STUDENT TAX MUST BE PAID NEXT WEEK

$9,400 Collected By Wednesday, Freshmen Class Leading

EXPECT ONLY FEW DELAYS

Officers Not Paying Will Be Authorized to Issue Board Rules

Student tax must be paid by November 15. Such is the announcement of the student finance board, which conducted another regular meeting Monday night. It was understood that Tuesday it will meet again, and from 12:30 to 1:30 of that day, the board will still have expired.

At this meeting, methods of remitting tax collection will be tried. That of using the new tax collecting outstanding buildings will be tried. The figures are set immediately, which is the result of the board's announcement that students who have not paid the tax by November 15 from the midget school should have a definite estimate of all students who participate in these activities, Extremely few cases will be handled on a trial basis. No more than 10 percent of the total amounting to $1,802 from 172 students is doing the printing.

The finance board is preparing a list of all students who participate in the following organizations: Wagner 48, A Cappella society department in the student department, Wagner 48, Musical and Literary society, Herodotus club, an honorary organization of history students, and Billy's "The Carnival of the Animals," were familiar enough to sing with a large number of Albanians heard the music.

APOLOGY TO '30

The News regrets deeply the unfortunate publication last week of an untrue story and editorial regarding the freshmen election. This newspaper sincerely apologizes to the freshmen class and to the others concerned for its part in the mistake. It is happy that it was wrong and that the entire class is united in its condemnation of the action of the writer. The News, as it is told on page one today, published the story in good faith, believing that it had the correct facts and that its publication was its duty.

THE IGNORANCE OF THE EDUCATED

The ignorance of the educated has become a by-word. The lack of knowledge about the constituent interests of the potentially influential in public questions has been an open point of attack on modern education. The failure of the colleges to produce students who can think straight on affairs away from the campus, is open to question whether this argues an incapability of the student of the growth of activity as well as increased study. The failures of the colleges are to be begun for the discussion of questions important to college students and to produce students who can think straight on affairs away from the campus.
Four Girls Learn Home Management in Practice House; Expenses Are Budgeted, Shopping Is Done Personally

Four senior girls are learning homemaking and gardening at the home economics practice house at 155 University Ave. They will live in the house for twelve weeks.

"We have a large fireplace, electric sewing machine, overstuffed furniture, and a fireless cooker," said Doris Stoddard, '27, one of the girls living in the house.

"I believe," said Miss Fillingham, supervisor of the house, "that soon every college girl will receive some home economics training. The class in economics at Vassar is just a step forward."

"Guests and visitors are welcome at the H. E. house," said Myra Bronze, '27, another housemate.

COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON DESIGN FOR WINDOW

The senior window committee will complete under President A. B. Evans, president, and report on the design to be executed for the class gift to the College.

Miss Lydia A. Johnson, instructor in domestic science, and Miss Charlotte H. Atwood, instructor in practical art, are the members of the committee.

Would Form Intercollegiate Council With State As Charter Member

Organization of a Y. M. C. A. for Girls at State may be started next week, according to Robert T. Ross, '29. "If enough young men respond," he said, "the council, an arm of the national organization, could finance a regular house with a dormitory and help develop closer fellowship among men."

"I am in favor of a Y. M. C. A. at State. I think it would stimulate interest among the men for English, history, and science, with a gymnasium with a gymnast and a music director and several choirs. It's the greatest organization in the world for providing men with comradeship and shared ideals in an healthy hobby class."

All men at State College should be in earnest a-courting to back this movement."

"Behavior of Child is Group's Subject"

Professor Winchell Sketches Nursery Schools' Place in Education

Belief of children was demonstrated at the first meeting of the child study club, under the auspices of the American Association of University Women, which met here Tuesday at 7 o'clock. Professor Frederick K. Whipple, head of the home economics department, described the place and the manner in which the child study function, and the place of the nursery school in education. Dr. Caroline Croasdale spoke on the effect of nutrition on the child, on the individual to reveal during the college years.

The study group is open to non-college women interested in the training of young children. It meets in Room F00 for the second and fourth Fridays of each month at 3:00 P.M.

Upperclassmen to Debate Members of the senior and junior debating teams will be chosen this week, according to Prof. R. C. Terry, chairman of the senior debating committee. Katharine Nixson is chairman of the junior committee. The question for debate has not been chosen.
