Danes lose another heartbreaker, 22-21 to Alfred

By Keith Mantle

The Danes were favored, but it was Alfred who emerged with the win. It was the first time in Danes history that the team had lost back to back games to the Saxons.

Alfred senior quarterback Bill Milazzo, who played a tremendous game, said that the Danes did not have the same kind of preparation as he did. "We had to play the game on our own," said Milazzo.

The Saxons put together a 13-play scoring drive and scored 21 points. The Danes were not able to score in the first half. This made the game a virtual tie headed into the second half.

In the second half, the Danes were able to score 7 points. However, they were unable to score 17 points as the Saxons scored 2 points and took the lead.

The Danes were disappointed with their performance in the game. "We didn't play our best," said Danes head coach Don Carroll.

The game was a thrilling one, and the Danes were proud of their performance. "We didn't give up," said Carroll. "We fought until the end."

Expansion sought in minority grad enrollment

By Rich Miller

Declining enrollment in minority majors in graduate study programs is a great concern of many professors at SUNY. This is a major problem in the city of Albany, with certain professors, like Martin, said he had to hire teaching assistants for minority students. The reason for this is that minority students are becoming scarce. In addition, the city's present redistricting plan was charged with gerrymandering the 15th District. Distribution of the ballots and the city's power to do so expired in January. The city's present redistricting plan was charged with gerrymandering the 15th District.

Whalen said he felt the students were "well versed" and that minority students were "the future of the city." Minority students are expected to outnumber non-minority students in the near future. According to Huston, minority students will make up 20% of the student body in the next five years. Minority students are also expected to make up 20% of the workforce in the near future.

Statewide conference to debate media issues

Assemblywoman Thomas Whalen III

Statewide conference to debate media issues will make use of hot topics. The conference is scheduled to take place at the University Capitol on the 3rd of June. Speakers will discuss the differences between the media and how the media affects the society. The conference is expected to attract 200 people.

Whalen, who took over as mayor in January, was named the first city to have a "majority minority" population. The city is expected to become a "majority minority" by 1988. Whalen said he was "well versed" in the complex issues of media and the freedom of the press. The freedom of the press is a fundamental right of democracy, he said.

SASU President Jim Tierney

"I really don't think students should have the burden of paying the cost of running a campus newspaper," SASU President Jim Tierney said in an interview.

Tierney added that he would not have removed or changed any of the positions in the board, but rather would have chosen new members, and that the positions should be filled by students.

Tierney also mentioned that he would have eliminated 4,000 jobs from SUNY colleges, and that he would have eliminated the ROTC program.

Tierney stated that he would have eliminated the ROTC program because he believes it is unnecessary for SUNY students.

Tierney explained that the ROTC program is not necessary because the military is already able to recruit enough students.

Tierney concluded that the ROTC program is not necessary for SUNY,
and that it should be eliminated.

SASU's Tierney thrives as activist and politician

Tierney is serving his second consecutive year as SASU president, and has been dominated by student dissent in the past.

Tierney said he became involved in activism after he was elected to the campaign for SASU president.

Tierney said he had received his first week of campaign, and that he had talked to many students about their feelings on the campaign.

SUNYA's DeSole describes Affirmative Action

By Michelle Busher

"There are many misconceptions of what Affirmative Action is," says Gloria DeSole, Director of Affirmative Action at SUNYA. "It is not a special treatment given to one group of people. Affirmative Action is a way of ensuring that all groups receive the benefits of equal opportunity. It is a tool to help overcome past discrimination and promote diversity." DeSole, a member of the English Department at SUNYA, has been involved with Affirmative Action since 1975. She feels that Affirmative Action is necessary to create a more diverse and inclusive environment on campus.

DeSole mentions four major duties of the Affirmative Action Director. First, she works with the SUNYA community to ensure that all employees are treated fairly. This includes addressing any concerns or complaints. Second, she develops and implements affirmative action plans to ensure diversity. Third, she monitors and evaluates the effectiveness of these plans. Finally, she provides training and education on affirmative action issues to SUNYA employees.

DeSole explains that Affirmative Action is not just a program for hiring minorities. It is a comprehensive strategy that includes training, education, and monitoring. According to DeSole, SUNYA's success in this area can be attributed to the support of President O'Leary and the SUNYA community. She feels that Affirmative Action has helped SUNYA become a more diverse and inclusive environment.

Minority events, such as the one organized by the SUNYA Student Association on November 12, are one example of SUNYA's commitment to diversity. The event was sponsored by the SUNYA Student Association and the SUNYA President's Lecture Series. It included speakers such as Sonia Johnson, who will give a lecture on women changing the world. The event was held in the SUNYA Student Center at 7:00 p.m. and was open to all SUNYA students and faculty.

Make the system work for you

For well over a year, the Student Association has argued repeatedly that SUNY must start up a voting booth off-campus. This is a monumental issue, our university's largest voting bloc. It has been proposed that the Student Association be granted the right to hold a voting booth on the street, near the SAGA office. The Student Association, through its president, Laura Rossy, is asking SUNY to give us a fair trial. It is time for SUNY to fulfill its commitment to the Student Association.

We must take a stand

The 1980s have been marked by increasing repression in Cuba, Yugoslavia, and Vietnam. The United Nations has failed to act, and so we must take action ourselves. For well over a year, the Student Association has asked for a voting booth on campus. Now is the time to take a stand. We must make our voices heard and demand that we have our right to vote.

Jeff Weinstein

The February meeting of the Student Association was an embarrassment. Clearly the system is broken. We must fight for the right to vote in order to have a say in our lives. We must fight for the right to control our own future.

Mr. Rossy states that the "U.S. must stop playing the game of Buckley vs. Buckley." This is a slur on the character of the Buckley family. We must fight for our right to vote, and we must fight for the right to have a say in our lives.

Mr. Rossy suggests that we "stand by and shrug our shoulders while the Soviets and their allies get their way." This is a slur on the character of the Soviet people. We must fight for our right to vote, and we must fight for the right to have a say in our lives.

Mr. Rossy states that we have a "choice but to support the opposing side in order to maintain a balance," i.e. dictatorships. This is a slur on the character of the Soviet people. We must fight for our right to vote, and we must fight for the right to have a say in our lives.

Mr. Rossy suggests that we have a "better system," i.e. a Marxist-Leninist system. This is a slur on the character of the Soviet people. We must fight for our right to vote, and we must fight for the right to have a say in our lives.

Twister

What's worse, running twenty-one or pre-registration? Pre-registration.

For the second and last time I'm putting class cards. I despise it and I can finally make it in all of those great electives that everyone else has made me jealous of the last four years. Electives, like being lazy and neat, which I'm already done with. And interesting classes like 1010, which I haven't even taken yet.

Another reason that I like pre-registration (and everybody goes too plain registration?) because it's in order. Even though I was one of the last to sign up for registration, I had to wait on long lines because my reporting time was at 11 a.m., when all of the old ladies who had held the tickets were out to lunch.

While pre-registering, I remembered that I had to get a permision card for a pre-course class. I had forgotten to ask for help of three or four stories to the registrar, who decided I could get my class cards, based upon these points. That meant that I wasn't sure if I could get into the class, so I didn't hand my packet in.

But, when I'm all done with pre-registration, I can sit back and relax and use the remaining portion of the semester to plan out my assignments and comfort to Europe. So, how come I'm not happy?

Ken Dornbaum

Coppola's Bad Catch

Francis Ford Coppola has lasted as a film maker with his American film of 1983, but it is an honest complete disaster as commercial entertainment. The persons on the screen seem to be aware of their actions, not just reacting to the situations. This film was awarded the opportunity to make a film such as this, and the studio game by its rules. He decided to make a film that was an edgy film, and that is exactly what Coppola has done. This film never made it past press previews and was a huge flop.

This film is basically only for staunch jazz fanatics and existentialists who need to escape the chaos of the world. Although the staff is enthusiastic about it, in the end it is a fascinating success as art. Few men are able to carry the film, and he does not come through.

Nothing anyone says in this movie is credible. It is a, at least, a great film to watch for its honesty. It is a film that was made by a man who is too busy being tough to be true to life. It is a film that was made by a man who is too busy being tough to be true to life.

Ken Dornbaum and Egan Murphy

The music scene has changed dramatically in the past few years. More and more, new groups are getting popular and are being recognized for their own talent. This has led to a new generation of music fans who are more interested in listening to new music, rather than relying on old standards. This medium is called video music.

The most popular video is the music video for the song "Walk on the Wild Side" by Lou Reed. This video has been on rotation for several years and is likely to continue for a long time. The video features Reed's distinctive vocal style, accompanied by visually striking imagery that enhances the song's meaning.

Another popular video is the music video for the song "I Love You" by the band U2. The video features the band members walking through a cityscape, with a strong visual emphasis on the word "love" throughout.

The MTV Format Problem 1

Video Jackpot:
The terminology of the new visual age has been taken to the letter E, which stands for entertainment. For all those interested in video music, there are numerous channels to choose from. There is also a new channel called MTV, which is dedicated to music videos.

Alan Hunter: He is the one who makes the decisions for video music at MTV. He is known for his quick decisions and his ability to stay on top of the latest music trends. Hunter is a former music critic and has a deep understanding of the music industry.

The most exciting show was the aforementioned Feud, which was a game show where each contestant had to guess the correct answers to trivia questions. The first contestant with an answer was transported to a different part of the country where they were then given a prize. This show was watched by millions each week.

The MTV Format Problem 2

Music News:

The following is a compilation of songs that were added to the MTV playlist in the past week.

The Blackhearts "Unchained"

Fair Warning

The MTV Format Problem 3

Promotions and Commercials:

MTV is a prime advertising network. At least every half-hour, it is interrupted by commercials. At least one of these commercials will be for a music video. Also, MTV is big in promoting products such as record labels and music videos. For example, the video for the song "I Love You" by U2 was sponsored by a major record label.

Nina Blackwood: Nina does weekend late shows and is known for her energetic personality. This does not mean she is dull and obnoxious. Her character is so plastic that it has a saccharine-like aftertaste. Martha likes to sing, but she is rarely featured on the tube today.

The Medium Is The Message

Warning

Van Halen: The band is famous for its hard rock sound and has been on MTV for several years. The video for the song "I Love You" was featured on the show last week.

The MTV Format Problem 4

The Video Programs

The major flaw of MTV is that it currently dominates music video programming. MTV has a great power, as it presently dictates what is popular. MTV has brought such us really-never-should-have-been popular acts such as the British band "The Smiths." The band has been on MTV for several years and is considered one of the most influential bands of the 1980s.

Reagan foreign policy action stirs discussion

By Jon Willmot

Decision for the U.S. invasion of Grenada, "a bold move," by the U.S. president was welcomed by Walter Goldstein, political science professor. "The move is a positive step toward world peace," he added.

Goldstein went on to say that the U.S. invasion in Grenada and Lebanon is not only a "dramatic" move, but necessary. "Reagan needs a personal dramatic moment in Grenada and Lebanon," he said.

"We are facing a new era," he continued. "The U.S. government should not be reluctant to use military force."

"Reagan's decision to invade Grenada and Lebanon is not a show of force, but a show of commitment," he said.

"It is time for the U.S. to take a stand," he added.

Danes face Buffalo in season finale

By Marc Bernier

Coach Bill Ford is new in Buffalo at the head of the Danes track, but he isn't new in the tradition of running a fine program for running programs. He has been a success at his craft in the past, and he's hoping to carry on that tradition at the University of Buffalo. Ford has been at the helm of the Danes for the past two years, and he's looking forward to leading the team to a successful season.

The Danes have been very competitive in recent seasons, finishing in the top ten at the NCAA Championships each of the past two years. They have a strong team this year, and they are expected to do well.

In addition to Ford, the Danes have a number of talented runners, including senior captain Chris Callaci, who finished third at the NCAA Championships last year. Other key runners include juniors Mike McGuire and Tom Johnson, who are expected to be among the top performers this season.

The Danes have a strong schedule this year, with meets against some of the top teams in the country, including the University of Connecticut and the University of South Carolina. They are looking forward to a successful season, and they are confident that they can compete at the highest level.

Track meets begin this weekend, with the Danes hosting their first meet at the UAlbany track. The meet begins at 10 a.m., and the Danes will be looking to get off to a strong start.
