When Small Machines Were Big

More than a quarter century ago, the Commonwealth Edison Company, prophetically alive to the immense possibilities of the future, ordered from General Electric a 5000-kilowatt steam turbine—in those days a giant of electric power.

To-day, a General Electric turbine-generator of 208,000-kilowatt capacity sends out its vast energy to the Chicago Metropolitan District.

College-trained men played a responsible part in the engineering and manufacture of both machines—just as they serve in important capacities in the engineering, production, and distribution of all General Electric equipment, large or small.

THE pause that gives poise

Came a time (as they say) every day when it's good to drop things—sorrows—and pains, collected, cool, seek the hidden meaning of it all. Nine million times a day the Coca-Cola Company sends the pause that refreshes to keep the world waggling.
