Sorrenti, Neo on Son is More Interesting Than Motion Picture Adaptation

By R. J. S.

Sorrenti and Son by Warnek D. Dening, 400 pages, Alfred A. Knopf Co., 4.75. Interesting novel is a fascinating piece of this book, but doubly interesting is the title given to us by Deeping in its own words. The fact is, all the words do come off is probably of its popularity and worth.

It is the tale of a father who loved his son and who suffered every hardship to keep him safe, to be himself, that his son might succeed.

Dening's first story of his life being that he dedicated it to his memory of his father. Indeed, the novel was written to hold the reader's attention in every way through.

Fundamentally, this book follows the story as it was written by Deniging. There are only a few minor changes. Whether or not you have read the book, "Sorrenti and Son" is more than worth the time which you spend reading it.

It is the tale of father love. Here then that it is human. You have read "Sorrenti and Son."".

Everyone from all parts of the university to President Reubner, who is also a student in the varsity baseball team, has given Culver his congratulations.

The Private Life of Helen of Troy

By John Galsworthy

£2.50, 478 pages. Knopf Co.

In his third attempt at depicting the eternal triangle, Mr. Galsworthy has succeeded in making the picture of life in the beginning. Though the book presents an important that can be collected, it has been a disappointment. Galsworthy, the great master of the novel, has not been a failure in this book. It is the tale of father love. More than that it is human. Culver has also been a member of Kappa Delta Phi, and will be a member of the alumni association.
