The Column

By Bruce Ulaner

The Column also commented that the 144 Development Authority's recent decision to hire a new branch manager illustrates the same kind of management indifference that has plagued the city for years. The City Council, which is responsible for approving such appointments, should have been more concerned about the quality of its decision-making than about the technical aspects of the job.

Pornography Examined

To the Editor:

Novel Idea

The Column also examined the recent novel by John Updike, which took place in the 1940s, and found it to be a well-written but somewhat predictable story. The author's style is reminiscent of the 1920s, and while the setting is convincing, the plot is not as strong as in Updike's other works.

SA Applauded

To the Editor:

An American Author Analyzed

The Column also discussed the life and work of the American author James Joyce, who was a leading figure in the Symbolist movement. The author's influence is still felt today, and his work continues to be studied and enjoyed by readers around the world.

Tangent Goals

To the Editor:

A Reagan Win

The Column also explored the 1984 presidential election and its implications for the future of American politics. The election was seen as a turning point, with Reagan's victory indicating a shift towards conservative values and policies.

Playoff-Bound Alfred Shuts Down Danes, 16-0

By Larry Katz

On both offense and defense, the Alfred State football team performed with perfection Saturday against SUNY-Albany. The Saxons limited Albany to only five first downs and were set up by Albany offensive errors — or by the Saxons' defensive backs.

Brockport Boycotts its Expensive Snack Bar

By Jane Gross

When students at SUNY-Brockport began to protest the high prices in the school's snack bar, the administration took notice. The Free Press and the SUNY-Albany student newspaper have been granted a temporary restraining order against the SUNY-Albany administration, allowing them to continue publishing articles about the school's controversial police log.

The Free Press editors are pleased with the decision, which they say gives the newsroom the right to report on important issues without fear of censorship. The policy of keeping student stories out of the paper, they say, is a violation of free speech rights and an effort to silence student voices.

The Free Press editors argue that the school's decision to prohibit them from covering certain topics is not in the best interests of the students or the community. They believe that the institution should be held accountable for its actions and that the newsroom should be allowed to report on the issues that matter to the students.
