Emotional Crowd Enjoys Shooters

by Richy Merevich

The vastness of emotions was on display at the Albany State vs. Savannah College of Atlantic, as a packed gymnasium screamed and supported. The spectators, both students and alumni, experienced the game as a thrilling journey filled with energy.

The Albany State vs. Savannah College of Atlantic basketball game was a testament to the power of sports in bringing communities together. The crowd, united in their support, created an atmosphere of excitement and anticipation, making the game a memorable experience for everyone present.

Ed School Opposes Possible Move

by blank

The Ed School was opposed to any possible move to the downtown campus. They believed that the downtown location would not adequately serve the needs of the students and would not provide the necessary resources.

The University of Education, however, expressed its support for the move, arguing that it would provide a unique opportunity for collaboration and innovation. The move would also allow the university to better serve the needs of the community and enhance its reputation as a leading institution.

Senate Adopts New Calendar; Smoking Ban

by Mark Settiga

The Senate adopted a new calendar for the upcoming semester, which includes a smoking ban. The ban is intended to create a safer and healthier environment for students and staff.

The move was met with mixed reactions, with some students expressing concern about the impact on social gatherings, while others welcomed the change. The Senate also addressed other issues, including changes to the academic calendar and student support services.

Student Tax May Be On The Rise

by Steve Bennett

An unusual number of high school students are being assessed for the first time on the basis of the property that they own in South Boston. At the same time, the city is proposing to raise the tax rate on the property of students who own property in South Boston.

Will this mean an increase in your property taxes? Not necessarily. The city is considering a number of options, including:

- Increasing the tax rate on property owned by students who do not pay their tuition in full.
- Exempting the property of students who pay their tuition in full.
- Implementing a new tax on property owned by students who do not live in South Boston.
- Increasing the tax rate on property owned by students who do not have a South Boston mailing address.

The city is working to balance the budget and has identified student property as a significant revenue source. As a result, the administration is exploring various options to increase revenue from this source.

The city will hold a public hearing on this issue in the near future. We encourage you to attend and voice your concerns. Your input will be considered in the decision-making process.
Business Professor Receives Grant

by Charles Berman

A SUNY School of Business professor is one of 26 SUNY professors to receive financial support under a program called "Teaching Grants for the Improvement of Undergraduate Instruction." According to Thomas Vaughan, dean of Management Science John Fish received a $2,000 grant for his proposal outlining a group guided toward improving production and financial planning skills.

The grant, part of a SUNY program which provides funds for the support of innovative projects and activities, was awarded to professors in 17 other SUNY campuses. Professor Fish received his grant in recognition for his achievement in receiving a 345-page proposal outlining a course on men to help guide student interest to real world and real problems faced by a business organization in its everyday decisions.

Professor Fish stated that he has to make a decision which best satisfy his overall techniques, and that decision often involve the trade-off and interaction of various factors," said Fish.

The purpose of the project, according to Fish, is "to construct a comprehensive interactive game designed to create a standard business atmosphere in which a variety of international and domestic problems are solved and to help teach undergraduates how to make these tasks in real life." Fish said that he quite interested about the progress of his course, and looks that his student-oriented computer game has many practical applications.

"Right now, we're experimenting with this system in a local Albany business firms," said Fish. "I hope his system will be available in all SUNY's business students in near future.

This great winning proposal is entitled "Interactive Game for Production and Financial Planning."

This prevents the film from being damaged when the radiologist is not looking for it.

No Pity Needed
For Werewolf Zevon

evening, when Warren Zevon appeared before a relatively cold but enthusiastic crowd.
Zevon, who referred to himself as the "welcome Steve Alton of rock and roll," brought along his cohort of mates to eek songs, and provided a night of some of the Opening the show with a song entitled

"Johnny Stripes Up the Band," Zevon had the audience right away. Dressed in a black corduroy jacket, with round glasses and medium-length brown hair, he looked more like a slightly overweight Julian Binner than the leader of a rock and roll band.

But rock they did. The second song of the night, "Worehead of London," had the crowd clapping and howling right along with him. Even the two gentlemen with the top hats and tails agreed, as well they should. The guitars were howling and Zevon's husky voice could almost convince you that there was a full moon.

Playing a piano and synthesizer, Zevon was backed up by a band of some of the most experienced musicians in rock today, led by guitarist Waddy Wachtel, who is best known for his work with Linda Ronstadt, the band was tight but still willing to let loose and rock when the situation called for it.

Wachtel provided many of the highlights of the evening with his percussive guitar riffs. At times he played with an intensity and feeling that could be felt throughout the hall. Combined with Zevon's intense, but not perfect singing, the two made a pretty good two-piece.

The night also had its mellow side.
With songs like "Mohammed's Radio," and "Accidentally Like a Martyr," Zevon proved that life exists outside the fast lane too. Singing
"Hunters Down the Wind" with no accompaniment but his piano, he showed that he can write and sing with any of the more romantic stars of this day.

Yet there were flaws in the show.

Indian Meditation and Internal Organs

Highlighting the Chinmoy's disciples, who composed the album's performance, was "Heaven." Performing with only his muse, the group consisted of six instruments including the human

The woman sitting beside me said in a different voice that she thought the player was John McNeill, a one-time disciple of Chinmoy. "That's something I'm not sure," she replied.

Unfortunately, the tabla player's name was Rishi Lepu. "I J.M. wants to play tabla under an assumed name, this one's as good as any," I told the woman.

Kipling, the drummer, described the group's effort as an attempt to play meditative music. He said the group was to be best judged

Chinmoy did have an almost hypnotic effect on the audience. When he played body was in complete repose. He didn't move. Body and consciousness would have been termed dead. The audience did not applaud and took great pains not to make sounds in their seats. For people used to associating music with bodily expression, Chinmoy's restraint was strange and perhaps annoying. Nonetheless, in looking around the hall I saw a number of the

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my strong concern about the recent budget cuts to SUNY. As a student who was not part of the protests or the budget cuts, I was surprised to learn that the university's annual budget has been reduced by 10%.

I believe that these cuts are not only unfair but also detrimental to the quality of education that we receive. SUNY is one of the top universities in the country, and it is important that we maintain our standards.

The cuts will likely result in the loss of faculty positions, increased class sizes, and reduced funding for research and student aid. These changes will not only affect the students but also the faculty and staff who work hard to provide us with a quality education.

I urge the administration to reconsider these cuts and find alternative ways to manage the budget. We, as students, rely on the university to provide us with a valuable education, and it is crucial that we maintain our standards.

Real world

I am writing to express my concern about the recent cuts to the student aid budget. SUNY has a long history of providing financial support to students who need it the most. These cuts will likely result in increased tuition costs and reduced funding for financial aid.

I believe that it is essential for SUNY to continue to support its students, especially those who come from disadvantaged backgrounds. These cuts will not only affect the students but also the faculty and staff who work hard to provide us with a quality education.

I urge the administration to reconsider these cuts and find alternative ways to manage the budget. We, as students, rely on the university to provide us with a valuable education, and it is crucial that we maintain our standards.

A Little About...

By D. R. K.

When the ASP printed an exceptionally large and heavy batch of BEACON cards recently, it was of course expected that a large number of them would be destroyed by the wind. After all, there is no more logical place for a card to go than into the nearest trash can. I was a bit surprised, however, to find that the cards were actually blown into the trees and bushes near the airport. It seems that the wind had picked up enough strength to knock down a tree, and the cards were caught in the branches. In some cases, they even managed to snare a bird or two. It was quite a spectacle to watch as the birds struggled to free themselves from the tangled web of paper and plastic. It was unfortunate that the birds were not injured, but it was comforting to know that they had not been harmed. Overall, it was a humbling reminder of the power of nature and the fragility of our creations.

Rain fell in buckets, and the players would be able to move. With the ECACUpstate Basketball Tournament on tap, the Albany State players and coacheswere taking the weather in stride. But they were also aware of theopportunity that was before them.

The rain was one more obstacle to beovercome. The tournament opened withtwo games, both resulting in wins for theAlbany State team. First, a victory overOnonta (3-17) on March 3, then asecond-round win over Hamilton (3-16)on March 5.

The rain was pouring down, and the-Albany State players were determinedto make the most of the situation. Theywere ready to face the challenge ofplaying in the wet conditions. TheAlbany State team came out ready toplay tough defense and successfuloffense.
