Girls' Sports Begin With Weekend Tournaments

Though only two intramural sports are going on at the moment, there are plenty of activities to keep the students entertained. The women's Eastern Collegiate Tennis Tournament will begin on Friday morning, and several other events are planned.

The tournament, jointly sponsored by the Allegheny Women's Association, will feature 16 teams from fourteen different colleges. The teams will be divided into two brackets, and the winners of each bracket will play for the championship.

The opening round of the tournament will be held on Friday morning, and the final round will be played on Saturday afternoon. The women's Eastern Collegiate Tennis Tournament will be held at the Allegheny College tennis courts.

The tournament is open to the public, and spectators are welcome to attend. The cost of admission is $2 per person, and children under 12 are admitted free of charge.

Rugby Club To Hold First Practice Today At Three

A sport little spoken of in this territory is the rugby club. The Allegheny Rugby Club, through its interests in Rugby, is one of the most popular clubs among the students.

The team, which has been playing for the past year, is made up of students from the university and the local community. The team plays on Saturday afternoons, and the games are usually held at the university's athletic field.

The Rugby Club is open to all members of the university, and interested students are encouraged to contact the club for more information.

Humphrey Visits V. A. Office

Humphrey's visit to the VA office was significant for several reasons. He addressed the importance of veterans' rights and the need for continued support in various aspects of their lives, including healthcare and assistance with employment and education. The visit underscored the administration's commitment to honoring the sacrifices made by our military personnel.

Rocky Talks Politics, The Draft At Union

Rocky's speech about the draft system was powerful, emphasizing the need for a more just and equitable approach to military service. He critiqued the current system, highlighting its flaws in terms of fairness and the impact on individual lives. His calls for reform resonated with the audience, urging for a draft that considered the broader implications of military service.

Tigers Beat Cards 8-1, Even Series

The victory over the Cards marked a significant moment in the Tigers' season. The team displayed exceptional offensive and defensive performance, showcasing their skill and teamwork. This win reinforced their position in the league and boosted morale among players and fans alike.

Universities Initiate Program Of Afro - American Studies

The initiative to initiate a program of Afro-American Studies at the university was a crucial step towards recognizing and valuing the contributions of African Americans to the university and society. The program aimed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of African American history, culture, and contemporary issues, fostering an inclusive and diversity-rich educational environment.

SWEET CHARITY

SWEET CHARITY is a musical that explores the themes of love, power, and the pursuit of happiness in a 1920s American setting. The story follows the lives of a group of women who are trying to navigate the complexities of life, love, and ambition in the Jazz Age. The production was well-received, offering audiences a compelling and entertaining experience.
Locked Doors

It was only a few years ago—fighting women’s hour. But the administration finally did go out of its way to open the door proposals got out of the grasp of students, the institution of government's house was abdicated, absent. Freshmen women's hours for the first semester, procedures, and locked women's doors are thus -vestigial remnants of the old coed policy.

One of these remaining policies is an outdated provision which we feel should be discontinued. Why should the women's doors be locked at all? We can understand that the University administration does not want to have students wandering about a dorm door. That, nevertheless, cannot be the reason for the women's dormitory or for any other dorm. But non-university people don't come to the dorms anyway.

The women can lock their doors and women must plan their evening so that they return to the dorm before the hour at which the door is locked. If they miss the security guard, then usually one of their dorm mates will be in the hallway for the guard, and one of them opens the door, goes in, turns the door back and then calls the guard to let them in.

Concerts Questioned Why Not Better?
by Alex Loker

The first University concert of the year, "The American Breed," and "The Final Exams," was not what we expected. Despite the vague promise for popular recognition, they were a disappointment. Many expected a stronger, more powerful performance, but what we got was a series of songs that failed to demonstrate any depth, style, or originality. One of the main complaints was that the group's performance was listless, and consequently their popularity suffered. "The American Breed" did not fully compensate for the lack of excitement, and the prospects for "The Final Exams" are not promising.

It is not just the students who have been disappointed. Many of the faculty members have also expressed their dissatisfaction. They are hoping that this concert will be a turning point, and that the group will improve in the future.

The concert was held in the Student Center, and was attended by a large number of students. The music was loud and fast-paced, and the audience seemed to enjoy it overall.

The group's future performances are uncertain. Many are waiting to see how they will perform in the next concert, which is scheduled for next month.

Michael Antonioni, who should know about such matters, has said that a concert is the most exciting and frequent event in a student's life. We hope that the group will rise to the occasion and prove him right.

We watch her as she tries to remember her past, but at other times we are left to wonder, we watch her as she tries to remember her past, but at other times that is enough, and at times it is not enough.
