Dane pitchers bombarded by Dutchmen, 18-6

By Keith Marler

The Albany State baseball team, which has been smoking up a storm on the diamond this spring, fell flat on its face yesterday afternoon as the Dutchmen of Cortland played a mean game. Albany State fell before the Dutchmen, 18-6, after trailing by one run at the end of the first inning. Albany State was led by Rick Trizano, who had 16 hits in the game and scored two runs. Albany State's pitcher, Mike Scudder, was also effective, giving up only one run on three hits. The Dutchmen scored four runs on no hits in the fourth inning.

Stickmen stage fourth quarter rally to top Siena

By Mark Ward

The Albany State baseball team rolled to a 12-9 victory over Division I Siena yesterday afternoon on University Field. The Dutchmen have been on a roll lately, scoring twice in each of the last three games. In their last game, Albany State scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat Siena, 12-9.

Premier writer said 'I'm happy to be here'

By Rick Swanson

Distinguished writer and Nobel Prize winner Saul Bellow was the recipient of the 1984 Pulitzer Prize for his work. Bellow began his speech by reading a few lines from his novel, "Him With His Foot In His Mouth." He then went on to talk about the importance of spending time with yourself, and a way to do it is to turn off the "noise" or distractions of the world.

Pretenders out as UCB seeks three new acts for 'Mayfest'

Auletta wins vice presidency; Schaffer faces Hallock in runoff

By By Held Graha

The Delaware Valley Regional Council of Students at SUNYA announced yesterday that John Auletta, a SUNYA professor, was elected vice president of the organization. Auletta received 413 votes in the runoff, while Dwayne Sampson, who received 417 votes in the primary, received 467 votes in the runoff.

Koch reveals budget

New York

AP/Mary B. Knauf

In a move that could trigger a major showdown, the administration of the University of California has announced plans to cut back on the university's budget, which has been growing at an alarming rate in recent years.

The university, which is centered on the Calaveras fault 12 miles east of San Francisco, is facing the prospect of severe cuts in its budget due to the national recession. The administration has announced that it plans to cut back on non-essential spending, including the university's budget, in order to reduce its overall deficit.

In a press conference, University President Timson said, "We have no choice but to take drastic action in order to ensure the university's long-term survival."

There are reports that the university is considering phasing out some of its programs, including the acclaimed environmental studies program. The program has been at the center of controversy in recent years due to its support of anti-development policies.

The university has also announced that it will be increasing its tuition fees in order to offset some of the cuts. The increase will be phased in over the next three years, starting with a 10% increase in the fall.

The announcement has been met with mixed reactions. While some students have expressed concern about the cuts, others have welcomed the move as necessary to ensure the university's future.

"I don't think it's fair," said student Jane Doe. "We're already paying enough tuition fees."

"It's a necessary step," said student John Smith. "We understand that the university is facing difficult times."

After its first year of operations, the Dutchess needed $200 in rent abatement because their landlord failed to provide adequate heat. Albany City Court Judge E. David Duncan ordered a March 6 hearing to determine how much the tenants would be owed. But he later ruled that the University of the Albany did not have to pay.

The students, who have been without heat for most of the winter, are still waiting for their rent abatement.

AT&T
Council cuts OCC's pay, approves SA budget

By Jamie Weissman

The Associated Students of The College approved the proposal to allow the OCC (Off-Campus Counseling) to have to pay for its services, but approved the SA budget for next year.

During the meeting, Sunya president Vincent O’Learney said that OCC has been working on its budget, but that the budget is not yet completed. The OCC has been working with the Student Finance Committee on the budget, and the OCC budget is expected to be completed soon.

The SA budget for the 1984-85 year will have a total budget of $2,178. The money will be used to support student organizations, and to provide for the student body.

The SA budget includes funds for the Student Activities Committee (SAC), the Student Union of the College (SU), the Student Organization of the College (SOC), and the Student Government Association (SGA).

Researchers find sexual fantasies commonplace

By Jamie Weissman

Researchers at the University of Colorado have found that sexual fantasies are commonplace among college students.

The study, conducted by Dr. John E. Haller, involved a sample of 100 college students. The results showed that 80% of the students had sexual fantasies, with the majority of them involving sexual acts.

Dr. Haller said that the results were not surprising, and that they were consistent with previous research.

"Sexual fantasies are a normal part of human sexuality," Dr. Haller said. "They are important for understanding our sexual desires and for providing a basis for our sexual relationships."

Camelism, socialism debated

"We don't believe socialism is inherently democratic," said John Simon Guggenheim Foundation scholar Eric Block, a professor of chemistry at SUNY Albany. "We think that socialism is a system of economic planning and control which encourages individual equality and a sense of common purpose. The individual's freedom is limited by the collective ownership of the means of production."

Block defended the concept of socialism, arguing that it is a system of economic planning and control which encourages individual equality and a sense of common purpose. The individual's freedom is limited by the collective ownership of the means of production.

"Socialism is an economic system that allows for greater equality and allowing for greater social participation in politics," Block asserted. "Socialism would bring down the barriers between workers and managers, and it would provide a more equitable society."

Political experts debate socialist, capitalist ideals

By Aileen Brown

Capitalism, no society is compatible with democracy, according to Richard Kendall, a department professor in the Department of Economics. The mechanism of capitalism-as a doctrine-ruins the notion of democracy, Kendall said.

Kendall also talked about capitalism and democracy during a forum on socialism and democracy. The forum, which was sponsored by the Department of Political Science, was held in the Student Union on Tuesday evening. Kendall was one of three professors who participated in the forum. The other two were Michael Birn, a political science professor, and Bruce Miroff, an economics professor.

Kendall began, "Freedom, and mobility. Kendall also talked about capitalism and democracy. It's not a regime to control everything, it is a regime to make decisions. It is not a regime to control democracy. It is not a regime to control economic questions, but most of them are. America is a place of mobility, you can start at the bottom and work your way up in terms of social mobility. In America, freedom and democracy co-exist. It is important to the person and the society functioning that it is competitive. For me, competition is important. It produces better goods and service, and quality to get out the most marginal.

Life after Mayfest

Next week there will be a special runoff election for SA president between Rich Schaffer and Tim Hallock. The turnout at the first election was ridiculously low, and runoffs are known to be even worse. If people don't take an interest and turn out to vote, the big victory will go to apathy and dishonesty, and the big losers will be the students.

SA affects every aspect of life on campus. Almost $1 million of our mandatory student activity funds go into the SA budget. This money funds over 80 student groups, from WCRB and Concert Board to ASLA-FSC and Hillel and Middle Earth. It also goes to fund intercollegiate athletics. SA is the easiest place for almost all student activities, and the president is the person in charge of it all.

Aside from heading SA, the president is the leader of the student government and the campus. In this role, she or he works on issues ranging from alcohol policy, the way women's safety and dorm robberies are treated to tuition hikes and for polling places on campus. There is hardly any area of our lives that goes unaffected by the work of the SA president. Yet over four-fifths of us did not bother to step off the dinner lines or into the campus center and vote for who will lead our persuasive student government next year.

As always, SA has the chance to share its problems this year. Many people see "party politics" or "student apathy" on campus and turn away in cynicism. But the solution is not the problem, but the beginning of a new SA president. Listen to the candidates, find out where they stand. Talk to people. And cast a vote. There is a life on this campus after "Mayfest." Be a part of it!

Defining our national interest

HUMAN SUFFERING as a result of political conflicts such as the current one in Lebanon. Our nation, the United States of America, has played a role in the suffering of the Lebanese people, as well as in the suffering of the people of Central America. We have had our chance to help form democracies, yet we have chosen not to participate.

We who hold the concept of democracy sacred often turn our back on those who need our help and assistance. Our nation should not be involved in the political affairs of other nations, yet we have been. We have contributed to the military and economic growth of other nations, yet we have not always done so with our "interests" but not benefitting the people in any extensive manner. Our ideas for creating democracy in Central America have only led to the financial betterment of a few students and corporations and by implementing policies that are detrimental to the people of the region, have been ignored by our government. The possibilities of ending suffering have been greatly increased in the past, yet we have failed to take advantage of them.

We need to be more involved in the political affairs of other nations, yet we have not always done so with our "interests" but not benefitting the people in any extensive manner. Searching For Spock In Star Trek III

by Ian Spelling

In the annals of television history there have been only a handful of programs able to completely captivate an audience. None was more of this kind than the original Star Trek. The show continued to thrive, regardless of television's changing tastes. What made Star Trek such a phenomenon? The answer lies in the performances of its cast, the writing and the directorial prowess used to stage the show. Star Trek became a cultural phenomenon, capturing the imagination of audiences around the world. It remains one of the most beloved television series of all time.

On November 21, 1977, just eight days before production on the film began, the show was canceled by the networks. The decision was made due to low ratings and the failure to draw the expected audience. The show had averaged 11 million viewers per episode, which was considered a low number at the time. The cancellation of Star Trek II was a major setback for the show, and its fans were devastated.

Actor Leonard Nimoy, who played Mr. Spock, was set to direct the film. However, the show was canceled before production could begin. Nimoy was disappointed, but he remained optimistic about the possibility of the show coming back as a feature film.

In 1982, the show was revived as Star Trek: The Motion Picture. The film was a box office success, grossing over $100 million. It was also a critical success, earning an Academy Award nomination for Best Picture. The film went on to become one of the highest-grossing films of all time.

In the years since, the Star Trek franchise has continued to thrive, with numerous movies and television series. The latest installment, Star Trek: Discovery, premiered in 2017. The franchise has become a cultural icon, beloved by fans around the world. The legacy of Star Trek continues to live on, inspiring new generations of fans to this day.
O'NEIL and I find the waiting room, and I begin to realize I've never seen the inside of my brother's hospital before. I'm not even sure that I want to. I need to go back to the house, but I can't just leave him there. I need to stay with him, to be there for him. I need to be there.

"I think of him every day."

I think of him every day. When I close my eyes, I see his face. I hear his voice. I feel his touch. I know he's still out there, still alive. But I can't see him, can't touch him, can't feel him. I can only think of him. I can only remember him.

I think of him every day. And I know I'll never forget him. I'll never forget him.

We believe it is in very poor taste to plan a university-wide event to commemorate the passion and death of Jesus Christ. It is the day set aside to commemorate the death of Jesus Christ. We are assuming that this incident was allowed the saying "Have a 'Good Friday" by doing this, they arc making a sham of Christian moral and financial support. It is you who make Telethon a reality. A SONY Night should be an event in which all students, faculty, and staff have the opportunity to participate.

Successful event

This letter concerns Central Council's decision to pass an advertisement for a telethon event that is scheduled for Good Friday. The telethon is set to take place on Good Friday afternoon and evening. The advertisement for the telethon was approved by the Student Senate and published in the Daily Times on March 27. The telethon is to be held in the Student Union and is expected to raise funds for a local non-profit organization.

Prof. studies the rights of mentally ill inmates

By Jane Woldeab

Washington, March 22 (AP) - A scholar of corrections who is known for her studies of the mentally ill in prisons has argued that the rights of inmates should be protected.

Prof. Fred Cohen said that the National Institute of Corrections, an agency of the Justice Department, should develop a program from the National Institute of Corrections, an agency of the Justice Department, to develop a program for the mentally ill in prisons.

"The noise level, victimization of the mentally retarded, and the mass incarceration of the mentally ill in prisons is "acting out", according to Cohen. He added: "It is very difficult, legally, to get people out of these institutions.

Cohen said that the mentally ill are often subject to abuse, neglect, and violence. He noted that the mentally ill are often kept in institutions for their own good, and that this practice is "morally wrong".

Cohen said that the mentally ill should be given the same rights as other prisoners, including the right to legal representation, and the right to a fair trial.

"The mentally ill should be treated with the same respect and dignity as other prisoners," Cohen said. "The mentally ill should not be kept in institutions for their own good, but for their protection and well-being.

President Page

President Page, the leader of the incarcerated rights movement, said that the mentally ill should be given the same rights as other prisoners.

Campus divestitures of South African holdings decline despite protests

by Larry Southwick

Organizations across the state have taken control of their own destinies, divesting their holdings to companies doing business in apartheid South Africa. The movement against apartheid has spread to every campus, with the students at the State University of New York being the first to divest their holdings.

The divestiture movement is broad-based, according to Brooke Baldwin of the Yale Coalition Against Apartheid. "It's not only students, but also faculty and administrators who are involved in this movement." Baldwin is a member of the Yale Coalition Against Apartheid, which has sponsored a number of divestiture campaigns across the country.

At the University of the District of Columbia, Columbia, PA., and the University of Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania, students are also involved in the divestiture movement. The students at the University of Pennsylvania have been joined by the student body at Michigan State University, who have also divested their holdings. At the University of Michigan, students have held a number of divestiture protests, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

In addition to the students at the State University of New York, students at the University of Connecticut, Connecticut, and the University of Wisconsin, Wisconsin, have also been involved in the divestiture movement. The students at the University of Wisconsin have been successful in divesting their holdings, and have been joined by the student body at the University of Michigan, who have also divested their holdings.

The divestiture movement has been successful in divesting the holdings of a number of companies, including Shell Oil, Standard Oil, and Mobil Oil. These companies have been divested because they are doing business in apartheid South Africa. The students at the University of the District of Columbia have divested their holdings in these companies, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

The divestiture movement has also been successful in divesting the holdings of a number of banks, including the Bank of America, the Citibank, and the Chase Manhattan Bank. These banks have been divested because they are investing in companies doing business in apartheid South Africa. The students at the University of the District of Columbia have divested their holdings in these banks, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

The divestiture movement has also been successful in divesting the holdings of a number of insurance companies, including Metropolitan Life, Mutual of Omaha, and Prudential. These insurance companies have been divested because they are investing in companies doing business in apartheid South Africa. The students at the University of the District of Columbia have divested their holdings in these insurance companies, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

The divestiture movement has also been successful in divesting the holdings of a number of foundations, including the Ford Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the Carnegie Corporation. These foundations have been divested because they are investing in companies doing business in apartheid South Africa. The students at the University of the District of Columbia have divested their holdings in these foundations, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

The divestiture movement has also been successful in divesting the holdings of a number of retailers, including Sears, Roebuck, and Macy's. These retailers have been divested because they are investing in companies doing business in apartheid South Africa. The students at the University of the District of Columbia have divested their holdings in these retailers, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

The divestiture movement has also been successful in divesting the holdings of a number of media companies, including CBS, NBC, and ABC. These media companies have been divested because they are investing in companies doing business in apartheid South Africa. The students at the University of the District of Columbia have divested their holdings in these media companies, and have been successful in divesting their holdings.

I'm sure many of you are asking "Why is Rich running for re-election? Is he crazy?" Sometimes I think I am. But let me tell you, I love this job. It means more to me than anything.

The Student Association has so much potential with many projects in the works, battles still to be won and issues that haven't even reached the surface yet. This is why re-electing me would be beneficial to SUNYA. My proven commitment and dedication has led us on to many successes this year. With a second term as SA President, I could really put a dent in the University regarding the areas of students' rights, minority affairs, programming, athletic spirit and women's safety.

I have done my best to fight for your rights all this past year. Now I need your help and support - Please vote and re-elect me on April 30 and May 1.
Trackwomen finish at 5-1

By Jim Emerich

The Albany State women’s track and field team has been too good to be true for the past two weeks, coming away with another stellar performance. The team, led by a string of strong individual performances, has earned a second-place finish at the ECAC Outdoor Championships.

Albany State scored 163 points in the meet, which was held at Bucknell University. The team was led by four athletes who finished in the top five in their respective events. These include: Dames Sabrina, who won the 100-meter dash; Dames Sabrina, who won the 200-meter dash; Dames Sabrina, who won the 400-meter dash; and Dames Sabrina, who won the 1500-meter run.

Other strong performances included Dames Sabrina, who finished second in the 100-meter dash, and Dames Sabrina, who finished third in the 200-meter dash. The team also had a strong showing in the relay events, with the 4x100-meter relay team finishing third and the 4x400-meter relay team finishing fourth.

Top SA executives take pay cuts in new budget

By Jan Wirth

All the members of Student Association's executive board are taking pay cuts this year to help reduce the SA's budget, which was expanded during last year's elections.

The board members, who were all elected last May, are currently looking for a new chair of the off-campus board of directors. The new chair will replace the one that was eliminated from the upcoming election. The new chair will be chosen in the fall.

The SA's budget for this year is $1,375, and the position of SA Media Director and Director of Student Programming will be eliminated. The SA Media Director will be paid $2,250 for the year, and the Director of Student Programming will be paid $1,675.

The SA Media Director and Director of Student Programming will be eliminated because the SA is not going to use the services of the SA Media Department.
