Alumni Quad Procedures Election Questioned

Student Rally Hinders Proposal

SA Court Stops Council Vote

Ruffo Calls It Unconstitutional

Chancellor Wharton expressed his disapproval of the decision in an interview after the Board meeting. He said that the Board had made a "serious error" in its decision and that the Board's action was "unconstitutional."

"We're looking for an understanding of the people who are interested in the results," said Ruffo. "We're not going to let them be disappointed in the process."

The rally, organized by the program to stop the Board from making a decision, was attended by about 500 people. The rally was held on the SUNYA campus in Albany, and was attended by many students, faculty members, and alumni. The rally was organized by the SUNYA Campus Students Association, which is the largest group on the SUNYA campus. The rally was called to protest the Board's decision to cut the student's tuition.

"It's not fair. The Board is making a decision to cut our tuition, and we're not going to let them get away with it," said one of the rally participants. "We're not going to let them just take our money and run."
Carter and the Peace Talks

WASHINGTON—President Carter presented a four-point peace plan to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin yesterday, setting the stage for another round of peace talks. The plan, developed over the past two weeks, is designed to build on the groundwork laid during the Camp David Accords of 1979.

Outlook for Concluding a Treaty Between Egypt and Israel

Scientists from both countries have been working to prepare a comprehensive document that outlines the terms of a treaty. The document, which is expected to be finalized within the next few days, will be presented to the leaders during a meeting scheduled for next week.

Chinese troops have been advancing slowly into Vietnam, with some gains and losses in the ongoing conflict. The Chinese are reportedly pushing towards the Vietnamese border in order to secure a strategic advantage.

Bus Drivers Demand Security

New York (AP) - A small group of bus drivers demanded better security for their colleagues following a recent incident where a bus was hijacked by a woman claiming to have a gun. The drivers, who operate for a major New York City transportation company, say they want increased security measures, including more police presence on board and better safety training for drivers.

Records May Soon Be Cleaned

Washington (AP) - The Social Security Administration is set to begin a pilot program to clean up erroneous records by 1990. The program, which is expected to be implemented in select areas, will involve the accurate recording of Social Security numbers and names. The goal is to ensure that all records are accurate and up-to-date.

Oil Squeeze in Early Stages

New York (AP) - The recent oil embargo has led to fluctuations in oil prices, with both increased and decreased demand for oil. The embargo is expected to last for a few more months, and it remains to be seen how it will affect the global oil market.

Students Protest Loss Of R.A.

Abortion Clinics Pose Problems

The ban on abortion clinics in the United States has led to a number of problems. One of the main issues is the lack of access to abortion services for those who need them. While some states have eased restrictions, others have made it more difficult to obtain abortion services.

Pittman Hall Makes Living Easy

Pittman Hall is a small building on campus that caters to a specific group of students. It provides a range of services, such as laundry, haircuts, and food, to make the living experience more comfortable for its residents.

Convenience Dispensed

The radio station is sending two big game in Kentucky! The radio station is sending two.

Today, a woman looking to end an unwanted pregnancy can simply contact Planned Parenthood or another clinic for resources. The procedure is safe and effective, and it is important to find a reputable provider.

There is no easy answer to the complex issue of abortion. However, it is crucial to ensure that women have access to information and resources that allow them to make informed decisions.

Atrophied Freedom

By Hubert Dicker

"Atrophied Freedom is a condition characterized by a gradual loss of vitality and effectiveness. It is often accompanied by an increase in apathy and a decrease in the willingness to engage in collective action. The roots of this phenomenon can be found in a number of factors, including the erosion of political will, the decline of social cohesion, and the weakening of the concept of the public interest. The implications of Atrophied Freedom are profound, and they underscore the importance of preserving and nurturing democratic institutions and values."

Long Hard Ride

To the Editor:

The battle for freedom and justice is not always fought in the form of traditional combat. Often, it takes place through the slow, methodical process of legal maneuvering and political advocacy. The case of the Albany State University Board of Trustees is a prime example of this. The Board's decision to pursue the divestment of the university's stock in a South African company is an act of courage and principle. It demonstrates the power of collective action and the importance of holding corporations accountable for their actions.

SUNYA Endorsing Apartheid?

By Kevin J. Sullivan

"The SUNYA Board of Trustees' recent decision to endorse apartheid in South Africa is a clear violation of the institution's commitment to human rights and social justice. The Board's actions are not only morally reprehensible, but they also send a dangerous message to our students and the broader community. SUNYA's reputation for leadership and integrity is at stake, and it is imperative that the Board reverse this decision and take steps to address the global human rights crisis."

The Weekly Game: Gambling Away The Night And Day

Brian Kurtzer

One, or maybe two at a time, guys arrive at the apartment. Most bring large quantities of beer. And money. In fact, most bring large quantities of beer. And money. Of course, not everyone.

Once there are about six guys present, they sit down in the kitchen around a street-level folding table which has replaced the regular kitchen table. A wooden box containing cards has been pulled off to the side before each game. It is not placed in the table into which they each empty the contents of their wallets. The emptying of the table is made of a green, felt-like material which is sewn into several places.

If it is a particularly important night, someone has brought a brand new deck of playing cards. That green breaks the seal, removes the cards from the box. Then deals them face up around the table.

Kastle: Art On His Own Terms

If you were lucky, you saw the youthful, music-producing Leonardo Kastle's film, "The Universal Killer," when it appeared on campus two weeks ago. Thoroughly "harsh" is probably not the right word. That is, unless you were the kind of person who would identify with the "universal killer," the morbid figure who wanders around in a slow sort of way, looking for victims. Once you see the film, however, you may find it more something than meets the eye.

To fully understand Kastle, one has to consider his background. The son of a Jewish father and a French mother, Kastle was born in Los Angeles in 1947. Like many of his generation, Kastle went into the movies for the same reason he went into music: he couldn't stand the idea of going to work for a living. However, Kastle did manage to hold a job at an art shop, a fact which Kastle finds amusing.

"I was going to be a painter," Kastle says, "but I decided to become a filmmaker instead." And so he did. Kastle has been making films for over 10 years, and has worked with such stars as Martha Beck and Janet Fay. In his film "The Universal Killer," Kastle explores the idea of a universal killer who roams the earth, slaying the innocent.

Kastle's latest film, "Blast From the Past," is a reflection of Kastle's love for music. The film features a band called "David Johansen Live," who perform music from the 1960s to the present.

"I wanted to do something that was a reflection of my own experiences," Kastle says. "I wanted to create a film that was a true representation of the music I love." And so he did. "Blast From the Past" is a film that is sure to please music fans of all ages.

Kastle is not just a filmmaker, however. He is also a musician. He plays guitar and vocals, and has released several albums of his own. Kastle's music is a reflection of his life experiences, and is sure to please anyone who appreciates his unique style.

"I create music because it's a way for me to express myself," Kastle says. "I create music because it's a way for me to communicate my ideas to others." And so he does. Kastle's music is a true reflection of his own experiences, and is sure to please anyone who appreciates his unique style.

Yankee Manager Dilemma: Billy Or Sparky?

By Gary Anderson in New York

A tough decision looms for Yankee Manager George Steinbrenner. After a miserable 1978 season, he needs a manager with the right style and approach to lead his team to success in 1979.

Billy Martin, the fiery, aggressive manager of the New York Yankees, is a natural fit. He has a proven track record of winning and knows how to motivate players. However, Martin's reputation for being difficult can be a concern.

Sparky Anderson, on the other hand, is more low-key and diplomatic. He has a strong work ethic and has been successful in managing other teams. Anderson is also known for his ability to develop young talent.

Steinbrenner has been considering both options and is expected to make a decision soon. The decision will be crucial for the future of the franchise and could have a major impact on the team's performance in the upcoming season.

Danes Begin Title Chase Tonight

Face Savannah St. In Opening Round; Clune Doubtful After Spraining Ankle

by David Osborne

The Albany State basketball team has borrowed a new attitude in the past few weeks. After a week in Florida and a game at the National Basketball Invitational, the Danes are coming off a 66-62 win over Georgia State University, and are playing with a confidence and enthusiasm that has its fans buzzing about a possible run at the NCAA Tournament.

This new attitude was on display as the Danes took on Georgia State in the opening round of the NIT. Although the Danes were down early, they fought back to take the lead in the second half and held on for the win. The team has a tough challenge ahead of them, however, as they face Savannah State in the next round.

Meanwhile, the Danes have been dealt a setback with the injury of forward John Clune. Clune sprained his ankle in the Georgia State game and is questionable for the Savannah State game. He is expected to miss some time, but his status will be updated as the week progresses.

by Mary Daley

The University of Albany has installed new fire alarm covers in all of its dormitories. The covers were installed in an attempt to prevent vandalism, and the university has been pleased with the results.

The covers are made of metal and are designed to withstand abuse. They are also easy to install and remove, making them a practical solution to the problem.
