National Contest Seeks Outstanding College Girl

The National College Queen Contest will be held this week in the Library, sponsored by the College Press Service, and the Social Science Department. The contest is open to any student who meets the requirements.

To be eligible to participate, the contestant must be between the ages of 19 and 24 years old, a resident of the United States, and a member of the campus community. The contestant must also have a minimum grade point average of 3.0 on a 4.0 scale. The contestants are required to submit a photo and a written statement outlining their interests, goals, and ambitions.

The contest will begin with a preliminary round, where the contestants will be judged on their public speaking abilities, their knowledge of campus life, and their ability to answer questions about the campus. The top 10 contestants will advance to the final round, where they will be judged on their appearance, their ability to answer questions about their social and civic responsibilities, and their ability to handle themselves in public.

The winner of the contest will receive a scholarship of $5,000, a trip to New York City, and a variety of other prizes. The contest is sponsored by the College Press Service, the Social Science Department, and the College Queen Contest Committee.

Under The Counter Intelligence

By Martin Schwartz

In the ongoing campaign against leftist sympathizers, the FBI has included the University of Washington in its sights. The FBI claims that the University's political activities are a threat to national security and that it is necessary to examine the activities of the University's student body in order to prevent future incidents of violence. The FBI has been monitoring the University's political activities for some time, and has recently intensified its efforts. The University has responded by denouncing the FBI's activities as an invasion of privacy and an unconstitutional violation of the First Amendment. The University contends that it is protected under the provisions of the Bill of Rights, and that it is free to express its political views without fear of governmental interference. The case is currently before the courts, and a decision is expected in the near future. It is hoped that the courts will rule in favor of the University, and that the FBI's activities will be curtailed.
