Excitement and drama of NCAA begins soon

By Bill Fischer

The college basketball season — which starts Saturday in Springfield, Massachussetts, the birthplace of basketball — is just a week away. The excitement will be at a high level in the first week of the NCAA season.

Around the rim

As winter sports come to an end, many of the nation's best basketball players are beginning to focus on the upcoming NCAA season. The NCAA season is filled with excitement and drama, as teams vie for a chance to win the national championship.

The NCAA season begins with the selection of the NCAA tournament field, which includes 68 teams. The teams are divided into four regions, with each region consisting of 4 teams. The tournament starts with the first round, followed by the second round, Sweet 16, and Elite 8. The national championship game is held in late April.

The NCAA tournament is a single-elimination tournament, with the winner taking home the championship trophy. The tournament is broadcasted on various networks, including ESPN, TNT, and TBS.

The NCAA tournament is one of the most exciting events in sports, as teams compete for a chance to win the national championship. The NCAA tournament is also a great way to support college basketball, as teams and schools compete for a chance to win the title.

Judge overturns draft laws, says free speech violated

By Deborah Belgum

The U.S. District Court Judge Robert Hatter today overturned a government order that required draft registration for men between 18 and 26 years old. The judge ruled that the government had violated the constitutional right to free speech by requiring all men to register for the draft. The government had argued that the registration was necessary to maintain national security, but the judge said that the government had failed to prove that the registration was necessary for that purpose.

Midnight madness

Defence committee supports jailed slasher

By Joel Brenner

Community Service Programs for the State University of New York have established a new position of Assistant Professor of Public Policy Analysis, said Dr. Mary Rice, President of the University. The position is funded by the New York State Department of Social Services, said Rice.

The committee is pleased with the new position, said Rice, but has some reservations. "The position is a new one, and we are not sure how it will work," she said. "We are working closely with the new professor to make sure that the position is effective."

The Bakkhai Comes Alive

Euripides' play is electric and moving

The SUNYA Theatre Department's production of Euripides' "The Bacchae" is a visually and audibly excellent performance, conveying Agave's madness and despair effectively. The actors onstage do not portray their parts as separate elements, but rather as a cohesive whole, creating a strong sense of ensemble. The actors' performances are excellent, each actor bringing their own unique interpretation to the character they portray. The costumes designed by guest costume designer are multi-level and colorful, effectively setting the scene for the play. The actors' movements are fluid and natural, immersing the audience into the world of the play. The lighting design is also excellent, creating a sense of atmosphere and mood. Overall, the SUNYA Theatre Department's production of Euripides' "The Bacchae" is a masterful production that brings the ancient Greek drama to life in a modern and engaging way.

Grapplers tune up in Syracuse before season

The Albany State wrestling team tuned up one final last weekend at the prestigious Syracuse Open. The Danes coaches were particularly pleased with the performances turned in by Hanser, school champion Andy Schwab and outstanding wrestler, Lester Ware, who decisioned Curt Wedholm of Springfield 7-6 in the finals. Ware had entered the Open tournament and advanced to the finals with a pin, decision to Mills earlier in the tournament. Spagnoli led the way in the Danes wrestling in the heavyweight class by Harvard's John McNerney. McNerney is Harward's defending champion. Lester Ware, who decisioned Curt Wedholm of Springfield 7-6 in the finals also decided to Mills. He had lost to former New York State high school wrestler John Cosgrove, who won second place in this weight class by Harvard's Mike Hills. He had lost to Harvard's John McNerney in the finals, 11-2. Mills is a past Eastern Conference champion and was a ranked Division I 126-pound weight class wrestler. No team scores were added for the Danes who made the trip last weekend. The Syracuse Open is for individual wrestlers. Scenes for performances varied with some scenes set in the theater, some set in the Coliseum. The performances included a pantomime, a mime and a magic show.
