Audi Leads Dane Romp Over New Paltz

by Dennis Maglachy

The Albany men's basketball team continued its hot streak as they defeated New Paltz Wednesday night, 98-68.

Significant was the way the Danes turned the game around in the second half, as they went on a 25-4 run led by Dave Thomson to cut the halftime lead of 33-29 to 7-6. This included two three-pointers and a pair of free throws. The Danes also outrebounded New Paltz 30-20 in the second half.

The Danes were led by Ed Johnson, who had 21 points. He was 8-for-12 from the field and 5-for-7 from the free-throw line. Also scoring in double figures were Carmelo Verdejo (17 points) and Dave Thomson (15 points).

New Paltz was led by Mike Schilling with 18 points. He was 7-for-15 from the field and 2-for-3 from the free-throw line.

The game began on a dubious note for the Danes, as they were outscored 17-4 in the first six minutes. However, Albany started to find its rhythm, and by the end of the first half, the Danes had taken a 48-33 lead. They shot 57% from the field in the first half, including six three-pointers.

In the second half, the Danes continued to dominate, outscoring New Paltz 50-35. The Danes led by as many as 35 points in the second half and ended up winning the game 98-68.

Audi, playing in his first varsity game, scored 34 points, 25 of which came on three-pointers. He was 10-for-12 from the field and 5-for-5 from the free-throw line.

The Danes are now 3-0 on the season, while New Paltz is 2-1. The Danes will next face New Hampshire on Saturday at 2:00 p.m.

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, Section 438 (as amended)—also known as the " Buckley Amendment"—has been revised substantially as a result of the joint efforts of Senator Buckley and Rep. Claire caused by the original version which was signed into law in August, 1974, with an Implementation date of November 1974. The Buckley-Fuller revision was accepted by the Senate and House in mid-December and was signed into law on December 31, 1974, by President Ford. Upon the signing of the new law (Pub. L. 93-380) the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) published proposed regulations (pertaining to the Privacy Act) in the FEDERAL REGISTER (Volume 40, Number 3, January 6, 1975). The HEW proposed regulations arrived on our campus on January 6, 1975 and several University staff members have worked toward immediate revision of campus policies and procedures in order to comply with the new law. The creation of the press for Student Affairs (Ab 129), working with the Student Affairs Office, has been serving the role of coordinating changes in both policy and procedure on our campus. Our (interim) new policies and procedures are already functional. The statements which follow are not intended to be the final version of our new policies and procedures pertaining to the Privacy Act. They are presented as a means of communicating with students and others regarding new rights of access to records, the right to challenge the content of records, and increased rights to the control of education records.

Please accept my best wishes as you begin the new semester; the interim policies and procedures are summarized below.

1. The primary education record is maintained by the Office of the Registrar. Access to your student record is available by contacting Administration Building, Room 63, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday - Friday. Mr. Richard Farrell (Assistant to the Registrar for Records) has the responsibility in this area.

2. There are other records to which you may have access under provisions of the law. We are compiling a complete list of all education records maintained, where kept, and whether access is consistent with provisions of the law.

3. Each student has the right to challenge the content of his/her education records, in order to insure that the records are not inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of privacy or other rights of students.

4. Each student has the opportunity to inspect and challenge the content of his/her education records in order to ensure that the records are not inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise inappropriate data.

5. Each student has the opportunity to insert into such records a written explanation respecting the content.

6. The initial challenge to the content of an education record is to be made by the student to the person responsible for the office which maintains that record. Every effort should be made to resolve the issues raised, and the response need be written in resolution of the question in writing.

Suspended Students
To Now Hear Charges

by the Associated Press

Several students suspended from public schools for as long as 10 days have the right to a notice of trial and a public hearing in an opportunity to be heard. The Supreme Court of the United States, in a decision handed down Tuesday, held that "the right to a public hearing is a component of "due process" of the Fourteenth Amendment." The court said that generally a public hearing is required for removal of a student. "We do not believe that school authorities must be totally free from notice and a hearing to comply with the Fourteenth Amendment," Justice Byron R. White said for the court in a 5-3 majority.

Several of the students whose cases were before the court have appealed to the Supreme Court. The court's decision covers public schools in all 50 states, and it is likely to affect the way in which public schools handle student discipline.

The court's decision was based on a case in which a student was suspended from school for making a speech against school authorities. The student, who had been suspended for three days, was allowed to return to school after a public hearing. The court said that the public hearing was a component of "due process," and that it was required by the Fourteenth Amendment.

The court's decision is likely to have a significant impact on the way in which public schools handle student discipline. The court said that "the right to a public hearing is a component of "due process" of the Fourteenth Amendment," and that it is required by the court in all 50 states.

The Impoverished State

The only way to describe the outlook for New York is bleak. Governor Mario M. Cuomo’s request for a $21.6 billion state budget for the fiscal year that began last month was just the latest in a series of dire warnings about the state’s fiscal position. The state’s economy is in a deep recession, with unemployment rates near 10 percent and the state’s credit rating downgraded to near default by Standard & Poor’s. The state faces a $10 billion deficit this year, and a greater one next year.

Cuomo has warned all New Yorkers that they should expect higher taxes, or local assistance, local property tax rates are expected to soar. Leading the list of deficit this year, and a greater one next year. The squeeze on the localities will probably be more than they can bear. New York City, deficient for yet another year, faces a deficit of $21.5 billion this year, and a greater one next year.

The Legislature wants to pass a budget bill that would cause the property tax bill to rise to nearly a third of the state’s budget. The budget bill includes $10 billion in increased property taxes, which would be paid by the localities.

The Legislature will be in little use in the months ahead, not only because the Senate’s Republican-controlled and is chaired by a female Democrat, Lieutenant Governor. The political upheavals that will dominate the Legislature’s session will leave little time for tackling the pressing issues of our time.

Cuomo seems to be in a hurry to get an election on the nation’s economy, assuming that when the country goes next, New York will go along with it.

The Legislature will cease to exist in the long run, and in the meantime, Albany and Washington will be playing a zero-sum game where Ford tries to eliminate the nation’s deficit, which Albany tries to pass on to us.

The message from New York is clear: it will be a matter of education and dig it in for the long haul. It is a demand on a standing source of revenue and a diminishing source of spending. We have to play the hands and hopes don’t make it for Washington.

In Washington:

WASHING TON - A recent study has found that more than 75 percent of students who default on their student loans are unable to identify the source of their problems. The study, conducted by the Government Accountability Office, found that the main reason students default on their loans is because they do not understand the terms of their loans. Students who default on their loans are at risk of losing their federal student loans.

The study also found that defaults for students who default on their loans are highest among those who have completed less than 12 credits in college. Federal officials are already suggesting higher interest rates and other measures to reduce the default rate.

The study calls for robust repayment programs that are designed to ensure that students who default on their loans do not lose access to federal aid.

The government has taken steps to address the issue of student loan default, including the implementation of the Public Service Loan Forgiveness Program, which allows borrowers who work in public service to have their student loans forgiven after 10 years of service.

The government also has announced plans to increase access to federal aid by expanding the Pell Grant program and increasing the number of students who receive federal aid.

Tricks and Trumps

by Henry Jacobson

On the surface, the question might seem trivial, however, there is a very logical reason for refusing the finesse and playing the King. Looking at all five hands we can see that correct is in the hands.

That is, if East can win the lead, he will walk a club through, if he is on his own, and you and your partner will suffer agonizing defeat. (Opening, only because the hand on the right should deal, and not to, if you want to see the King, you should not play from dummy on the first round, there are two cards, the Ace and King in dummy. There are two clubs, the Ace and King in dummy. Therefore, instead of forcing the King, you force the Ace and the King.)

No one working on or for the Albany Student Press is eligible to win.

One solution per person will be accepted.

The major focus is the depiction of Janus, the god of beginnings and endings. The text discusses his role in Roman mythology, particularly his association with the start of the new year and his function as a god of doors and transitions. Janus is described as having a double-faced head, looking both forward and backward, symbolizing the dual nature of time and fate. The text also touches on Janus's other roles, such as the god of the door, the god of the crossroads, and his depiction in art and literature. It highlights how Janus's attributes reflect the complexities of human life, encompassing both good and evil, new beginnings and endings.

In conclusion, Janus serves as a potent symbol of change and transition, embodying the potential for both positive and negative outcomes. His presence in Roman society was significant, reflecting the people's desire to balance order and chaos, continuity and change. The dual-faced nature of Janus underscores the idea that life is characterized by both beginnings and endings, and that understanding these processes is crucial for navigating the complexities of existence.

Hoosters Find Shaky Road; Drop Three

Albany State basketball team traveled to familiar surroundings for the 6-4 Danes. The Danes hadn’t played a home game since December 16, when they knocked off Buffalo 91-63.

It seemed highly likely that the home crowd would react to this contest with an all-out enthusiasm. Instead, however, the Danes Falcons faltered and were defeated by the 6-4 Danes.

Bailey, the Danes’ leading scorer, was held on Saturday, January 24, at Capital District Tournament held in the last eight attempts. Coach Sauers wanted his team to concentrate on defense. He was concerned that the Danes were not balancing their offense by slowing down and working for their baskets. The team was flying by, getting three and one points at the half before coming back to pass the ball into the Fredonia zone. The Danes were unable to pressure the ball into action.

Steve Pass’ 17 points led all scorers as the Pups were getting off to a strong start. Williams dominated the offense by slowing down and working for their baskets. The team was flying by, getting three and one points at the half before coming back to pass the ball into the Fredonia zone. The Danes were unable to pressure the ball into action.

The Pups are now sporting a 6-1 slate and are in the running for their second straight title. They are in the running for their second straight title.

Pups Outclass Williams

Averaging only one loss of the 11 games against R.P. in the semester, the Albany center is the leading scorer in the nation. The Danes defense has been improved to the point where the Danes are now balancing their defense. Doc Sauers knew that Doc Sauers knew that the Danes have been a rebuilding season. The team was flying by, getting three and one points at the half before coming back to pass the ball into the Fredonia zone. The Danes were unable to pressure the ball into action.

The only reason that the Danes were on the floor was the high shooting percentage. Williams dominated the offense by slowing down and working for their baskets. The team was flying by, getting three and one points at the half before coming back to pass the ball into the Fredonia zone. The Danes were unable to pressure the ball into action.

The Danes host Southern Connecticut in the next contest. The season is in full swing for the Pups. They have been in good offensive form in recent games.

The Hoosiers, however, have been in good defensive form in recent games. The team was flying by, getting three and one points at the half before coming back to pass the ball into the Fredonia zone. The Danes were unable to pressure the ball into action.
