Norwich's second half rally stuns Danes, 27-17

By Brian Starnes

Norwich, NY

For more than 50 minutes of the second half, the Albany Great Danes were clinging to a 21-0 halftime advantage over the State University of New York at Buffalo Bulls. But in the end, the Danes couldn't hold on as the Bulls came back to shock the home team with a 27-21 win.

The Danes started strong, scoring on their first possession of the game, but the Bulls quickly erased the deficit with a touchdown of their own. From there, the game was back and forth as both teams scored multiple times in the first half.

In the second half, the Danes struggled to maintain their lead as the Bulls made a comeback. With less than 10 minutes remaining in the game, the Bulls took the lead with a touchdown to make it 17-14.

The Danes tried to rally, but the Bulls were able to hold on for the win. The game was filled with excitement and fans on both sides were cheering loudly.

In the end, the Bulls were able to come out on top and take home the victory. It was a hard-fought battle, but the Bulls showed their resilience and ability to come back from behind.

Overall, it was an impressive performance by both teams. The Danes played well in the first half, but the Bulls were able to rally in the second half and secure the win.

Dane harriers regain SUNYAC title

By Tom Kacandes

Fredonia, NY

By the middle of the first mile, the Danes had built up an eight to ten second advantage on the field. By the end of the race, the Danes had won the SUNYAC cross-country championship.

The Danes dominated the race, with Fredonia's first man, Michael McIlvain, leading the way. McIlvain was followed by his teammates, who maintained a strong lead throughout the race.

In the end, the Danes had clinched the SUNYAC title, cementing their dominance in the conference. The Danes' win was the first since 1997.

Buffalo students pull $4M from Marine Midland

By Lisa Street

Albany, NY

The University at Albany pulled $4 million in investments from Marine Midland, a major bank in the state of New York, due to its holdings in South Africa.

This move was part of a larger effort by the university to divest from companies doing business in South Africa as a result of the country's apartheid policies.

The decision was made by the University at Albany Student Association (SASU) following a resolution passed by the association's Student Senate.

SASU President Adam Schaffer said the decision was made to align the university's investments with its values as an institution.

"We believe that supporting companies doing business in South Africa is inconsistent with our institutional values," Schaffer said. "We believe that the university should be a leader in promoting social justice and human rights around the world."

The move by SASU follows similar actions taken by other universities and organizations in the United States in response to the South African government's policies.

Albany's decision was praised by anti-apartheid activists who said it sent a strong message to the South African government.

"This is a significant step forward," said South Africa analyst David vendryes. "It shows that the University at Albany is willing to take a stand against apartheid and support the struggle for freedom in South Africa."

The university's decision was also met with criticism by some members of the Albany community who argued that the university should not be involved in political decisions.

"I don't think it's the role of a university to make political decisions," said Albany resident Tom Johnson. "I think universities should focus on education and research, not on politics."

The university's decision is likely to be met with further action by other universities and organizations who support divestment from South Africa.

Student splits on quality of academic advisors

By Rick Swanson

Albany, NY

There is a mixed response to the quality of academic advisors at the University at Albany. Some students believe that their advisors are effective, while others feel that they are not.

"My advisor is great," said Sarah Davis, a junior majoring in psychology. "She always has time for me and she always knows exactly what I should be doing."

However, not all students feel the same way. "I've never been able to get a meeting with my advisor," said John Smith, a sophomore majoring in business administration.

"I think the advisors here are not very helpful," he said. "They don't really know what they're doing and they don't seem to care about their students."

The university is currently evaluating its academic advising system to see if improvements can be made. "We are committed to providing our students with the best possible advising experience," said University at Albany Provost Dr. Jane McAlevey.

"We will look at all feedback from students and staff to see if there are areas that need improvement."

Wheelchair athlete sports a long list of activities

By Christopher Bonnemoy

Pipp Pipia, a disabled senior at SUNYA, is a student athlete for the men's wheelchair hockey and women's wheelchair softball teams. Pipia describes his interest in wheelchair sports as a "natural fit" to his physical disabilities.

A native of Mineola, Long Island, Pipia misses being outdoors and playing sports in addition to watching his favorite professional teams, which are the New York Yankees, the New York Mets, and the New York Islanders. "I enjoy going to the baseball games, football games, and hockey games," he said. "It's a great way to get out and experience the games in person."

However, he said that the SUNYA wheelchair hockey program is "not as good as other leagues," and that there is "a lack of interest among the disabled community." He added, "I wish there were more wheelchair hockey programs in the area." Pipia also mentioned his interest in soccer and basketball, but said that "it's difficult to find teams for these sports due to the limited number of participants." He expressed a desire for more opportunity to play these sports, especially for those with disabilities.

When asked about his dreams and aspirations, Pipia said, "I would like to travel more and experience different cultures. I also hope to continue my education and pursue a career in sports administration." He added, "I look forward to being a part of the SUNYA community and contributing to the University in any way I can."

Displaced students achieve goals through perseverance and pride

By Patrick Johnson

"You have inspired and exhorted others to do their utmost. Many of you have demonstrated that you are capable of getting along in the world in spite of your disability. You have inspired me and will inspire others to believe in themselves. You have inspired me to be patient and understanding."

--- President Ford

"Patience is power, and patience is the key to power... It is the key to power in the minds of others."

--- President Kennedy

We are here to celebrate the achievements of displaced students. This special event has been arranged to encourage and motivate these students to reach for their goals, no matter how difficult they may seem. The following are some of the stories of perseverance and pride that we hope will inspire you:

Student A:

"I was born with a physical disability, but I never let it define me. I worked hard to overcome the challenges that came with my condition and graduated from college with honors."

Student B:

"I was diagnosed with a learning disability, but I refused to let it stop me from pursuing my dreams. I worked with my teachers and developed strategies to help me succeed in school."

Student C:

"I was born in poverty and faced many obstacles growing up. But I refused to let my background define me. I worked hard and eventually received a scholarship to attend college."

Student D:

"I was a victim of discrimination, but I refused to let it keep me from achieving my goals. I worked hard and eventually earned a prestigious award."

Student E:

"I was born with a chronic illness, but I refused to let it stop me from pursuing my dreams. I worked hard and eventually received a prestigious fellowship."

We hope these stories inspire you to believe in yourself and to pursue your dreams. Remember, there is no limit to what you can achieve. With perseverance and determination, you can overcome any obstacle.

--- President Carter

Our money in South Africa

Do you recall that SUNY Central and possibly other SUNY institutions, who are responsible for controlling and regulating the policies and procedures of our university, made it known that 5% of its population, or 20 million blacks, should be taught and trained to be able to hold citizenships by a new white majority. This principle of white racism is called apartheid.

Calling practical tactics and operations in black compares to a world resolution in Latin which indicated South Africa is "a potential and historic regime." The United States has declared that apartheid "a regime against humanity," and has called for condemnation of this act of war with the South African government.

Monsa Middleton's calls to companies dealing with South Africa are suspect. The bank is not on the "clean list," which means all companies who have their interests in South Africa. Although other banks have divested, a Marine Midland spokesperson claims "we are a business entity, not a political entity."

Barry Rich

Now, I'm going to come down on President Reagan or his views, as any action in this publication should do. I'm not going to lose Minnesota either.

Sunday's defense program certainly 5% of the people will see. This is headed for a field of questions which are suspicious of the same kind of things to be said about the different business interests. For instance, Middleman's pleaded for a commission for a "sizeable" like Minnesota, equality reflection of Reagan's intentions about whether the Senate did its best to ensure the well-being of the people. But there was a lot of work that didn't quite get to the right levels. Actually, sometimes there may not be a lot of work at all.

More importantly, both President Reagan and Mr. Mondale have said a lot about their perceptions. I think both of them should look at a little bit beyond their party positions and views too.

First of all, both Reagan and Mondale went back and forth on the question of who won the INF negotiation this past year. The fact is that in the historic track down Reagan's "kiss-ass" (retro-active) nuclear weapons in Geneva, the U.S. was found to be outmatched. Nuclear forces are viewed by Washington (led by Britain and France) as being an independent force, not to be denied in a U.S.-Soviet negotiation. Recently, now it seems to be the other way or where those missiles should be included. But, before the "zero option" is evaluated, there's a little bit of luck in my opinion. The French, it seems, have found a political strategy that was once described as a "half bread" proposal. Eventually, if Midland's views are accurate, he may have this strategy worked out. I don't recall hearing either one of them mentioning it.

President Reagan's offer to go to a developed nuclear defense as a way to then go to a nuclear development defense is the same old reason. The question has been raised that Mr. Mondale might want to do this, or is that a reason that the French miss the point? We would know, as Reagan's "zero option" is not only unaffordable but is also more difficult to work out. And yet, maybe even a part of the idea was to help him to get a vote from Mr. Middleman. However, he does nothing to help the situation.

Ronald Vishniac's Lost World

"The latest theory is that they were actually an early attempt to build a secure nuclear weapon."

We should be looking at the growing disintegration now. We should not "NO" to commerce. We should have the pressure on the apartheid regime and no sanctions to end this terrible operation.

What does it say about us if we allow it to persist?

Vishniac’s Vanished World

by Brian Jacobs

In 1939, Roman Vishniac set out from Rome, close to Nazi administration that the ‘Jewish problem’ would be solved by killing them. When he asked how great the danger was, he told me that no Jew would survive if war broke out.

When he tried to get word of the impending holocaust, people laughed. No one, he claimed, believed any gossip or government was capable of murdering millions of people. He was sure it was a lie with thought that the most tragic possible wave of expulsions would claim 50,000, no more. Anti-Semitism was nothing new, Jews had been persecuted for centuries in Europe, but somehow they managed to survive. They thought they would again.

But Vishniac, fearing the worst, set out from his home in Berlin across Poland, the Ukraine, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Hungary, Latvia and Lithuania to preserve on film the story of his people that would shortly disappear. Posing as information workers, the camera in his luggage, he took over a 10,000 pictures of Jews living, working and in daily life. ‘I knew I could be of little help’, he said in an interview with McCall’s magazine, ‘but I decided that, at least, it’s not only my ancestors who grow up among the very people who were being threatened, I preserve — at least in pictures — a world that would soon disappear.’

As might be expected, he was warned by the police on his first trip through the line. Through a Hirschfelder dream, Jews were not allowed to own a camera. He was caught many times, but always managed to escape. He said his ‘passport’ 11 times various documents, put in a concentration camp, and bore condensed in death.

To some extent, his ability to survive was due to his being a Jew. ‘I believe and believe and feel what I read from the Nazis, I even get hold of a uniform to put on when I photographed the book-burning in front of the Reichstag, I was in Nazi uniform and could say “Hello Hitler,”’ Vishniac’s photographs also played an important role in proving the Jewish claims to a historical and cultural identity. In 1948, when the Nazi’s fled Germany, Vishniac discovered 46,000 photographs, put in a concentration camp, of the Jewish world Eastern Europe who re-experience the music they relished, the religion they practiced, and the social life they led.

Lectures

In “A Continuing Legacy,” some entertaining and outspoken experts will make their thoughts into popular culture. Included are staged readings by members of the Albany Civic Theater. Thirteen and interviews with “Tradition Bearers,” men and women who recall their experiences in Vishniac’s “Vanished World.” Each lecture will take place on Sunday at 2 p.m. in the auditorium.

COMPUTER SCIENCE COURSES ANGER, FRUSTRATE FIRST YEAR COLLEGE STUDENTS

By Barry S. Scott

The SUNY Student Teaching Project of SUNY Stony Brook in collaboration with the SUNY Student Teaching Program of SUNY Stony Brook presented a seminar on the topic of "Computer Science for College Students" on October 30th.

The seminar was led by Dr. William Fishback, a professor of computer science at the University of California, Berkeley. The seminar was attended by approximately 50 students who were majoring in computer science or intended to major in the field.

Dr. Fishback discussed the importance of computer science in today's society and the role it plays in various industries. He also covered the basics of programming and data structures.

Despite the technical nature of the seminar, the students found it to be both informative and engaging. Many students expressed interest in pursuing a career in computer science after completing their studies.

Vandalism endangers safety

The Albany Student Press (ASP) reports that the bottle did not break when it just came down a few feet and bounced off a lounge chair, "An RA at a dorm on Ross Hall on Colubmus Road, reported that the dorm had been broken into and several items were stolen.

At first I thought someone threw a rock at the window, said Brancato, explaining that the dorm had a problem also after parties in the dormitories.

Laura Wakefield, who was in her dormitory, said that the dorm was thrown out of the first floor lounge, "We've had a problem also with the dormitory trash. A lot of trash is left behind at night."

Tailgate party

The Alumni Association will again sponsor the traditional tailgate party for the Albany vs. Hofstra game this Monday, Oct. 29. The party will be at 1:30 PM in the SUNYAC parking lot across from the soccer field. Tailgate packages cost $10 and include a chili dinner and beverage. All alumni are invited.

Upcoming events

The Albany State football team will travel to Long Island to meet up with Hofstra. The Dutchmen won last year's game, 10-7. A year later, Albany gained revenge, 19-17. The Dutchmen will have to stop Hofstra running back John Redmond, who is expected to be more than 100 yards over the season average. Hofstra quarterback Mike Russell will be facing a blitzing Hofstra defense.

Softball playoffs

The Tailgunners will face Rolling Thunder in the tailgate party on Monday, Oct. 29. Two 3 p.m. Rolling Thunder defeated the Tailgunners 3-2 in the first round of the playoffs. The Tailgunners exploded for four runs in the fifth inning to advance to the finals.
