Two State Students Attend Seminar in Puerto Rico During Christmas

Two students from Pocono Polynucleo University in Puerto Rico attended the American Christian Student Alliance (ACA) Annual Convention in New Haven, Conn. The students were Edward Williams and John Smith.

The theme of the seminar was "The Impact of the United States on Latin America," and it was attended by approximately 500 students from across the United States.

In the opening address, Dr. Harold H. Smith, President of Pocono Polynucleo University, made an impassioned plea for unity among Latin American nations. He called for a Pan-American movement to address the challenges facing the region.

The seminar featured a series of lectures by experts in the field of international relations, including John Darcy, a renowned scholar on Latin American politics.

After the seminar, Edward Williams and John Smith visited several sites in Puerto Rico, including the University of Puerto Rico, where they met with faculty and students.

The trip was organized by the American Christian Student Alliance (ACA), a national organization that promotes understanding and cooperation between students from different regions of the United States.

Economic Programs Proposed

The seminar also featured a discussion on economic programs in Latin America. Speakers included John Darcy, a leading expert on Latin American economics.

Darcy highlighted the importance of economic development in addressing the issues facing Latin America. He called for a focus on sustainable development, including investments in education and health care.

Darcy also emphasized the need for cooperation among governments in the region to address economic challenges. He noted that many Latin American countries were struggling with high levels of debt and unemployment.

The seminar concluded with a panel discussion featuring students from different regions of the United States. The panelists discussed their experiences and shared insights on the seminar.

The seminar was a valuable opportunity for students to learn about the challenges facing Latin America and to develop a greater understanding of the region.

Don't miss the next ACA seminar, which will be held in Washington, D.C. in May. For more information, visit www.aca.org.
