Netmen dump Oswego in prep for SUNYACs

By Marc Herman

The 8-1 road victory over the Oswego State Beavers this past Saturday afternoon in the first round of the SUNYAC tournament at the Van Pelt Tennis Courts proved to be a fine start to the SUNYACs., opening in Albany on October 15th.

"Dane tennis will continue to improve throughout the week," said Coach Mark Trierney. "The Danes are now 3-3 in doubles, but the singles matches are staying strong. More losses should be expected as the week progresses." According to Trierney, the Danes will be playing their best tennis when it counts, and the Danes are expected to come out on top for the SUNYACs.

Dane Ulrich and the men's tennis team are looking to defend their SUNYAC crown.

Professors angered over textbook shortages

By Beth Divine

"American undergraduates, just coming from one of the nation's leading institutions, are finding that the bookstore doesn't have all the textbooks they need," said SUNYA Associate English Professor Jeff Herman. "SUNYA students have to work without books, which is really irritating." "It simply doesn't make economic sense," said SUNYA student, Sonny Somers. "Even professors admit that the bookstore has deliberately over-ordered. They do make a maximum estimate and order accordingly," said SUNYA bookstore manager, Marj Campell. The bookstore's policy is to order around the middle of August, when the bookstore receives final pre-registration figures from the Registrar's Office. "The resulting delay in the arrival of Russian textbooks from the Soviet Union, will be lifted in November, and the late night buses will now leave the circle at 12:30, 1:30 and 2:30 am," according to Student Association Vice-President, Jell Schneider. According to Campbell, they generally order the same number of textbooks as there are students enrolled, unless this is in conflict with the professor's request, in which case, the bookstore receives final pre-registration figures from the Registrar's Office. "The order is reduced without notification," said Schneider. "We have additional copies shipped to the bookstore, but the professor is notified." "It simply doesn't make economic sense," said Schneider. "We have more to benefit if we stay in America," said SUNYA students. "The late night buses will now leave the circle at 12:30, 1:30 and 2:30 am," according to Student Association Vice-President, Jell Schneider. Rockefeller College designs double program

By Melissa Zan

SUNYA students may be able to start taking graduate courses downtown campus that would count toward both their senior with at least 56 credit hours B.A. and their master's of public administration approved by the University Senate, would allow a student to complete their bachelor's degree in about one-and-a-half years.

The combined program, which would begin in 1984, would allow a student to complete both their undergraduate and master's degrees in three years. The program would be administered by The Rockefeller College of Public Affairs, which includes political science, public administration, and international affairs.

To be eligible for the combined program, a student must meet the following requirements:

- Be an undergraduate student in good academic standing.
- Have completed at least 56 credit hours toward their B.A.
- Meet the admission requirements for the master's program in public administration.

Applications can be obtained from the Rockefeller College of Public Affairs.

"We proposed economics, political science, and psychology as the undergraduate major for the program," explained Han. The program would allow students to combine their undergraduate and graduate coursework in a way that would benefit both their academic and professional goals.

The program would be designed to be flexible, allowing students to tailor their coursework to their individual interests and career goals. Students would be encouraged to take courses in areas that complement their undergraduate major and provide them with a well-rounded education.

"The combined program is designed for students who are looking to earn both their undergraduate and graduate degrees in a shorter amount of time," said Han. "By completing their undergraduate and graduate coursework concurrently, students can save time and money while gaining valuable experience.

The combined program would be an excellent opportunity for students who are academically strong and committed to their studies. By completing both their undergraduate and graduate degrees in a shorter amount of time, students can gain a competitive edge in the job market and increase their earning potential.

Applications for the combined program will be available in the fall of 1983. More information about the program can be obtained from the Rockefeller College of Public Affairs.

Watt—another policy?!

One of the biggest attractions to oppose sense in the current political climate has been its anachronistic appeal. For too many, the allure of policies is not based on the merits of the issue at hand, but on the emotional appeal of the politician who espouses them. This appeal is often fueled by the over-the-top rhetoric and grandstanding that has become all too common in the political arena.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that many policies are not subject to rigorous scrutiny or debate. Instead, they are presented as a fait accompli or a fait accompli, with little room for public input or discussion. This lack of transparency and accountability only serves to further erode the public's trust in the political process.

The real issue is not the policies themselves, but the way they are presented and the context in which they are discussed. Policies should be presented in a clear and concise manner, with all the facts and figures necessary to make an informed decision. The public should be encouraged to participate in the debate, to ask questions, and to challenge the arguments presented.

Raw deal

This is important. What the hell happened to grassroots democracy? Theromatic tactics often involve a lot of noise and glare, but little substance. This is not the way democracy is supposed to work. Democracy is about dialogue, about listening to different voices, and about finding common ground.

The problem is not that grassroots democracy is not working. The problem is that it is not being used. The public is often too busy with their own lives to take the time to participate in the democratic process. This is where media and political organizations come into play. They can help to bring attention to the issues and to the people who are affected by them.

LETTERS

Poor representation

To the Editor:

The lack of representation in the current political climate is staggering. People are often left out of the decision-making process, and their voices are not being heard.

The problem is not that representation is not possible. The problem is that it is not being pursued. Political organizations and media outlets have a responsibility to ensure that the voices of all people are heard, not just the voices of the elite.

Egg on access

To the Editor:

The lack of access to essential services is a serious problem. People are often denied access to the services they need, simply because they cannot afford to pay.

The problem is not that access to services is not possible. The problem is that it is not being pursued. Political organizations and media outlets have a responsibility to ensure that people have access to the services they need, regardless of their ability to pay.

Homophobia evident

To the Editor:

The lack of representation of the LGBTQ+ community is a serious problem. People are often denied equal access to services and opportunities, simply because of their sexual orientation.

The problem is not that representation of the LGBTQ+ community is not possible. The problem is that it is not being pursued. Political organizations and media outlets have a responsibility to ensure that the voices of the LGBTQ+ community are heard, and that they have equal access to services and opportunities.

Don't walk alone

To the Editor:

The lack of representation of the LGBTQ+ community is a serious problem. People are often denied equal access to services and opportunities, simply because of their sexual orientation.

The problem is not that representation of the LGBTQ+ community is not possible. The problem is that it is not being pursued. Political organizations and media outlets have a responsibility to ensure that the voices of the LGBTQ+ community are heard, and that they have equal access to services and opportunities.

This is not a call for people to get involved. This is a call for people to demand that their voices are heard, and that they have equal access to services and opportunities.

Plains Lee Broussard, sophomore class president during the student elections last spring, "I promised during last spring's class election to make it into a whole week of events that they thought it was a good idea, and wanted to introduce them.

"It all started out as a way to get attention onto the Oct. 17-21 event, which will include football and basketball games, and t-shirts."

"We got back in touch with the cereal company — makers of Capt'n Crunch — and students will gorge on the Oct. 17-21 event, which will include football and basketball games, and t-shirts."

"I'm not in the habit of going out and introducing such prizes as 10 expenses-paid trips to other dyes we could use," says Jim Cundiff, Lewisburg, Tenn. (CT). "Ever since we slopped making the red M and M Mars Candy Company in 1976 because of a study linking those dyes to cancer, we have continued using in the world."

"The money, however, is for all Nigerian students worldwide, not just those in the U.S."

"It is our hope that the Nigerian government will continue to do a better job of making the student health care system more accessible to the student," Jervis says.

"Although those students would be of considerable help, the plan is to continue to do a better job of making the student health care system more accessible to the student," Jervis says.

"The debt problems, however, are not restricted to Nigeria. There are serious economic troubles in Venezuela, of course, they are also dependent on oil exports for economic health."

"Our recommendations are to make it known to Nigerian students and to spend some money to make the student health care system more accessible to the student."

Women harriers defeated by Hunter College

By Dona Cady

The Albany State women's cross-country team suffered near total defeat of its race against Hunter College in a dual meet Saturday at Van Cortlandt Park, the home course of the Fordham University Rams.

The loss was expected, but the score of 23-46 was considerably wider than the four previous contests against Hunter.

"They were really the only team we had to race," said team captain Christopher Callaci, "so it was a lot easier to compete with them in almost every race since the top few runners were so competitive.

"But still, we wanted to do better than our last outing because we were feeling much stronger this week.

"We were really excited for this meet, so we worked really hard this week to improve our performance. We have been improving every meet, and we hope to continue our progress next week.

The New York Times

In what can be labeled as a major upset, the Albany State football team, fighting on a new field in its new Guilderland Division II district, defeated Southern Connecticut State, 22-12.

The opening drive of the game seemed to set the tone for the entire contest. After four plays, the Danes were forced to punt. The Owl defense was able to recover the punt and return it to the 24-yard line. The Owl offense followed with a 16-yard touchdown run by quarterback Wayne Anderson.

Down 16-0, the Owls started to build on the next possession. With no Owl defender within 10 yards of the ball on a reverse end around, in went 22-yard pass play.

The safest play for the Owls was wide receiver Bob Brien look the ball and sprinted into the endzone, costing Southern Connecticut two points instead of a touchdown.
