New Phys - Ed Requirement
Shaping Up

Despite the fact that nobody wants it, a physical education requirement still remains the only general undergraduate requirement at SUNY. This is due to a policy of the State University of New York. The fact that the State University of New York has no authorized undergraduate student body at the state university must complete a physical education program in order to satisfy the four credit requirement for new freshmen at this time.

The State University Trustee’s policy which was adopted on September 10, 1967, was enacted with. passing the conduct of physical education programs at the State University of New York. The fact that the policy of the State University of New York has no authorized undergraduate student body at the state university must complete a physical education program in order to satisfy the four credit requirement for new freshmen at this time.

As a result of this policy, the Faculty Senate on March 18, 1968, issued a revised physical education requirement to satisfy the four credit requirement for new freshmen at SUNY. This left the old physical education requirement still remains the only general undergraduate requirement at SUNY.

As Doctor Alfred Werner, Chairman of the Men’s Physical Education Department, commented that he doesn’t expect to waive any part of the undergraduate requirement at SUNY.

A physical education requirement still remains the only general undergraduate requirement at SUNY.

“Doctor Alfred Werner, Chairman of the Men’s Physical Education Department, commented that he doesn’t expect to waive any part of the undergraduate requirement at SUNY. The policy of the State University of New York has no authorized undergraduate student body at the state university must complete a physical education program in order to satisfy the four credit requirement for new freshmen at this time.”

“All entering freshmen who have a 4 credit physical education requirement to satisfy will have to take either three or two semesters... depending on which courses are taken.”

The faculty has called for the new revised physical education program to be an elective requirement in the other academic years. The policy stated that each undergraduate student should fulfill a four unit or two year requirement in physical education over and above the lower requirements for graduation. The plan called for a review of the program in September, 1972.

In October, 1971, the Senate adopted a revised physical education program that had passed the Curriculum Committee and the Undergraduate Academic Council unanimously. The policy stated that the new program should be an elective requirement and would be improved by the following credit.

As the requirement, the Physical Education Department felt that physical education was essential for graduation due to the fact that physical education courses are not approved for graduate work. The Physical Education Department has called for the lowering of requirements due to the fact that physical education courses are not approved for graduate work. The Physical Education Department has called for the lowering of requirements due to the fact that physical education courses are not approved for graduate work.

Robert D. North, supervisor of Undergraduate Studies, in a recent interview, said that the requirement for the Physical Education Department is that the requirement for the Physical Education Department is that all entering freshmen who have a 4 credit physical education requirement to satisfy will have to take either three or two semesters.

Under the new physical education program PE 101 will be a two credit fall semester course. The new program will be extended in full semester courses and will be worth two credits. All entering freshmen will have a physical education requirement depending on which courses are taken.

One major problem that has arisen due to the new program is that students who have taken three credits of physical education and only need one or two quarters of a year to fulfill their requirements. Under the new program, the student will have to take a full semester course in the quarter of the year that is needed. Werner, speaking on the requirement, said “that students with a physical education requirement... should be allowed to elect an elective.”

George McGovern: Calling America Home

On September 15, 1972, George McGovern arrived in Albany with the same optimism that accompanied him to Miami. One must admit wonder whether the latter, dominating days prior to the Democratic primaries once again loomed over the man at his army of followers.

Yet there was a time when 70 per cent of the nation did not know who he was. There was a time when thinking at the college level was measured in seconds and not minutes. There was a time when “quaint” was a term of reprobation.

But McGovern had something to tell America and as much as many voters were weary of tracts that they thought McGovern was coming out of a book or a campaign party, the same people who thought differently were convinced that he was saying something important. There was a time when drinking at the state college was illegal and people who thought differently were convinced that this was the only way to celebrate victories.

Day Care Center Needs Funds

The Pine Hill Day Care Center, an important voice in the fight for quality day care for children of working parents, is facing financial difficulties. The center, located in the heart of the community, has been providing affordable, high-quality care for children ranging in age from six months to five years, for over ten years. Despite its long history of serving the community, the center is now facing closure due to lack of funds.

The center is run as a parent cooperative, with contributions from parents in the form of graduated fees. The cooperative was originated to provide low-cost, high-quality day care to working parents and has been a vital resource in the community. Meetings are held regularly to discuss center management and planning.

Without these funds, the center will be forced to close, leaving many families without a reliable place to send their children. The center has over 100 children on its waiting list, and the number continues to grow. Parents are encouraged to contribute to the center's fund drive to keep it open.

Food Protest on Indian

A protest against the alleged poor food served at Indian Gardens has been initiated by concerned parents. The protest has been backed by the Indian Gardens Parents Organization, which has been monitoring food quality and service for over a year. The parents are demanding improvements in the quality of meals served, as well as better communication with the staff.

The protest is part of a larger movement among Indian Gardens parents to improve the quality of life for their children. They are supported by residents and parents themselves.

The Findings

The McKay Commission, appointed by Chief Judge Stanley A. Perl, to investigate the Attica prison revolt, has released its report. The report, which has been highly anticipated, is a comprehensive examination of the events surrounding the rebellion and the government's response.

The report highlights the widespread use of violence by both prison staff and inmates, as well as the government's failure to address the root causes of the rebellion. The commission recommended a range of measures, including the establishment of a new state prison system, the creation of a new parole system, and the establishment of a new parole board.

The Recommendations

The McKay Commission's recommendations include the establishment of a new state prison system, the creation of a new parole system, and the establishment of a new parole board. The recommendations also call for the implementation of a new parole system, which would include a new parole board, a new parole system, and a new parole board.

The recommendations are intended to address the root causes of the rebellion and to prevent similar incidents in the future. The commission hopes that its recommendations will be implemented by the government to ensure that the weight of authority is not used to maintain power, but to ensure justice for all.

FSA Hungry for More

Many student food service workers are hungry for better compensation. The students who work in the food service department, which is responsible for serving over 1,000 meals each day, feel that their efforts are not being recognized.

The students, who work for the State University of New York at Albany, have been working under a contract that was scheduled to expire in December. Without a new contract, the students will face serious financial difficulties.

The students are demanding a higher wage, better working conditions, and more control over the quality of the food served. They have organized protests and have been in constant negotiations with the university administration.

Many students reporting for work in local food-service departments have been unpleasantly surprised. The Student Association has begun a policy of denying reporting for work to students' unions. Students do not have a meal plan covering the meals they work and must pay $1.15 for dinner, $1.00 for lunch, and $0.35 for breakfast. Students must pay for meals at the rate of 50% of the price charged to members of the editorial board.

The decision to take deductions, like many decisions of the Student Association, is without student input. Two cases come to mind. First, the MHC election results were not made public until after the end of the term. The list of winners was kept secret. Second, the decision to use the power of the editorial board to determine the pay of Student Association employees was made without student input. Student Association employees are paid to work at the rate of 50% of the price charged to members of the editorial board.

Meanwhile, the Student Association refuses to pay for the meals of students who work for local food-service departments. This is a violation of the Student Association's own policy, which guarantees students the right to a meal plan.

Jane Fonda in Hanoi:
Surveying the Damage Done

by Jane Fonda

I left my hotel in Hanoi at 6:30 a.m. to drive to the outskirts of the city where the American people were working at a dike, clearing and repairing it. The dike became a symbol of the war to me, for here the dike would hold or break, the water would rush through or be held back. I could see the French peasant lives, but who weren’t emasculated by the war, continued to work hard to hold back the constant floods and droughts each year.

Returning to my hotel for breakfast, I was on the way to the office, working on the film French Cousins, which was being made in Hanoi. We were given back to use, and my work was now for the film.

Two weeks ago, I left my office to go to the war front. I have come to the realization that the war is not for the Vietnamese, but for the American people. I am now working for the Vietnamese people, and I would like to see them win.

On weekends the men were with their lives. While their wives remained peasants. On weekends the men were with their lives. While their wives remained peasants.

Boaters Have Winning Attitude

by Nathan Saloff

If enthusiasm and quick eye are two keys to a boat, Albany's team should be unstoppable. The team won its first two meets under new conditions and 1,000 fans came to see the action.

The fans arrived not only to see a good meet, but also to support the team. They voiced their enthusiasm by cheering loudly and encouraging the swimmers to do their best.

The meet went well for the team, and the victory was a testament to the hard work and dedication of the swimmers. They proved that they are capable of winning under any conditions.

The next meet will be even more exciting, as the team will face tougher competition. However, the swimmers are confident that they will continue to perform at a high level and emerge victorious.

In conclusion, the Boaters have shown that they possess the key components of a successful team -- enthusiasm and quick eye. With these qualities, they are sure to make a name for themselves in the world of swimming.

The Yankees have been unable to clinch the AL East title despite their dominance in the division. The team is in the thick of the race, but they need to win their remaining games to secure the title.

"We have to win our last two games," said manager Joe Torre. "If we win, we're in. If we lose, it's over."

The Yankees have a toughest schedule ahead, with games against the Blue Jays and Red Sox. They will need to perform well in these crucial games to keep their championship hopes alive.

The consequences of untreated V.D. can be many years after the contact with the disease.

The causes of venereal disease are many. They include ignorance, lack of information, and lack of education. The disease can be contracted through sexual intercourse, oral-genital contact, or any other form of sexual contact.

The symptoms of venereal disease can be subtle and can sometimes be mistaken for other conditions. The most common symptoms include:

- Pain on urination
- Discharge from the penis or vagina
- Itching or burning of the genital area
- Painful intercourse
- Swollen lymph nodes

Early detection and treatment are crucial to prevent further spread of the disease. The treatment for venereal disease can be effective, but it requires cooperation and commitment from both partners.

Prevention is the key to controlling the spread of venereal disease. This includes:

- Regular sexual health check-ups
- Using condoms during sexual activity
- Avoiding sex with someone who has a known history of the disease

In conclusion, venereal disease is a serious concern that requires attention and action. By increasing awareness, education, and prevention measures, we can work towards a future where venereal disease is no longer a threat.

If you vote for Nixon, you'll take Rocky out of Albany and send him to Washington. We ask you to make a sacrifice. Put up with Nelson for 2 more years and vote for McGovern on Nov. 7.

The Silent Epidemic...

*The silent epidemic of syphilis is a major public health concern. It is estimated that around 90% of cases of syphilis in the United States go untreated. This is because the symptoms of early syphilis can be similar to those of other common infections, leading to underdiagnosis and underreporting.

The disease can remain dormant for years, only to reemerge in more severe forms if left untreated. People who are infected with syphilis but do not show symptoms are at risk of spreading the infection to others.

Transmission of syphilis can occur through sexual contact with an infected person. The direct contact between mucous membranes and an infected area is what leads to the spread of the disease.

The VDRL test is a commonly used blood test to detect syphilis. It is not diagnostic for syphilis but rather tells nothing about the stage of the disease.

The primary stage of syphilis is characterized by a single, painless, skin sore called a chancre. The chancre is usually located on the penis, but can occur on the vagina, lips, or mouth. The chancre is typically not visible to the naked eye and can be very easy to miss.

In the secondary stage, the chancre heals and a rash appears. This rash is often disseminated, meaning it appears on different parts of the body, and can be very itchy.

The tertiary stage of syphilis can be more severe and can affect many different parts of the body, including the heart, bones, and nervous system. This stage is more likely to cause serious complications if left untreated.

SUNYA Students-even those without health insurance-can be employed this year as a part-time counselor. This will help us to provide more comprehensive health care to our students.

The final part of the state program provides funds for a broad educational campaign. A campaign is needed to educate young people about syphilis and how to prevent it. The campaign should include information about the signs and symptoms of syphilis, as well as the importance of getting tested.

Puerto Rican Demands Still Up in the Air

by Cecil Harkby

Peace and nowhere happened to the demands and resolutions made by the Puerto Rican Students and the Administration. This is because there were no witnesses to the meeting.

The next order of business was Seniority Pre-Registration. Mike Lipton introduced a bill to amend the Organizational Code to freeze the order of applicants by the three-year average. This was defeated by a vote of 1 in favor, 1 opposed, and 1 abstention.

The next order of business was the discontinuation of this practice. The bill was voted to be moved ahead of the contradictory discussion during which Al Senia, editor of the ASP, said that his knowledge, 14 graduate assistant, was needed to maintain the schedule.

New York, New York—"Scientists are not men," a recent study of mental health in the United States, issued earlier this year, concluded. Psychologists, however, will be the first to tell you that they are not scientists, either.

A recent report of the American Psychiatric Association disclosed the following:

- "Scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world."
- "Scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world."
- "Scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world."
- "Scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world."
- "Scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world."

The study was conducted by a team of psychologists and psychiatrists who have been studying the phenomenon for decades. The findings were presented at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association, held in New York last week.

"Scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world." This statement was repeated throughout the presentation, with each speaker emphasizing the importance of this belief.

The study also revealed that scientists are not all men.
Women make up a significant portion of the scientific community, and are increasingly taking on leadership roles.

In conclusion, the study reaffirmed that scientists are not men, but they are people who believe in their ability to change the world. This belief is what drives them to push the boundaries of knowledge and make significant contributions to society.
Downtown is Friendlier
But Buses A Pain
by David Lerner
While the prospect of catching an 8:15 SABT is one that few Albaymians enjoy, one cannot help but notice a large amount of city traffic around Main Street. As cars zoom by, one is inclined to think that the city must be quite busy. In order not to get too close to the center, however, a stoplight is needed.

Most students like the idea of having more buses, as they believe it will reduce traffic. However, it is difficult to find a solution to the problem. The city has already tried to solve the problem, but the result was not as expected.

The bus system is inefficient and many people have difficulty getting to their destination. Some students have suggested that the bus system be expanded, but this would require a lot of money and time. Others have suggested that the city use a different mode of transportation, but this would require a lot of planning and preparation.

The problem is complex and requires a lot of thought. The city must find a way to solve the problem and make the streets safer for all. It is up to the city to decide what is the best solution.
1. Getting the Business

A recent headline in the New York Times read: "A New Strategy for Tax Reform." The story explained how the Nixon administration's policy initiatives were aimed at reforming the commercial aspects of the tax code, and quoted the publication as having written, "The government is making a good-faith effort to do this, and that's a start." Nevertheless, government officials and experts are cautious because "I can't think of anything more likely to lead to a major defeat if government is getting its arms around this issue." When the government gets its arms around this issue, it is a sign that Congress is ready to consider tax reform.

2. Viet Veterans for McGovern

Dear Viet Veteran:

The next event in the campaign season for the Democratic nomination is the upcoming Democratic National Convention in Miami. If you've had the opportunity to read the oratorical efforts of the candidates, you might feel that the nomination is just a foregone conclusion for Hubert Humphrey. But, let me assure you, it is not. Humphrey's support in the primaries has been weak, and his policies have been criticized. The situation in Vietnam is deteriorating, and the Vietnam War has become a prominent issue in the campaign. There is a strong possibility that the convention will be a battleground for the nomination. McGovern's staff is working hard to ensure that he gains support at the convention.

3. McGovern-Nixon Bout Ends in KO

By Brian Robinson

Good morning. The last two rounds of the McGovern-Nixon bout, which was held on a midnight date and was broadcast on television and radio, were dominated by the candidates' personal attacks. George McGovern was sparring with his own past, George McGovern was sparring with his own past, and Richard Nixon was sparring with his own past. As a result, the bout ended in a knockout for McGovern. The verdict was 11-2 in favor of McGovern, with 8 of the 12 judges scoring the bout in favor of McGovern. McGovern's performance was praised for being consistent, while Nixon's was criticized for being inconsistent and weak.

4. Beisser Objects to Misleading Article

To the Editor:

I am writing to you in response to the misleading article that appeared on page 19 of the New York Times on Thursday, September 21. The article, written by Richard Nixon, was titled, "The Vietnam War: A Personal View." The article was presented as a personal reflection on the war, but it was actually a political advertisement designed to support Nixon's re-election campaign. The article was misleading because it presented Nixon's views as if they were the majority view of the American people, when in fact they are not.

The Mechanics of a Concert

By Bill Roll

There are so many styles in modern, pop music today, it’s no won-sort to say that you can’t count on certain concert styles to appear. You can’t just see, for instance, that a certain concert will be a high clarinet recording, and then a recording of the Bach, and then a recording of the Beethoven.

For instance, you might want, for instance, that the concert will be a high clarinet recording, and then a recording of the Bach, and then a recording of the Beethoven.

So, you can’t just see, for instance, that a certain concert will be a high clarinet recording, and then a recording of the Bach, and then a recording of the Beethoven.

Unfortunately, it’s all too true.

Something, however, is certainly fine in No. ft, where flute, clarinet, and viola are used to bring out the tune. I won’t say that the flute is perfect, but it’s not perfect. Both the flute and clarinet are very well played.

Apathy Hurts Draft Counseling

by Bob Black

Lack of interest prevalent, but lack of action is beginning to show. SUNYA still has a draft counseling office but it seems to exist in name only. Students are generally satisfied with the counseling they receive when they go there.

Director last year, pointed out obstacles were revealed by Messick's attempt to train new counselors. "We had come up with a number of people who might be interested, but they had not had the time to train," Messick said. Messick's assistant, Jane, an editor for the students' newspaper, also said that the counseling office had not been very active this year, partly because of lack of trained personnel.

The fourth problem, and perhaps the biggest, is that the school does not have the facilities to conduct the counseling office. Messick said that the counseling office is run by volunteers, but that they are not really volunteers, because they are paid a small stipend.

The fifth problem is the lack of trained personnel. Messick said that the counseling office has been relying on volunteers, but that they are not really volunteers, because they are paid a small stipend.

The eighteenth problem, and perhaps the biggest, is that the school does not have the facilities to conduct the counseling office. Messick said that the counseling office is run by volunteers, but that they are not really volunteers, because they are paid a small stipend.

The nineteenth problem is the lack of trained personnel. Messick said that the counseling office has been relying on volunteers, but that they are not really volunteers, because they are paid a small stipend.

How It Could Have Been SUNYA of the Future
by Diana Eyemanish

The campus could have been the Administration Building lobby containing many buildings which were never built, and which probably will not be built for some years. They include new graduate dorms, a conference center, planetarium, and a field house.

The conditions of the present are not necessarily permanent. Walter Tuttle of Campus Planning explains the situation as merely a "temporary moratorium which might last for a decade, more or less." Once the University is given the go-ahead it explains the situation as possibly a "permanent extension was planned. An expansion of the space

The campus could have been a conference center, planetarium, and a field house. According to Walter Tuttle of Campus Planning, the halt in SUNYA construction may not be permanent. If the state fiscal crisis cases somewhat, it is conceivable that funds could be alloted for building some of the structures recently slashed.

When will the new buildings be built? The answer is simply a lack of funding to justify the entire process. As the University stands presently, it is not being pressed for lecture center space, it may be for the first time.
