Hopefuls Agree on Mass Funding

by David Woloshuk

The issue concerning S.A. funding and mass funding in the upcoming election for the new SUNYA Student Association will be an important one. Most of the already announced candidates have either come out for funding and the majority favor mass programming as well.

In a "majority" position by the majority of the candidates, mass programming gained much support as a result of the recent TOPSA hanging situation. S.A. Presidential candidate Bob O'Brien expressed support for mass programming when saying that TOPSA is "not a priority," and another candidate, Bob Miller, said that mass programming is "very important." However, some candidates are concerned about the impact on other groups. "Top funding is only a part of the story," another candidate said.

Another candidate for the S.A. presidency, Bob Miller, said that "too much money is going into the masses." He feels that mass programming is not the only way to support students. "I believe that there are groups who are funding themselves and not looking for help from the masses," he said.

A third candidate for the presidency, Bob Miller, said that "mass funding is not the answer." He feels that mass funding is not the solution to the problem of student funding.

Presidential candidates have suggested that the S.A. should take advantage of the situation and work towards creating a "win-win" solution. Candidate Bob Miller said that "S.A. should take advantage of the situation and work towards creating a "win-win" solution."

Candidate Trades

One of the most popular events of the year is the annual candidate trades, where students exchange positions with SUNYA's budget. SUNYA's budget is currently at its lowest level in recent years, and students are fighting to protect the budget.

The SUNYA conference of the American Political Science Association (APSA) included a session on environmental policies. The session focused on the role of local government in promoting sustainable practices. Attendees discussed strategies for encouraging public participation in environmental initiatives and the development of comprehensive solutions to address climate change. The session aimed to foster dialogue among policymakers, environmentalists, and community members to enhance efforts towards more sustainable urban development.

Laura Street, a representative from a local environmental group, emphasized the importance of involving residents in decision-making processes. She highlighted the success of community-led initiatives in reducing local carbon footprints and called for continued support from city administrators.

Dr. John Williams, from the SUNYA Department of Environmental Science, presented research on the effectiveness of green technology in urban areas. He argued that implementing green technology could lead to significant reductions in energy consumption and pollution.

The session concluded with a panel discussion on the future of environmental policies. Panelists agreed on the necessity for collaboration between government agencies, businesses, and the public to achieve meaningful progress towards sustainability.

The conference ended with a call to action for all attendees to advocate for stronger environmental policies and to support community-driven initiatives. The group expressed optimism about the potential for change and emphasized the importance of sustained effort and commitment.

Florida Trip Marked by Several Disappointments

by Randi Parrow

Our bored and forty-six students spent their Easter vacation in Fort Lauderdale through arrangements made by the Cooper 205 Travel Club. The arrangements promised an all-expenses-paid trip with room in an affiliated hotel and use of the hotel’s facilities promised to the students. However, when the students were met with another disappointment, the Governor’s Surf & Sand, they had planned to stay in the Colorado State and Co-Ed Camps, located throughout the New England, Mid-Atlantic States and Canada.

The Searanch, has all of the facilities promised to the students. According to Erwin Levin he was discovered that there were not any vacancies left in the hotel accommodations, stated that the students would be housed in the hotel’s recreation rooms on the first floor. Levin maintained that the hotel was also short on facilities promised to the students. According to his wife and two kids and two other students who had had similar experiences, the students were met with another disappointment. Levin maintained that the hotel was also short on facilities promised to the students.

Unfortunately, on the return trip to New York one of the students was delayed for about seven hours. The biggest gripe has been that although another arrangement was to be made to make their own good behavior.

Complications thickened when it was discovered that there were no buses waiting for him. According to Erwin Levin his wife and two kids and two other students who had had similar experiences, the students were met with another disappointment. Levin maintained that the hotel was also short on facilities promised to the students.

Cruel Lady - Jim Hendrix (MCA)

One out of three isn't bad for a B-side song. Count through the titles, and you can see what happened: it just didn't have the kind of hook that could make an impact. The vocals work well on "Clown" and "Country Lift". For even Roxy abandons its own gimmicky cheap electronics, cheap material, with the quality of these covers the latter. It's really making it big today is pop. The vocals work well on "Clown" and "Country Lift". Clapton’s Not Lost in ‘Crowd’

by Alan D. Abbey

Local Clapton fans have reason to feel good. After bringing their money to the concert in exchange for tickets, they have an album to remember the show by. Mr. Abbey’s review is of acute power. The music is clearly the best in Clapton’s career, and the mood is lively.

The album, recorded at the Olympic Studios, is a superb collection of songs from a variety of sources, including the Rolling Stones’ “Paint It Black,” the Who’s “Tommy,” and “Like a Rolling Stone” by Bob Dylan. The album is divided into two sections, the first of which features Clapton’s early work and the second of which contains his later work.

The first section contains four tracks from “Like a Rolling Stone.” The album opens with “We Can’t Do It Without You,” followed by “We Can’t Do It Without You (Part II)” and “We Can’t Do It Without You (Part III).” The final track of this section is “We Can’t Do It Without You (Part IV).”

The second section contains five tracks from “Tommy.” The album opens with “Till the Day It Is Done,” followed by “The Only Way,” “The Only Way (Part II)” and “The Only Way (Part III).” The final track of this section is “The Only Way (Part IV).”

The album ends with a bonus track, “The Only Way (Part V).”

The album is available on CD and cassette, and is distributed by Warner Bros. Records.

It's springtime; the flowers are blooming, the grass is turning bright green, and the sun is shining. However, what do we do when we find ourselves being hassled or treated unfairly? The Ombudsman's Office can help. They are here to investigate complaints made by students against abuses or capricious acts of public officials. If you need help, fill out a Grievance Form in the S.A. Office (C.C. 346) for more information, call 7-5451 or 7-6542.

SUNYPIRG is that they’re simply a cog in the machine. They had everything but the money that they needed to be a little bit more effective. But they’re not a bad group of guys, they really aren’t. They’re very receptive to anything that can be profitable. And they’re very passionate about their cause. They’re all very passionate about their cause. They’re all very passionate about their cause.

The Democrats won a majority in the state legislature, 50-49, and the House, 121-99, after a long and often bitter campaign. The Republicans managed to hold onto their control of the Senate, 30-29, but lost control of the Assembly, 81-68. The results were a major setback for President Bush, who had been pushing for a constitutional amendment that would allow for direct election of the president.

They are made of photovoltaic cells, which are made of semiconductors. These arrays are often used in remote areas, where there is little access to the electrical grid.

SASU President Kevin Kohane chaired the conference. The delegate assembly approved a motion to freeze property assessment on women and men students.
