Belated Bidding Better

Last Monday at 1:00 p.m., the fall rush season of 1940 began for the boys of State University.

This year the bidding has begun with a rush and by the time all are finished the whole college will have been visited by the various fraternities. The bidding this year is expected to be much better than in the past seasons.

A Queen and A Quarter

Robert Hertel and Anne Rattray

We asked Robert Hertel and Anne Rattray the other day about their experiences so far in the fall rush season. They said that they had been very much impressed with the enthusiasm of the boys and the amount of work they were doing. The expenses, however, were a bit high, but they were not complaints.

Disgruntled - Disappointed

When asked what they thought of the bidding process, they both said that they were very much disappointed. They said that they had expected to find more enthusiasm and interest, but they were not satisfied with the results.

This year's frosh aggregation will regret the news. Much more gratifying was the redoubled cooperation of the administration, student body, and faculty.

Proposed Week-end

Many articles written in the past season. Sports commentators seem to believe that the proposed week-end will be desired above all others.

Last Friday State College's chess match will be a league contest of gaps in schedule.

John Hoose, James Gillen, Roy Sommers, with the possible exception of George Snow, who hit the cords for 16 minutes, will play for the Grads.

Poems Must Be Really Bad
For Mellwaine's Collection
by Andrew Talus
We have some poetry coming in from the state college, as a matter of fact, and I think we should have a number of these to select from. Some of them are quite interesting. One of them I particularly liked was a little poem by a girl named Smith. It was about a summer holiday, and it was very simple. She described the weather, the people she saw, and her own feelings. It was straightforward and sincere, and it made me think of the kind of poetry that I always like best.

"To get to my collection, we must pass through a little town called "Smithville." In this town there are two schools. One is a public school, and the other is a private school. The private school is called "Smithville Academy." It was founded by Mr. Smith, a wealthy man, and he wanted to provide good education for the children of his town. He paid for the school, and he made sure that it was well run and that the teachers were good. The public school is not as good as the private school, but it has its own merits.

The town is surrounded by beautiful scenery. There are hills and valleys, and the scenery changes constantly. One day it might be sunny and bright, and the next day it might be overcast and dreary. The weather is quite unpredictable.

There are many people in this town. Some are rich, and some are poor. Some are friendly, and some are unfriendly. But everyone is happy, and everyone is content.

I think this poem is a great example of the kind of poetry that I like best. It is simple, it is sincere, and it is true to life. It is a poem that everybody can understand, and everybody can appreciate.

Smith Will Discuss
Textbook Teaching
To Speak About Observations
Of Unusual Situation
by Andrew Talus
Mr. Smith is a well-known teacher, and he is coming to speak at the state college on Monday evening. He will be discussing the teaching of books. He believes that the traditional approach of reading a textbook and then discussing it is not the best way to teach. He will argue for a more active approach, where the students are encouraged to think and to question. He will give examples of how he has taught books in the past, and he will explain why he thinks it is such a good approach.

In his book, "Principles of Education," Mr. Smith has written extensively about the teaching of books. He believes that the traditional method is too passive, and that it does not encourage the students to think for themselves. He argues that the students should be encouraged to think critically, and to question the information that is presented to them.

He will give examples of how he has taught books in the past, and he will explain why he thinks it is such a good approach. He will also talk about the benefits of this approach, and he will explain how it can be incorporated into the classroom.

Mr. Smith is a respected teacher, and his ideas are sure to be well-received by his students. I look forward to hearing his talk on Monday evening.
