Remake of Agatha Christie Mystery Needs Originality, Directing, Acting

in Douglas Bedfick

Never let it be said that an Agatha Christie novel does not become a part of the tradition of movie-making. But the recent complete remake of Hercule Poirot, which has just been released to the public, has caused a great deal of discussion and controversy among both the fans of the original novel and those who are new to the series.

The most significant changes made in the new version are the addition of new characters and the changes in the setting of the story. The novel, which was originally set in a small English village, has been moved to a larger city, and this has led to some significant changes in the plot. The new setting has allowed the writers to incorporate new elements into the story, such as a new murder weapon and a new suspect, which have added an extra layer of complexity to the plot.

In the new version, the main character, Hercule Poirot, is played by a different actor than in the original. This has caused some controversy, as fans of the original have expressed concern that the character is not being portrayed in the same way. However, the new actor has managed to bring a fresh perspective to the role, and this has added an extra layer of interest to the story.

Another significant change in the new version is the addition of a new love interest for Hercule Poirot. This has added a new emotional element to the story, which has been well-received by audiences. Overall, the new version of Hercule Poirot has been well-received, and it has managed to capture the essence of the original novel while also bringing a fresh perspective to the story.

Warren Crow, State's First National Champion

When grappler Warren Crow walked off the mat after becoming the first collegiate Division I champion last year, he was being recognized for such a positive move in sending Crow to compete for the NCAA National Championship, a move that many considered a step in the right direction for the sport of collegiate wrestling.

And so it was with Crow, that he became the first wrestler in State history to become a national champion, winning decisively all four of his 138-pound matches.

Crow is a transfer from Lock Haven High School, where he earned both the state and national titles in his junior and senior years. He has been working out at the Cumberland Recreation Center, practicing swimming to keep his weight down.
