As the Albany State University women's tennis team ended their season last Sunday at the University of New York in Albany, Binghamton and Colgate, the Danes jumped out on top but couldn't sustain the pace and were overcome by the Golden Eagles 6-1. "It was a great effort," Fowler said after the game, "but we just ran out of gas and we were over the ground.

Albany's young team has completed a great first year experience of winning out remaining four games and finishing with a very strong record. The Danes didn't peak in performance during the SUNYAC competition. Threatened by speedy and up-tempo opposition, the team continued with a point total of 10 and moved into the Conference (6-1-0) final.

However, the Danes didn't peak in performance, scoring a total of 36 and one-third, behind Pittsburgh (136 points). Binghamton (13 points) and Oswego (70 and one-third points). City Beaches Take a Bath

NEW YORK—A recent wave of city beaches this summer left many bathers dissatisfied with public beaches for almost everything.

The problem, which has been in the nation's news for some time, is that the beaches are not always clean and free of pollution. In fact, they are often covered in trash and litter. The city has been working to improve the situation, but progress has been slow.

Environmental experts say that lack of maintenance has been a major factor in the problem. They recommend increasing the frequency of cleanings and improving the infrastructure of the beaches to prevent litter from accumulating in the first place.

Many batters have taken to calling for more action from the city. Some are calling for stricter laws, while others are calling for increased funding for beach maintenance. The city has been responsive to these demands, with many new initiatives being introduced in recent weeks.

Kong Watchers Crowd City

NEW YORK—City Comptroller Harrison W. Butts, finishing his final term, watched a large crowd of Kong watchers as they crowded around a statue of Kong from the movie classic King Kong. The statue has been attracting more visitors than even the great ape could scare away.

Kong was originally intended to be the main attraction of the city's new zoo, but due to budget cuts, the city was forced to cancel the project. However, the statue has become a popular attraction in its own right, drawing crowds from all over the city.

The statue was designed by renowned artist David Choe and stands at 10 feet tall. It is made of steel and aluminum, and its sculpted features are said to be highly realistic. The statue's popularity has caused some controversy, with some critics arguing that it is an unnecessary expense at a time when the city is facing budget cuts.

State University Does a Lot with a Little

State University does a lot with a little. The university is one of the largest and most diverse in the nation, with a student body of over 100,000. Despite this, the university operates on a very small budget, and its per-student costs are among the lowest in the country.

The university has been able to do this by maintaining a strict focus on education and research, and by actively seeking out funding from a variety of sources. This has allowed the university to offer high-quality education at a competitive price, and to attract a diverse and talented student body.

The university has also been able to maintain a high level of research and innovation, with a strong emphasis on interdisciplinary collaboration and the application of knowledge to real-world problems. This has led to significant breakthroughs in fields such as medicine, engineering, and environmental science.

In conclusion, the State University of New York is a model of how a large and diverse university can operate on a limited budget, while still providing exceptional education and research opportunities to its students.

The latest fad for out of Washington has been "lifestyle planning," a phenomenon that has reached everyone. In an attempt to attract interest in this trend, I've prepared a few comments about the fad itself and why it's worth paying attention to.

In the past, Washington has been perceived as a place where people go to "build a lifestyle," but it's not always that simple. Many people who have moved to the nation's capital to "build a lifestyle" have found that it's not easy to do so. It's often been difficult to find a place that's comfortable and convenient, and it's often been difficult to find a place that's affordable.

While lifestyle planning is a way to make the city more appealing, it's important to remember that it's not always the best option. Many people who have moved to Washington to "build a lifestyle" have found that it's not easy to do so. It's often been difficult to find a place that's comfortable and convenient, and it's often been difficult to find a place that's affordable.

Looking for a Place for Student Recreation?

The SUNYA Student Recreation Center Committee Has the Place for You!!

BACKGROUND

In the late 1960's and prior to the completion of construction plans for the new campus, our University community learned that our long-awaited Field House would not be constructed in the immediate future. The need for such a facility, which existed then, increased commensurate with the university's growth through succeeding years.

The rapid growth of participation in men's and women's intramural athletics (62% participation increase over 1970-71) and the need for increased open or free time recreation have underscored the desirability of a multi-use facility.

With these factors in mind, a group of students, faculty, and administrators was chosen to determine possible courses of action which would address these needs. (Membership of the group is listed below).

Early considerations included the possibility of a relatively low cost "bubbie" similar to that which is used at the SUNY at Buffalo. Visits by Committee members to the Buffalo campus, Boston University, Boston College and M.I.T. have led the Committee to certain preliminary conclusions. At this time, the Committee has eliminated the "bubbie" from further consideration.

Future considerations include the potential of a relatively low cost "bubble" similar to that which is used at the SUNY at Buffalo. Visits by Committee members to the Buffalo campus, Boston University, Boston College and M.I.T. have led the Committee to certain preliminary conclusions. At this time, the Committee has eliminated the "bubble" from further consideration.

Funding of this proposed structure will be dependent upon some, or all, of the following:

a) the Athletic Advisory Board Surplus
b) the University Auxiliary Services (FSA)
c) user fees
d) other sources to be determined.

After careful review and consideration, the committee has determined that a long-term funding arrangement (10-20 year) will be necessary; therefore, it is important that the broad opinion of our academic community be sought prior to making any firm commitments.

The Committee believes that this long-term funding arrangement must primarily be supported by a mandatory user fee for all undergraduate. It is estimated that this fee must be between $15-20 per academic year. A referendum in the fall will be taken to determine this fee but is in favor of this concept.

This information is presented for your review and reaction. Prior to the fall referendum, visits of the SUNYA Student Recreation Center will be displayed at a table in the Campus Center. This table will be staffed by Committee members who will be available to answer questions.

The Student Recreation Center Committee:

Mr. Chris McAllister, Student
Dr. Neil C. Brown, Jr., Dean For Student Affairs
Mr. Dennis Elkin, Coordinator of Intramurals and Recreation
Ms. John Hurley, Vice President for Administration
Ms. Rich Atkinson, Student

Ms. Alfred Holohan, Vice President (student)
Dr. Robert Syniggha, Chairman, Student Association
Ms. Carmen Bracey, President, Women's Intramural and Recreation Association (WIRA)

Watch for the Slide Presentation in the Campus Center this Summer and in the Fall.

A Referendum will be held in the early Fall to measure student support for a Mandatory User's Fee.

We need your support.

In MOMA's Summergarden

The Summergarden, on the campus north of the main entrance, and climbing a hillside up to the Student Union, is a scene of powerful eroticism. A quiver of girlish frills and decorations. Amd juxtaposed against this background hanging from the tree. It is a power word on drawn squares. The words, not noticed a slight listing of the heads, and initially set the theme of lest we forget, it should be upon the academic podium. The door was closed as the Governor was expected to serve wine for the first time and we were attempting to protect the Governor, after all, if they let us pass to the Governor's Office. It was great. To move nowhere. Unemployment

By Tim Miller

Unemployment. I remember the day. It was a Sunday afternoon. I had finished work and was walking through the streets of the city. I passed by a small building that said "Unemployment Office." I went inside and filled out the necessary forms. I was then told to wait in a small room.

After a short time, a young woman walked out from behind a large desk. She looked at me and said, "You are here because you are unemployed." I replied, "Yes." She then handed me a slip of paper and said, "Take this to the last window on the right and they will assist you." I did as she said and waited in line. Eventually, it was my turn.

A older man with a mustache approached me. He asked me what I was looking for. I said, "Unemployment benefits." He then asked me how long I had been unemployed. I told him, "Six months." He wrote this down and then asked me if I had any skills or qualifications that would make me more employable. I said, "I have experience in retail and customer service," and he wrote this down as well.

Finally, the man handed me a slip of paper and said, "You will be called for an interview next week. Good luck." I left the office and walked back home. It was a long walk, but I knew that I had to keep looking for work. It was a tough time, but I persevered.

Eventually, I found a job at a local supermarket. It wasn't the best paying job, but it was something. I continued to apply for other jobs and eventually found another position.

I learned a lot from those times and it has helped me in my future endeavors. I realized that it is important to keep trying and never give up. It is also important to have hope and faith in yourself. I learned that unemployment can be a difficult time, but with perseverance, it can be overcome. I am grateful for the lessons I learned during those times.

To this day, I remember the day I received my first unemployment benefit check. It was a small amount, but it was enough to keep me going. I will never forget those times and the lessons I learned from them.
Bicentennial Happenings Celebrating American Independence in Albany

Like most American towns, Albany is celebrating the Bicentennial with a host of patriotic events and festivities. This "Spirit of '76" season begins on July 1 and continues through July 4 and the three dynamic weekends of events in Manhattan, Madison, Washington Park, and the Port of Albany.

Events at each of the three Bicentennial coordinating committees are planned to last 12 hours of entertainment each day from 10 A.M. until 10 P.M. Special exhibits are scheduled at the New York State Capitol, the New York State Museum, and the New York State Historical Association. The Festival of Bicentennial weekends will feature educational exhibits which highlight the contributions of African-American history, Hispanic-American history, and Dutch-American history.
