Critic Feels Huston Follows Auteur Policy

By Paul Heiney

John Huston is a director who has universally been labeled "auteur." This term, coined by André Bazin, describes an artist who adheres to a singular viewpoint and who creates films as expressions of themselves. The term is often applied to directors like Orson Welles and Stanley Kubrick, who have been known for their distinctive style and personal vision.

Huston's career has been marked by a commitment to exploring the human condition from a unique perspective. His films often delve into themes of morality, politics, and social issues, and he is known for his use of powerful imagery and his ability to bring out the best in his actors.

In the 1930s, Huston's films, like those of Welles and Kubrick, were characterized by their innovation and originality. However, as the industry matured and tastes changed, Huston's work was often seen as outdated and his films were not as well received. Nonetheless, Huston continued to make films that were true to his vision, regardless of whether they were commercially successful.

Huston's latest film, "The Hustler," is set in the world of professional pool players and explores themes of ambition, success, and the human condition. The film has been praised for its performances, direction, and its exploration of these themes.

In this era of filmmaking, Huston remains a true auteur, creating films that are personal and true to his vision. His work continues to be influential and inspiring, and his films are a testament to the enduring power of the auteur tradition in cinema.
SA Presidency Unattractive

The job of Student Association President may be filled by anyone with guts enough to run. Not one of the obvious candidates appears willing to try.

Nancy Bauman, the current Student Association Vice President, refuses (so far) to run. She is clearly the obvious choice for nomination. Her qualifications cannot be denied, despite her slight tendency toward saucery.

The second-most obvious possibility is similarly unsatisfactory. His knowledge of governmental operations and procedures is clearly the least of the current candidates, and the man汉族 has been adamantly negative. He is known as a master of filibustering.

Renea Tomasso, the current chairman of Finance Committee, has been a superb legislator. Her efficiency in her duties as a portion of the Senate, has been outstanding. This remains true despite the belief that a politician must look like "Bucky the Beaver" to be elected.

Ed Wolter, the current chairman of the Constitution Committee, is one of the most outstanding intellects in student government. His independence and ability for clear thought are extensive enough to make up for any lack of technical knowledge or partisan toughness.

There are four other senators who, while interested in Student Senate, are not generally able, have evidenced interest in the Presidential race. These are Dennis Deland, Edward Staniard, Clemens, and Hamilton.

The other members from the class of '65 who are in Senate and those who are in class offices have shown little that resembles qualifications for the campus' highest office.

Sho w Stress es Integrity of Form

by Robert R. Henske

The current exhibit in the Cooper Gallery will come to a terminus with the public and the art world in the spring which opens on May 22. The show, which includes 50 works on paper, is the culmination of a year's work by five artists who were selected by a jury of seven. The artists who have been invited to exhibit are: John Baldessari, David Hockney, and Andy Warhol.

The show has been selected in part to reflect the development of a new genre of work that has been developed by artists who have been working in the field of printmaking and sculpture. The artists who have been included in the show are:

1. Robert R. Henske
2. David Hockney
3. Andy Warhol

The show will be open from May 22 to June 24.

Albany Honors Athletes At Annual Awards Banquet

This year's Athletic Awards Banquet, held in Watervliet Hall, was one of the most memorable in recent years. The list of recipients was as impressive as the quality of the banquet itself.

* * *

The lands and lawns behind Watervliet Hall weredecked in splendor, and the festivities began.

The tuxedos and ball gowns added to the formal atmosphere and set the stage for the evening's events.

As the night wore on, the air was filled with the laughter and conversation of the attendees.

And so, as the season came to a close, the awards were presented to those who had distinguished themselves on the field of play.
