The Alumni Booters Cup Tournament was held this past weekend in University Gym. The team's second-place finish in the tournament was a victory for the team's recent upswing in performance.

The tournament was a three-day event, with matches being played on Saturday and Sunday. The Alvarez Booters defeated the University of Arizona Booters in the final match. The Alvarez Booters also defeated the University of California Booters in the semis, setting up a final match against the Arizona Booters.

The Alvarez Booters' victory was their second in a row, having defeated the University of California Booters in the previous match. The team is currently ranked second in the conference, and is looking to continue their winning streak in the upcoming matches.
SA Plans to Cut Club Funding

Boating Club May Have Spent Funds Improperly

According to SA Budget Committee Chair John Shockey, SA’s budget situation is so dire that it was necessary to recoup funds from student organizations in order to fund next year’s budget. The most immediately affected student groups were the Boating Club and the Sailing Club, who had both submitted budgets that exceeded the SA’s financial capacity.

The three groups will only lose a portion of the budget funding for the next school year, according to Shockey. The Club Boating and Sailing Committee, which oversees the clubs, was at the center of the controversy, as it had approved the budgets for the two clubs.

Sailing Club President Ben Proenza-Ward was quoted as saying, “We are probably losing more money than we think. We have a lot of challenges here.” He added that the club’s main concern was preserving its budget for next year.

The Edward E. Potter Club has had a tumultuous start to the spring semester, with the club’s budget cut by more than half in the latest round of budget cuts. According to President of the Potter Club, Jane T. H. Gray, the budget cut was a result of the club’s failure to submit a viable budget for the upcoming school year.

Goldenich Institutions, which have extension centers in Westchester County, were among the institutions whose programs and services were awarded funds for the spring semester.

The study claims that off-campus extensions are the primary source of income for the university, accounting for a significant portion of the school’s revenue.

The study also notes that off-campus extensions are often less regulated and subject to fewer standards than on-campus programs.

In addition, the report says that off-campus extensions often lack the same level of academic rigor as on-campus programs, and that some programs may not meet the required academic standards set by the state or accreditation bodies.

ALBANY STUDENT PRESS
Evaluation Book May Be Reissued

by Charles Brown

The Assessment of Course Content, which last came out in Spring 1980, is a new student evaluation form approved by the Board of Trustees. The ACT: a student evaluation form which rates both courses and instructors, was distributed for two years prior.

Fieldman turned the old distribution form to "unacceptably inefficient," but he believes the new form will be different.

"Our new system ACT forms will be distributed along with the regular semester evaluation forms that each department distributes," he said.

Fieldman added that if doing so, fewer students will be needed to distribute and collect the forms, and more students will be available to analyze the information. Although this plan has just been given full approval, Coordinator of Library Services to the Handicapped Paulia Brown said.

SUNYA Rehabilitation Services Coordinator Salah Vermelho said that one of the reasons the form put up between the Business Administration and Social Science buildings was cut. The ropes are an important safety measure which helps to increase the mobility of people with a visual disability. Vermelho said.

According to SUNYA Facilities Program Coordinator Joel Trice, the Plant Department would be putting up ropes where groups exist sometimes this week. These ropes would be replaced by permanent chains that summer.

The goal of those attempting to reissue the ACT system is to prepare an ACT booklet to evaluate the system. Fieldman said this will be dependent on whether the program is approved.

Implementation of the program in October meant that no new doctoral students would be recruited, and lifting that suspension would involve, after SUNYA's own standards had been met, initial approval by the SUNY Chancellor and Board of Trustees. The department no special assurance that SUNYA will provide the department with increased funding.

Chemistry Department Associate Professor Greg Gillings, last they could predict the chances for success of attempting to get the program passed.

"We're asking them to come here and tell us what we can do to make the department successful," he said.

Implementing all the suggestions in an independent review team may look does not necessarily mean the department will be successful in its attempt to produce a PhD program, Forbes said.

"We're asking them to come here and tell us the program that we have to do to establish a PhD program," he said.

"I'm assuming that they'll accept the suspension is valid, and what we expect from these reviews is an analysis which can be implemented," the SED Doctoral Review Project, which began its review of doctoral programs in New York State in 1974, evaluates PhD programs on a continuing basis. Among the criticisms made by the SED and other state boards of higher education is the SUNY Health Science Center at Buffalo which, a CHEM PhD program was that the number of qualified students and that the productivity of some professors had dropped.

Harry Kirchner to finalize plans for providing special housing for the club next year. The Potter's will remain in Hamilton Hall next semester because of a residence plan to expand the number of co-ed dorms on campus. Hamilton Hall, currently all male, is being made into a co-ed dorm.

That decision, and the club's move from Hamilton, are not related to the club committee's review, according to Kirchner.

Incomplete Night Fever

by Jim Lafayette

You awoke from the slumber around April. Another semester is about to end. But look, there is the AISP in that distant environment.-April that last day to make up lessons.

You stare at the page. You break out in a sweat. Incomplete is in Red.

April 17, 1977 Undergraduate Bulletin, the Big T is the many grade assigned by the instructor. The student is nearly completed his course requirements but because of circumstances beyond the students control the work is not completed.

But to anyone who completes the many time consuming extra-curricular activities here at SUNY, the incomplete becomes a sort of religion, and it comprises one of the seven great labors.

To these people going to, and studying for tests and writing papers on time seems madness and trivial compared to the wonders they work in their non-academic endeavors. So, as the end of the semester draws near, these busy folk must play their predecessors so that they may still find excuses to complete the semesters.

This is a question, a question that they will not fail that score even more.

After a particularly busy semester.

Your professors may writ large number of unreadable ink on your paper, and you may receive a grade that will not reflect your work in college.

Some people have even taken their professors off to San Francisco and now, usually because those who complete the work to their grade that they need to get.

The situation has improved, though.

In July, the grades, (before August 8), 1977, at a time and letter, there was a 2 grade. According to the Bulletin of the exact date, it was the administrative penalty grade.

Then try to imagine a transcript with "2's" and "W's" on it. You can't tell the grades without a transcript.

You may be able to explain grades as low as a "2" to your parents, but they get mighty upset when you grade approaches the other end of the alphabet.

There are worse things than incomplete courses, but if you don't do them, you may get the "academic probation letter."

radio racism

To the Editor:

A column published in the March issue of the AISP was most interesting to me and several of my AISP members. The story, written by Ron Simmons and Howard Striker, is that racism is embedded in American institutions, notably SUNY's mass media organizations. After superficially outlining the problem as they see it, the gentlemen seek to prove their point by discussing racist activities of those groups.

The column is made possible that WCDB "discredit" the majority of their potential listening audience. I fully agree with that, but there is another point that is equally as important about it.

The conclusion of the radio column in question is the only portion of our programming that serves more than the few members that members of all races, classes, age, area, area, and more will share our audiences.

We have this year, for example, been a very well prepared, as is known as a "furtitude" format, in which we combine various music of within the same group.

In addition to this general format, WCDB airs live performances of some of the best groups of the world when they are in our area and area.

The point, I believe, is that we have great listeners on the basis of the music and the thematic relevance. It is the best way to portray a true American student body as a whole.

May all students in our group individually and in our minority. We at AISP, however, own special schools and organizations that either more than obvious, or not even be.

To the "realists" in the situation that does not warrant the very extraordinary to the cause of those who have legitimate complaints of bigotry. To gentlemen, you are saying well, it happens from time to time when a campus group will do something a few members of their staff. Do you mean to think anyone is going to be making by them?...

To the Editor:

I found the March 31, Grant Campus, written by Ron Simmons and Howard Striker to be particularly objectionable and incorrect. I cannot accept the article's assumptions that academic freedom, presents, oppression and racism, that some Americans are not Americans, are members of the Third World, and that students groups should look to the university community.

As the current Editor-in-Chief of "The Torch", I am committed to respond to the charges that the paper perpetuates racism. The Torch has consistently addressed the issue of race and ethnicity. We have organized several important meetings and addressed the issue of the AISP. The selection of staff editors is based upon experience, understanding, and interests. The staff is open to anyone interested in joining the team.

Youths photographs are selected for their aesthetic qualities and thematic relevance. It is not only to portray a true representation of the university student body as a whole, but to represent the diversity and richness of the campus community. We wholeheartedly agree.

To the "realists" in the situation that does not warrant the very extraordinary to the cause of those who have legitimate complaints of bigotry. To gentlemen, you are saying well, it happens from time to time when a campus group will do something a few members of their staff. Do you mean to think anyone is going to be making by them?...

You men and women of the minority's question are both quite familiar with what happens on this campus. I cannot find a word to quell the feeling that more of us need to understand the feeling of other minorities and the need for a society that is open to all students from all walks of life.
Starting a Career
At 67 Years Young

By CHARLIE PUKUNA

Night of the living dead is right now— I’m happier than ever before— I’m living the dream of my life. I’m doing what I enjoy so thoroughly— It’s a rich and fulfilling life.

That is how 67-year-old Maury Moir, a visiting faculty member in SUNY’s Theater Department, described her present situation compared to an early life as an actress on Broadway and in Hollywood during the 1940s and into the ’50s. At that time, Moir was herself a part of what Hollywood novelist A. Celtic Miller’s “Dinner at Eight,” and she illustrated this by her own story of how she found herself at the center of her current teaching role.

“Living” is a topic of discussion among those who have been here for a long time, and it was a theme that was emphasized by Moir’s current student, a 67-year-old woman who had just completed her last semester of college and was entering the workforce full-time. Moir praised the woman for her dedication to her work and for her willingness to take on new challenges.

Moir’s career as a visiting professor was motivated by the need for someone to teach the students about the art of acting. “I was never a major box office attraction,” she said. “I was never a major box office attraction.” She described her acting career as a journey of discovery, enriched by the opportunity to meet and work with some of the greatest actors of her time. Moir’s students have praised her for her dedication to the craft and for her ability to inspire them to pursue their dreams.

Let’s Do the Time Warp Again

“Just seven hours old;
Truly beautiful to behold;
And somebody should be told;
My libido hasn’t been controlled.”

By JON LAFAYETTE

(laughter)

“I was challenged,” said Moir, “to write a new script for the show. I decided to write a modern take on the classic story of the time-warped lovers, using contemporary themes and a more realistic setting.”

Moir’s script was met with enthusiasm by the creative team, and the production moved forward with great energy.

“The show was a huge success,” said Moir, “and it was a great experience to work with such a talented group of actors and designers.”

Moir’s career has been a testament to the idea that it is never too late to pursue your dreams. “I’ve been blessed with a love for acting that has never diminished,” she said. “I have always loved the thrill of performing on stage, and I continue to enjoy it as much as ever.”

Moir’s story is a reminder that the pursuit of a passion can lead to a fulfilling and rewarding career, no matter your age. “I encourage anyone who is thinking about pursuing a career in the arts to go for it,” she said. “It’s never too late to start and it’s never too late to succeed.”
The Great Canoe and Pancake Derby

By G. PARCIEL SACHS
rowed-deer and I have been watching the canoe derby for three years now, and have found it to be an exciting and enjoyable event each year. The derby is usually held at the beginning of the summer season, and draws hundreds of competitors and spectators to the local lake. It is a great way to spend a sunny day on the water, whether you are a canoeist or just a spectator.

The derby starts with a blessing of the canoes, held at the local church. The priest blesses each canoe, wishing the competitors success and safety on the water. This is followed by a brief ceremony where the mayor declares the derby open. The canoeists, dressed in their finest paddling gear, line up to receive their starting orders. The starting line is marked by a large buoy, and the canoes are arranged in a tight line, ready to race.

The derby itself is a thrilling event. The canoes race over a set course, which is marked by buoys in the water. The canoes are divided into several classes, each with its own set of rules and regulations. The races are usually quite competitive, with the canoes racing neck and neck throughout the course.

As the canoes race, the spectators on shore cheer them on, calling out encouragement and support. The atmosphere is electric, with the sound of the paddles cutting through the water and the cheers of the crowd. It is a great sight to see.

The derby ends with a pancake breakfast, held at the local park. The pancakes are cooked by the volunteers, and are served with syrup and butter. The breakfast is a great way to refuel after the race and to socialize with other competitors.

Overall, the Great Canoe and Pancake Derby is a wonderful event. It brings the community together, and provides a fun and exciting way to enjoy the water. I highly recommend attending if you are in the area during the summer months.

40 A D.D. the emperor Constantine ordered as many gladiatorial shows, but his decree was never put into effect. It continued for the rest of the fourth century, and wild beast hunts even longer. Eventually only the emperors and their personal retainers were permitted to enter the arena, and even they were no longer expected to fight. The Colosseum was now a place where the spectators could enjoy the spectacle of the games, which lasted for three or four days.

There is a widely held belief that Christian martyrs were put to death in the Colosseum. This belief is not supported by historical facts, but has been repeated in fiction and film. The Colosseum was used as a gladiatorial arena for the entertainment of the Roman populace. It was not used as a place of execution. There is no evidence that Christians were put to death in the Colosseum.

The Colosseum is a magnificent example of Roman architecture and engineering. It is a symbol of the power and wealth of the Roman Empire. It is a source of inspiration to architects and engineers throughout the world.

Loss of Diversity

The sailing club will sail no more. The Outing Club will be taking their reorganized and grown-up form to the Indian Quad Lake. There will be no more intense solitude from the Jessie Society. These are some of the clubs which were the victims of outbids mandated by the SA Budget Committee.

The loss of these clubs creates a void that Student Senate President Ben Fischbein, liaison to the Chief of Student Affairs, had hoped to fill. There is in their seventh page a story by a Story Boarder. The SA vote proceeded. Its opening line was, "The monster in the basement is a story clustered with letters to Helen Curly Schenkel." The story's first paragraph begins. "I am going to write a story on a central theme behind the central theme, which doesn't full of clustered papers." The next six paragraphs go on to take specific ideas and present them from an original perspective. The editorials are a series of columns on current events, and I thought all who will read the full story to Monday's Forum Magazine. The column is "on need and content and lost off our own ideas, writings, etc., of our own," according to a column. It's a word some of the SA editors might write 50 times on their blackboards every night before they go to sleep.

You used to improve suited as to why the people responsible are "The anti-proliferation activism called it a "thoughtless tell on their time."

The editor-in-chief of the only student newspaper, Jimmy Mestrovitsa, who was the 4th T.M. Schenkel of the writer of the article, for any boxhead should be a story every worry subject. But, it takes an editor's approval to put it in print.

I comforted them all under a lot of pressure to put out a "funny story." Some people just can't think of anything from a deadline hanging over their head.

Well, only thought on Mr. President was a 'magic trick' in the "Editorial in Chief." He is a bit of a "thoughtless," according to a nameless every time they face a deadline. But, they should think about re-imagining their positions. With a new perspective, such as editing, would suit them. In one case, it's about time business gave them a "kick in the ass.""

The most effective tampon is the most economical, too

Tampax tampons are made with a special, highly compressed material to give you maximum absorbency. What’s more, unlike most other brands, they expand in all three directions—length, breadth, and width—and conform to individual body contours. Which means there’s less chance of leakage or bypass. And here’s something else you’ll like about Tampax tampons: the price. The economy-size package of 40 costs less—tampon for tampon—than any other brand. So if you want a lot of protection at very little cost, open a package of Tampax tampons. We promise you, it’s there.

by Bruce Weinstein

The Albany State women's track team has been working hard this season, and their hard work has paid off. The team's two main events are the 100-meter dash and the 400-meter relay.

The track season started with the team's usual training schedule, which included running, strength training, and conditioning exercises. The team also had two meets during the month of March, where they had the opportunity to compete against other local teams.

In the most recent meet, held on April 20th, the team performed well. They placed first in the 100-meter dash, with an average time of 11.8 seconds. They also placed second in the 400-meter relay, with a time of 48.6 seconds.

The team's captain, Susan Brown, said, "We've been working really hard this season. We've been pushing ourselves, and it's paying off. We're really excited about the upcoming season."
