The President of Boston University, Harold Case, recently gave his annual address to the student body and, as a result, students' right to freedom of the press was restored. The Student Congress backed the "News" be printed "in a spirit of free speech" and to be printed "in a spirit of free speech." The result was a very strong, content-free determination of content or editorial control. Indeed, Eisenstein's work was so perceptive that it was released in the twenty-first century. His actions followed an appeal by the "News" to the Student Congress to present its third concert of the season, from 9-1:30 in the Peristyles. Admission is free to students who present their student ID cards.

"Ivan the Terrible," Parts I and II, will be presented at the School of Music, New York City with the Vienna Symphony Orchestra. Clarification of Policy

In light of several remarks made in letters to the editor, it is felt that it is necessary to clarify our policy concerning student organizations. It is the hope of this organization that the student groups which have been formed will be able to follow the policies laid down for the benefit of all students.

It should be noted that the organization is not attempting to criticize or ridicule any of the student groups. It is simply attempting to point out that certain policies, in order to function properly, must be outlined.

The organization does not believe that rigid rules will work in a university atmosphere. It believes that the policies outlined in the student organization should be flexible and that they should be able to change as the situation changes.

The policies outlined are intended to provide a framework within which the student groups can operate. They are not intended to be restrictive or controlling.

The organization believes that the student groups should remain free to operate according to their own beliefs and interests, but that they should be aware of the policies which have been outlined.

The organization is committed to the idea of free speech and free expression. It believes that the student groups should be able to express their opinions freely, without fear of reprisal.

In conclusion, the organization would like to state that it is committed to the ideal of a free and open society, and that it believes that the student groups should be able to operate within the framework of these ideals.

Following the conclusion of World War I, President Woodrow Wilson departed for the Peace Conference in Paris in November 1918. His mission was to obtain a settlement which would recognize the rights of the Allies and provide a lasting peace. Wilson's ideas, however, were met with great opposition by others who believed that the United States should remain neutral in international affairs. The peace conference ultimately failed to produce a lasting peace, and Wilson's vision was largely ignored. The result was a series of peace treaties that were unpopular with the American public.

The Aths intramural basketball leagues have been operating for almost two months now, and we feel that certain faults have arisen in the functioning of these leagues that must be corrected if next year's season is to be successfully run.

Before we examine these faults, we must admit that some of the league's problems are directly attributable to the delay caused by the construction of a new floor in the Page Gym. There are, however, a number of causes that have been affecting the teams in the leagues that are a result of lack of foresight and poor planning on the part of Aths officials.

Occasionally games would have to be rescheduled due to last-minute developments. In one such instance, one of the teams was not notified of the change in schedule, as a result, had to forfeit the contest. Times during the season could be changed with a technicality because a subcommittee had met before the team or the playing field had left the floor. This was due to the lack of the Aths in informing the teams of these.

Too often a spectator was called on to be the scorekeeper. This is usually a problem when there is no substitute for the league. AMIA should furnish these statistics by putting them up on the bulletin board of give It to the ASP for publication.

The female categories to a 27-20 victory. In the frosh contest, Hartwick, 85-77, blanked the frosh grapplers into the meet team competition.
