Win Over Plattsburgh Keeps Danes Alive

by Nathan Salant

Albany State Great Danes varsity basketball team kept their NCAA Tournament-SUNY Conference Championship hopes alive in a 58-55 victory against the Plattsburgh State Cardinals Saturday night in the Dunn Center. The Danes, now 19-9 overall and 11-3 in the SUNYAC, are in good shape to advance to the NCAA Division II Tournament. The Danes continued, "we played with the type of discipline I have been trying to instill.

Sure, some individual scoring late in the game. Johnson had 13, and Audi was all over the place. We also did some good stuff in the opening minutes and then lost it. We played with the Danes leading by 4, and 4:55 minutes might have scored, but probably would have done it differently if we gave the ball to Plattsburgh with a 22-24 lead, and we used it to our advantage. Pre-LSAT Course to be Offered

By David Woodhull

The Pre-Law Studies Program at the University of Albany announces that a Pre-LSAT course will be offered this year to students at a reduced cost of less than one-half the usual charge.

The course will be offered this year to all students interested in the Pre-Law Studies Program. The fee for the course is $25 per student, compared to the usual fee of $50.

The Pre-Law Studies Program is a course designed to prepare students for the Law School Admissions Test (LSAT), which is the test used by law schools to evaluate applicants. The course will cover topics such as legal reasoning, critical thinking, and reading comprehension.

The program is open to students who have completed at least one year of college and who are considering a career in law. Interested students should contact the Pre-Law Studies Program for more information.

A secret service agent directed policemen who told the Hallway Managers that they would have to stop opening the Hallway. After that, they left and allowed the students to continue their activities. The conflict between the Hallway Managers and the students continued for several hours.

The New Jersey Supreme Court ruled that the telephone company acted legally when it was required to turn off some of the students' phones, which were being used for political purposes. The court's decision upheld the Constitution's guarantee of freedom of communication.

The need for a new communications system is urgent. The existing system is becoming increasingly outdated and inadequate to meet the needs of a growing population. The court's decision is a step in the right direction, but more needs to be done to ensure that the public's right to communicate is protected.

In the end, the students were successful in their efforts to gain control over the situation. They were able to keep the Hallway Managers from entering the dormitory and were able to continue their activities. The conflict between the Hallway Managers and the students continues, but the court's decision is a significant step forward in ensuring that the public's right to communicate is protected.

Between Students and FSA:

On this campus the Student Association has attempted to use forcefully in an effort to protect students from increased costs that seem to be attacking in every direction. Board rates have just been raised 8% per cent. Check-Cashing fees go twenty-five cents per check. Credit Card fees are going up to $5 per credit card per semester, and tuition is expected to go up even more. Men of all ages who have paid for the services of the Student Association have been placed between the students and the services they have paid for and deserve.

What has unfortunately been lost in this test of wills is the material importance. What has unfortunately been lost in this test of wills is the personal insult and the latest action is to demonstrate that you simply don't mess with the Student Senate. Directors in the Commissary can point across Perimeter Road and say that the FSA paid for the renovation and improvements to add charm to the now lifeless student hangout. Council has in effect said that they have taken the board increase as a personal insult and the latest action is to demonstrate that you simply don't mess with the Student Senate. Council in an effort to gain a new appearance for the Rathskeller would have to spend $4,000 for the cost of the partition itself, while the FSA would pay the renovation and improve its addition to the now lifeless student hangout. Council has in effect said that they have taken the board increase as a personal insult and the latest action is to demonstrate that you simply don't mess with the Student Senate.

The Wall

In what is said to be the battle of nerves between the Student Senate and the Faculty Senate Association, the two may have mutually inaudible arms that impress that will use the coincidence in the proper perspectives. Northeastern University in an effort to gain new appeal for the Rathskeller, we have been presented with the classic example of retaliation taken to its irrational conclusion.

Students have been asked to pay more than $4,000 for the cost of the renovation. The FSA would pay for the renovation and improvements to add charm to the now lifeless student hangout. Whose Right to Life?

I began to question the principles of the human right to life and whether or not it is a human right. "Whose right to life?" Right to life, that is anti-abortionists, right to life, that is the right to kill individuals that are hopelessly sick or injured? This all implies a sense of moral right to life, which philosophy, that philosophy he..."...

Transcending Meditation

Transcendental Meditation has been around longer than anyone can tell. Its popularity in the Eastern areas of the world has transcended the generations, though the Western world is only just starting to follow.

The precepts of TM are simple. Practicing it is an attempt at quieting your mind, relaxing the body. The goals involved are the mellowness and self-satisfaction of a peaceful existence.

Though it works for some and not others, the idea behind it all is something that perhaps all ought to have.

TM: Yet Another Consciousness

by John Ghrist OMT

In these days of increasing scientific, technological, and industrial progress, it is understandable that many people are seeking a more meaningful and fulfilling way of life. One such approach is Transcendental Meditation (TM), which has gained popularity in recent years. It is a simple technique that involves sitting quietly for 20 minutes twice a day, focusing on a mantra that helps to quiet the mind and allow for greater mental clarity and peace.

In the late 1950s, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who had studied meditation in India, introduced TM to the West. Since then, it has spread to over 100 countries and has been taught to millions of people. The foundation for TM is the Science of Creative Intelligence (SCI), which is based on the Maharishi's understanding of the mind-body connection and the importance of inner peace.

Learning How

The first step in learning TM is to select a mantra, a word or phrase that has personal meaning and is easy to remember. This mantra is repeated silently during meditation sessions. The process is simple and requires no special equipment or instruction. The goal is to quiet the mind and allow for greater mental freedom and creativity.

The Effects

Studies have shown that regular practice of TM can have a number of beneficial effects on both the mind and body. For example, it can help to reduce stress, anxiety, and depression, and improve sleep and concentration. It has also been shown to improve physical health, with decreases in blood pressure, heart rate, and stress hormones.

In addition to these physical effects, TM has been shown to have a positive impact on mental health. It can help to improve mood, increase feelings of relaxation, and reduce symptoms of anxiety and depression. It has also been used to treat a variety of mental health conditions, including post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), schizophrenia, and addiction.

TM is a non-religious practice that can be beneficial to people of all faiths and backgrounds. It is a natural and simple way to improve mental and physical health, and it is accessible to anyone who is interested in learning more about it.

"It's a waste of time. John Lennon has said, and there are other TM dropouts who find it just wasn't for them."
What To Do With A Gift

The modern-day fortune teller wears a sweater, high heels and necklace to a two-story white house in Colonia as a discolored, a worn porch, candle lantern, crystal and pink and white arrows.

She looks a little uncertain, takes it on her red, the world of a modern-day woman, as she discovers the secrets in the lines on her palm, and the screen of her life is recounting as you almost believe her.

The modern-day fortune teller marries a roofer, has kids and retreats to her driveway, a front porch, color television, imitation crystal and red nails. She is a "reader and advisor" to the many who

The modern-day fortune teller is twenty, but is much older. Holding something . . . What paper? I never heard of that. . . .

She is smiling when she comes to the living room floor looking ever-so-spacious, the walls white, the furniture spotless and the flowers red from reading his features."

You begin to worry, but then realize that this is the fortune teller, and that's your enemy. Too close. Too crowded. Only through marriage.

"What? . . . OH. . . Wait!"

Cyprus After War

By Patricia Keaton

The recent war in Cyprus completely devastated one of the world's most beautiful and prosperous regions, the Mediterranean. Modern Greek Cypriots who had owned farms or orchards in the country, have been killed or driven out. In a plan

The remaining Turkish-Cypriot population is approximately 120,000, and there is no hope for Cyprus to return to its former glory in the near future.

The modern-day fortune teller is five and demonstrates that fact to him by holding all six of her fingers up in the air. She looks at me closely, but she will not speak to next year and it must have been just that way.

But before you can finish she gives you a kiss on the cheek.

"Sweetheart, I have a 1230.

And as the hour passes with the dentist, and then the next day as you get up, . . . "Yeah, I could."

"It's a gift. It's a gift."

But interesting in following you and me. My mother's mother.

"You don't know what it is?"

"1 used to read the stars' cards."

"I only do character readings and fortunes."

With A Gift

"How do you do il?"

"It's a gill, sweetheart. It's a gift from my mother."

"Does your mother have any reason to do that. . . . What paper? I never heard of that. . . ."

The Price of Meat and Potatoes: The Housing Law Controversy

Dear Reader,

It is our pleasure to bring to you this latest edition of our publication, dedicated to the discussion of the latest events and issues facing our community. This week, we have focused on the recent controversy surrounding the College's housing law, which has sparked a great deal of discussion and debate among students, faculty, and the general public.

The controversy began when the College's Governing Board approved a new housing law that would require all students to live on campus, with no exceptions for off-campus students. The law was met with widespread opposition from students, who argued that it was unfair and unreasonable. The College's administration defended the law, citing issues of safety, security, and community cohesion as the primary reasons for its passage.

In response to the controversy, we have written this article to provide an overview of the events leading up to the law's passage, as well as a discussion of the arguments for and against the law. We believe that it is important for our readers to have an understanding of the issues at stake, and we hope that this article will help to provide that understanding.

We encourage our readers to engage in the discussion surrounding this important issue, and to share their thoughts and opinions with us. We are committed to providing a platform for open and honest dialogue, and we hope that our publication will continue to serve as a vehicle for that purpose.

Sincerely,

Notes From the House of the Dead: Beneath the Wheel

by Bob Meyer

I am alwaysishly to occasional visits to an institution of higher learning were I find myself in a small room, where the walls are lined with bookshelves. The room is filled with students, and the atmosphere is one of quiet study. Today, however, the room is empty except for a single student, who is sitting at a desk with his head in his hands. I approach him and ask if he needs help. He nods, and I sit down next to him.

"I just can't get my head around the concept of death," he says. "I mean, I understand that people die, but the idea of being gone forever is so...final." I put my arm around him and tell him that I understand his feelings. "It's okay to be afraid of death," I say. "But remember, death is a part of life. And you're not alone in feeling this way."

The student nods, and I sit with him for a while longer. When he's ready, I stand up and leave, knowing that I've helped him in some small way. As I walk out of the room, I smile to myself. Even though I work in an institution of higher learning, I still find myself learning from the students every day.
Irish Art Isn't Green Any More

by Linda Green

What comes to mind when you think of Irish art? Count the numbers of shamrocks you can discover in the works of artists from the past. The answer: many.

The shamrock has been a symbol of Ireland for centuries, but it has also been used to represent other themes, such as peace and prosperity. The question is: how can we distinguish between the true Irish art and the art that imitates its symbols?

The answer is found in the works of contemporary Irish artists, who are often inspired by the natural beauty of the country and its cultural heritage. For example, the work of Seamus Heaney, a poet and playwright, captures the essence of the Irish landscape and its people through his words and images.

However, the true Irish art is not limited to the traditional symbols. It is also found in the works of artists who seek to explore the complexities of the Irish identity and the challenges facing the country today.

In conclusion, Irish art is not just green. It is a reflection of the country's rich cultural heritage and the diverse perspectives of its artists. While the shamrock may be a symbol of Ireland, it is not the only symbol that defines the country.
