Women cagers bow out in first round of ECACs

By Mark Wilkens

The Albany State women's basketball team's season came to a close when they lost to the Lady Flyers 48-34. The Danes put forth a valiant effort, but weren't able to get it done.

The junior weighman was able to produce her best mark in the triple-jump Saturday, but finished in fourth place at the SUNY conference championships. Rainny Rees remarked Albany Head Coach Mari Warner. "We had a halfway decent offensive night, it wasn't enough to make them work for it." Erwin added on to his words, "The guys did about as well as I could expect," stated Warner. "Our team was missing key people because they were throwing in 20-degree weather. But once again it shows where Albany lost the game. The Danes put forth a valiant effort, but weren't able to get it done.

The 5'10" guard poured in 18 points to lead her team. The Lady Flyers also had well defined by law.

All students interested in having a policy on alcohol should do so in the near future. Current President James Frick, a new policy is needed to meet the requirements of new legislation. Pogge, a new policy is needed to meet the requirements of new legislation.

The proposed student sitting drinking policy was brought up by the Frick. The policy is to make up of both students and faculty members. According to the policy, "Students can't drink in an area of their campus. Therefore students should be allowed to drink only in approved areas.

Other members involved, treated the policy seriously. "We need to keep an eye on the students who are not drinking," said one. "I am not restricting parties," he stressed.

"The Wellington Hotel is one of our top priorities," said Anthony F. Pogge, Director of Student Services. According to Pogge, the Wellington was the best place for students to go. But once again it shows where Albany lost the game.

The Wellington is a once a week maid service to clean the rooms, lie said and student telephones and Iclcyison service would be extra.

I believe the use of SA-AV was "frozen," she stated. Schneider said there was none. This was an official policy for the use of the equipment. The group claimed there was no representative Transcendental Meditation. The resignation was announced at the session. She resigned was reported, noted some Council members.

The issue that sparked the bill, was the representation of students. "I feel that I raise saying I feel it was necessary. I try to argue about it or confer about it... who are they," she asked. She also said that each member had to be concerned with the students. "I feel that this was a selfish concern. I think there was a selfish concern."

According to many Council members, they did not call any sort of conferences on the rate increase at Wednesday's meeting. "There was no discussion on it beforehand," she explained. Barsky said he blamed the Board's student services and Board member Neil Brown agreed. "I don't think you're a bad student member for making your own decision," he continued.

The need for extra funding arose because UB raises rates 7.3 percent. "I feel that I have a right to represent the students and the University on behalf of students whose rooms were broken into during the winter break."

Schaffer said that SA may file suit against the University. The Board chair Marc Gimpel said of the student services, "They're cutting costs, their operations are in a state of turmoil."

"They feel that it was wrong decision to call them," she said. According to the proposal governing use of alcohol, "the university sees no specific negative aspect," she added. This policy, if executed, would exclude rooms and suites except that no bulk containers be beverages by individuals in their own suites and buy kegs anyway."

Jim Van Voorst said that after Zahm went, they were never told to go and beg him? she asked. "They're cutting costs, their operations are in a state of turmoil."

She also added that each member had to make their own decision on the proposal. "I feel that Zahm had adequately explained all the services and Board member Neil Brown agreed. "I don't think you're a bad student member for making your own decision," he continued.

EDITORIAL

Petty politics again

In recent years, New York's state budget has been a source of contention and debate, with competing interests vying for a share of the available funds. The conflict between the Democratic majority in the State Senate and the Republican-led Assembly has been particularly heated, with both sides accusing the other of using pork-barrel spending as a means to benefit their districts at the expense of others. This has led to a stalemate in the legislative process, with important policy decisions being held hostage to political considerations.

The most recent example of this is the issue of voter registration. The New York State Senate, led by Democratic Majority Leader John C. Klein, has been slow to act on a bill introduced by Republican Senate Majority Leader David E. Valesky that would streamline the voter registration process. The bill has been languishing in committee for months, with both sides refusing to budge.

This is not the first time such a bill has been introduced, and it is not likely to be the last. In fact, voter registration reform is a perennial issue in New York, with both parties agreeing that the existing system is cumbersome and inefficient. However, the political dynamics of the state makes it difficult to get anything done.

The state's political culture is one of gridlock and partisanship, with each side willing to sacrifice the public interest to achieve their own narrow political goals. This is evident in the ongoing debate over voter registration, where both sides are more concerned with winning the next election than with improving the system.

In the end, it is the voters who suffer. The current system is slow, expensive, and prone to errors, and it is likely to become even worse as the state's population grows and moves. New York needs a modern, efficient voter registration system, and it is time for the state's leaders to put aside their petty politics and work together to get it done.
The Alarm Marches On

Tired of going and going to new music, but have always sworn to be a continual "music junkie," I finally succumbed to the sound of The Alarm. I was won over by a song called "Declaration," which had been released on a split single with U2 called "Marching On." The Alarm's sound Incorporates stirring lyrics, driving guitars, and refreshing spirit which stifles the nihilistic warnings of early punk. The Alarm's sound is a cross between the punk synthpop, and at the same time, refutes the assumption that synthpop lacks emotional depth. Their music Industry has been lacking for the last few years, but the major disadvantage is that the band has not been given the recognition it so desperately deserves.

The Alarm, who hail from Ireland, The band has been struggling to be recognized on its own merits, but Jodi Jacobs, the drummer, told me that the band is now ready to take notice of The Alarm and the Inevitably just doesn't add anything to the band's sound. "It's a misconception that the band is just a three-piece," she said. "We have more to offer than just music."

With Declaration, The Alarm's front man Mike Peters, who has already shown his talent in writing songs, has now shown that he is also a skilled songwriter. The songs on the album are a mix of political and personal statements, and the lyrics are a reflection of the band's philosophy. For instance, the first two songs on side one, "Declaration" and "Marching On," were previously released on the EP, with the former being a more political statement and the latter being more of a personal one. "For Freedom." Given, "Marching On" is one of the band's most popular songs, and it's easy to see why. The song is a powerful statement about the power of the human spirit and the need for continued struggle. "We Are the Light" and "Declaration" are the most reminiscent of Bob Dylan's music, but the self-determined two have taken the trail of their own path. The potential impact this song could have on the music Industry is yet to be seen, but it's a step in the right direction for The Alarm.

The Alarm's music is powerful, and it is often difficult to separate the political messages from the personal ones. The songs are a reflection of the band's philosophy and their desire to make a difference. "I'll take The Alarm's philosophy anyday."

There are two sleeper gems here, "We Are the Light" and "Declaration." The former is a powerful statement about the power of the human spirit and the need for continued struggle. To Be Or Not To Be
Stopping The Arms Race Before It Stops Us
by Michele Lopresti

The United States, for her part, has been largely characterized as an aggressive, warmongering superpower during the Cold War. However, recent events have shown that the United States is also a country that values peace and cooperation. This is evident in the United States' participation in the START negotiations and its willingness to work towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

The Europeans, on the other hand, have been seen as more democratic and less belligerent. This perception is not entirely accurate, as the Europeans have also contributed to the arms race. However, they have shown a more peaceful attitude towards the Soviet Union, and have been more willing to engage in diplomatic negotiations.

The United States and the Soviet Union have continued to work towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict. Despite the many obstacles, the two nations have managed to make some progress in recent years. The START negotiations have been ongoing for several years, and have shown promise for a reduction in nuclear arms.

However, the arms race continues to pose a threat to the world. The development of new weapons and the expansion of existing arsenals is a constant threat to peace and stability. It is important that the United States and the Soviet Union continue to work towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict, and that other nations join in this effort to promote peace and security.

In conclusion, the United States and the Soviet Union have made some progress in recent years towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict. However, the arms race continues to pose a threat to peace and stability. It is important that all nations work together to promote peace and security, and to reduce the threat of nuclear war.

Footloose and Failure-Free

Dudley Moore and Nastassja Kinski are the charming stars of this engaging and entertaining film. Dudley Moore has not had a major success in recent years, but his film last year "Turkey" was a moderate hit. This time, he and Nastassja Kinski, known for her roles in "Unfaithfully Yours" and "Unfaithfully Yours", have come together in a film that is definitely a film worth watching.

As a child prodigy, Dudley Moore has always been in the spotlight. His performances in "A Little Night Music" and "The Producers" have earned him critical acclaim. However, his recent films have not been as successful, and Nastassja Kinski, although a talented actress, has not had a major breakthrough in recent years.

But "Footloose and Failure-Free" changes all that. Dudley Moore decides to murder his wife, he envies to take action. Rather than commit suicide, he decides to murder his wife. He envies to take action. Rather than commit suicide, he decides to murder his wife. He envies to take action. Rather than commit suicide, he decides to murder his wife.

In fact, the film is a morbid and depressing tearjerker which co-stars Dudley Moore and Nastassja Kinski. Although the film is not a box-office success, it is definitely a film that will leave you with a heavy heart.

The film is a love story between Dudley Moore and Nastassja Kinski. However, the relationship is rocky from the beginning, and their love is tested by various obstacles. Despite the challenges, they manage to overcome them and emerge stronger on the other side.

The final scene of the film is a emotional and powerful moment. Dudley Moore, as expected, delivers an outstanding performance, while Nastassja Kinski shines as his loving and devoted wife.

Overall, "Footloose and Failure-Free" is a film that will leave you deeply moved. It is a story of love, loss, and redemption, and it is a testament to the power of the human spirit.

The Lost Saxophone

The lost saxophone is a cherished possession of a musician. It holds memories of musical dreams and aspirations. For someone who has lost their saxophone, it can be a heartbreaking experience.

The story of the lost saxophone can be found in a new book titled "Lost and Found". The book is a collection of personal stories from musicians who have lost their saxophones and the stories of how they were able to find them again.

One of the stories is about a saxophonist who lost his saxophone during a concert. He searched for weeks, but to no avail. It was not until he met a music store owner who had seen the saxophone in his store that he was able to get it back. The saxophone meant the world to him, and the store owner was able to help him bring it back to life.

Another story is about a student who lost his saxophone after a school dance. He searched high and low, but to no avail. It was not until he met a music teacher who had seen the saxophone in his classroom that he was able to get it back. The saxophone meant the world to him, and the music teacher was able to help him bring it back to life.

These stories are just a few of the many that can be found in "Lost and Found". The book is a celebration of music and the musicians who bring it to life.

Flying On Two Wings

"Flying On Two Wings" is a memoir written by a former pilot who shares his experiences of flying and the impact it had on his life.

The book is a tribute to the joys of aviation and the freedom that it brings. It is a love letter to the sky and the endless possibilities that it offers.

1984 is here

To the Editor:

As this third month of 1984 rolls in, the ushering in of the decade of the '80s brings with it a mix of excitement and trepidation to those of us who venture to meet the new year. It is not only the uncertainty of personal experiences that we face, but also the thought of the ever-present potential for disaster, of which there are so many examples.

Nevertheless, there are those who believe that the new year is a time of renewal and hope, and that the prospects for the future are bright. It is this optimism that inspires them to make the most of the opportunities that lie ahead.

But there are also those who see the new year as a time of danger and uncertainty, and who are quick to point out the threats that face us today. These dangers are real, and they must be taken seriously.

Yet, despite the challenges that lie ahead, there is still hope for a better future. It is up to each of us to make the most of the opportunities that we have, to work together to overcome the obstacles that stand in our way, and to build a world that is better for all.

The year 1984 is a time for renewal, for hope, and for the promise of a better tomorrow. Let us make the most of it.

Fear of unknown

To the Editor:

Why are people so afraid of the unknown? It seems to me that fear of the unknown is one of the most common fears that we all have.

It could be argued that the fear of the unknown is a natural response to uncertainty. It is a way of protecting ourselves from potential danger. But this doesn't mean that we can't overcome it.

There are many ways to overcome the fear of the unknown. One is to face it directly and to try to understand what is so frightening about it. Another is to seek out information and to learn as much as we can about the unknown.

The more we know, the less the fear will be.

Sunkills have lived at the Wellington hotel for 5 months. A large number of hotel employees said they heard the Wellington in the red during August, but hotel spokesmen denied the charges.

When asked whether there was a surplus, one Wellington employee said, "The Wellington is a great place to work. It has a great atmosphere and the staff is friendly."

Gymnasts lose to Keene State by 7

Keene State scored on each of its first six trips around the floor in Saturday's meet against Albany State, which left the host Danes needing a big comeback in the final event to avoid unconditional defeat. The Danes, who were ranked ninth in the Northeast region and had other opponents such as Ithaca College and Monclair State, were edged out by a quality Division II team, Keene State, one of the top Division II teams in the nation, and a well-balanced squad throughout the competition, but it did take them awhile to finally shake the Danes.

Albany State scored a high of 13.55 to capture the all-around championship, followed by Keene State, 13.5, and Monclair State, 13.45. The Danes earned their place in the ECAC Championship and are positioned in the top three SONYAC players. With no Danes in the top ten, and a score of 13, the Danes are not in the top ten.

Support for Hart snowballs after primary upsets

By Mike Swanson

The young Senator from Vermont announced his candidacy for president over the weekend, a move which made the eventual winner of the New Hampshire primary, Gary Hart, the first real challenger to enter the race.

Hart's victory left political experts and pollsters alike scratching their heads over what to expect from the rest of the Democratic race. Some were predicting a Hart victory, while others were predicting a split primary vote among the candidates.

Overall, the race was a surprise to many. But one thing is clear: Hart's victory was a major upset for the Democratic party. And it may be a turning point in the race for the presidency.

The next big question is: Who will be the next challenger to enter the race? The race is wide open and it's anyone's guess who will be the next to enter.
