Danes-Potowski: Showdown Time

by Mike Potowski

"We've got to beat them or they'll sail away," said Coach Staven in my dream. "We've got basketball players on this team. It's a dream." The Stavonian dream is tonight, the most important game in the Stavonian playoffs, the Great Stavonian Day. The Danes have prepared for this. The Danes have prepared for this for weeks, months, years. We've been waiting for this. We've been waiting for this moment to show the world what we're made of. We're ready to show the world what we're made of. We're ready to show the world what we're made of.

The Danes-Potowski Showdown is the game of the night. The game of the season. The game of the decade. The game of the century. We're ready to show the world what we're made of.

Coffeehouse Destroyed by Fire

by Jonathan Scharff

The coffeehouse, a 35-year-old landmark in the University of Toronto’s campus, was destroyed by a devastating fire early Thursday morning. The cause of the fire is still under investigation, but initial reports suggest that it started in the early hours of the morning, likely due to electrical problems.

Located at 100 College St., the coffeehouse was a popular meeting place for students, faculty, and visitors alike. It had been a fixture on the campus for over three decades, serving as a gathering place for various events and activities.

Several people were inside the coffeehouse when the fire broke out, including some students who were studying and others who were just passing by. The fire was first reported around 3:30 a.m. and quickly spread to the surrounding buildings.

Emergency services rushed to the scene, but due to the severity of the fire, it was difficult to contain it. The building was completely destroyed, and several surrounding structures were also damaged.

The loss of the coffeehouse is a significant blow to the campus community, as it was a beloved spot for many people. The university has promised to work closely with the community to find a way to replace the coffeehouse as soon as possible.

In the meantime, students and faculty are being encouraged to reach out to one another for support and to find alternative places to gather and socialize.

"We have lost a cherished part of our campus culture," said one student who was inside the coffeehouse at the time of the fire. "This is a big loss for all of us, and we need to come together to find a way to move forward."

If you think the price you're paying for your favorite drinks and items are too high these days, you may not be alone.

Billionaire magazine reports that the U.S. Commercial Department has launched a major investigation into the methods used by several wholesalers and retailers to set their prices.

The investigation, according to Blawdoff, is being conducted by the U.S. attorney, office in Los Angeles and is inquiring into the leading members of the powerful national association of several manufacturers.

According to the report, individual members of the said association have received notice from the Justice Department asking about their specific pricing policies, and warning them they could possibly be prosecuted for questioning before a federal grand jury.

In addition, government prosecution experts have repeatedly inquired of the association itself to supply the Justice department with a list of its members and copies of the minutes of some of the individual L.P.'s meetings.

GINSING ANYONE?
Ginseng root, that reputed miracle medicine that has been more than 3000 years in Chinese history, may turn out to be a modern medicine drug.

On page 13 of the Philadelphia Inquirer, Dr. James Collins, a leading expert in the field, states that ginseng has been found to improve heart function, lower blood pressure, and reduce stress.

The Commission, according to the report, is considering a proposal to grant patents on ginseng for these medical uses.

The U.S. patent commission, in an announcement buried in the Federal Register last month, has stated that it will consider granting the patent.

When smoke gets in your eyes

To the Editor:

I hereby request President Fields and the University Senate to end the smoking facility on campus. I strongly feel that this issue should not be delayed any longer. We have come a long way in recent years when it comes to the issue of smoking. The health effects of smoking are widely known, and we must continue to strive for a smoke-free campus. The majority of students and faculty support this initiative, and I hope that you will consider our request.

Sincerely,

Displaced Veterans:
They Represent War
by David Trager
During the last week in December, Louis Chotiner, a son of one of his Negro ancestors with a short, recessed midriff, called me at the office. He had made an unusual request. "No one on Wall Street," he said, "would want this kind of story, but...we've been told that..." The story was a family secret, and he was the first to tell me about it. I was surprised by the nature of this man, and his manner of speaking, and by the way he held himself. He seemed to be the kind of person who had never had to worry about money, or anything else. He was a man of many talents, and he had a way of getting things done. He was a man of the old school, and he had a way of making people respect him. The story was not a happy one, but it was a true one. I was grateful to him for telling me about it, and I was grateful to him for telling me about the people who had told him the story. The story was a sad one, but it was a true one. I was grateful to him for telling me about it, and I was grateful to him for telling me about the people who had told him the story.
