The faculty lecture series began Friday when Dr. Leonard W. Richardson spoke on "Democracy and the Individual". It seems particularly fitting that the first lecture should be given by the most revered professor on the faculty, for it is the individual and the principles for which a true scholar lives, make his words more formidable with such a background to strengthen them.

Dr. Richardson traced the growth of democracy in England, and the greater improvement on American democracy through the comparison of government in the two countries. An early manifestation of the democratic spirit, Dr. Richardson said, was the not uncommon sympathy with an established church but believed in the right of private judgment. The question is, can we secure the visible world in its relation to man is distinctly democratic. A third manifestation is the American habit of free inquiry. The speaker said that there is no harmony between science and religion and that this belief will be strengthened by the evidence that it is in between. "We must meet the emergencies of the present as the emergencies were met in the past," said Dr. Richardson. "We must bear the brunt of purest war. It is a race for liberty versus despotism. Will we prevail or shall we do what we can for the further development of democracy, by paying the price."

State College closed its basketball half season last Saturday night by defeating the five representing the Massachusetts Agricultural College in the Albany High School gymnasium. The score was 25 to 27. Fully 1,500 persons saw the last game of the season, which, until the middle of the second quarter was so close and hard fought. The pass work and shooting of the State College team were played so well to the other hand the Aggies displayed a fighting spirit and played the most notable game one being near the end of the game. Whittle and McCarty were the key scorers for the Aggies, while Fitz and Barry scored all four points for the Purple and Gold. The first half was 17 to 10.

Formal Instructor Addresses Chemistry Club on Antitoxins

At the Chemistry Club Friday afternoon, March 15, current topics were discussed, and a lecture was given by Dr. C. E. Lipes, instructor in Chemistry. The members were interested in the subject and the discussion was animated.

The lecture dealt with the production of antitoxin and its practical application. The process of producing antitoxin involves the injection of a specific bacterial toxin into a horse, which results in the production of antitoxin. The antitoxin is then purified and concentrated, and used to treat diphtheria and other bacterial infections.

The students were also interested in the practical application of antitoxin, and the lecture included a discussion of its use in treating patients with diphtheria. The members were impressed with the effectiveness of antitoxin in treating this serious bacterial infection.

The lecture was well received by the members of the Chemistry Club, and many of them expressed interest in pursuing careers in the field of chemistry.

Y. W. C. A. ACTIVITY

The Y. W. C. A. meeting, March 6, was a recognition meeting for new members. Members included were included all those who had joined the association since the recognition meeting last year. The service was very impressive. The new members marched in singing the "hymn of the night." Each girl carried an unlighted candle, except the chairman of the membership committee, who marched with her hand carrying a large lighted candle. They marched up on the platform where Verna McCann, the president, welcomed them, and lighted their candles.

SOPHS TIE JUNIORS FOR FIRST PLACE

Are Making Strong Bid for Championship

The Junior-Soph contest was the only interscholastic game played last week, owing to the fact that the Seniors were unable to get their team together, and hence the Senior-Soph game was postponed to a later date. In the Junior-Soph game, the Sophs were the first to score, and they maintained their lead throughout, but were never far enough ahead to make them feel sure of victory. Very soon after the contest was under way, the Sophs jumped into the lead by scoring once from the field and foul line in rapid succession. Casiano made the first score for the Juniors by counting from the foul line. Both teams scored again, Merchant and Whitney each being credited with a field basket. The Sophs finally found their stride and had little difficulty in keeping the ball in their possession. At this point the Juniors defense went to pieces and it was not long before the Sophs added six more points to their score, four points being made by Casiano on field goals. The half ended 14-14, in favor of the Sophs. With the score 11 to 4 against them, the Juniors played desperately, and before the end of the game added six points to their score. Masson eaging the ball from the field. The Sophs scored but two points in this half, Captain Labadell getting a next shot from near the center of the court. Superior floorwork, aided by stellar work for the Sophs. The final score was 22 to 12, in favor of the Sophs.
