From Lillian in the Library

Libraries have always been a place of quiet study, where the mind can be nourished and the soul can be enriched. Here, in the midst of noise and chaos, one can find a sense of peace and solitude.

This week, Lillian, a librarian at the university library, shared her thoughts on the importance of libraries in our society.

"Libraries are not just places where books are stored," she said. "They are places where knowledge is shared, where ideas are exchanged, and where communities come together."

For Lillian, the library is a place of wonder and discovery, where the mind is free to wander and explore. She spoke of the many different kinds of books that can be found in a library, from classic literature to the latest bestsellers, and how each one has the power to transport us to new worlds.

"Libraries are the gateway to the world," she said. "They are the places where we can learn about different cultures, different times, and different places."

For Lillian, the library is a place of reflection and growth, where one can find solace and inspiration. She spoke of the many different kinds of people who use the library, from students to researchers to simply those who love to read.

"Libraries are for everyone," she said. "They are for those who want to learn, to grow, to understand, and to connect."

In conclusion, Lillian emphasized the importance of supporting our local libraries, as they are a vital part of our community and a precious resource for all.

"Libraries are the heart of our community," she said. "They are the places where we can come together, learn together, and grow together."

We are grateful for Lillian's insight and for the wonderful work that she does in our library.

You want to serve your country? Why not where your college training will do the most good?

Under the Navy's newest plan, you can start now and continue in college. If you qualify as a good recruit, you may qualify within two years to become a Naval Officer — on or out of the sea.

Who may qualify: 18,000 men per year will be accepted under this plan. If you are between the ages of 17 and 19 inclusive and can meet Navy physical standards, you may qualify now. You must prove your physical qualifications by passing a written examination prepared by the U.S. Navy. This examination is competitive. It is designed to select the best men for training as Naval Officers.

How to become an Officer
If you meet the military qualifications and can meet the physical standards, you will have your choice of two courses — each leading to an officer's commission. 1. You may volunteer for training as an Aviation Officer. In this course you will be selected to fly at least one-third of the total flight time of your college training, and will be selected to fly in active duty for training purposes. Approximately 10,000 men per year will be accepted for Naval Aviation. 2. Or you will be selected for training on a land or Engineering Officer. In this course you will be selected to continue your college work and will have the opportunity to be an officer in the Navy.

DON'T WAIT ... ACT TODAY
1. Take this announcement to the Dean of your college.
2. Or go to the nearest Navy Recruiting Station.
3. Or mail coupon below for further information giving full details.
