference. The team has been plagued by injuries and poor performance, and has not won a game in over a month.

Coach Johnson has been working hard to turn things around, but so far it has not been enough. "We need to improve our defense and start playing as a team," he said. "We're missing some key players, but I believe we can still turn this around." The team will be playing against the University of Connecticut this weekend in what is shaping up to be a crucial game for their season.
