Danes Top Fordham, 17-14, For Comeback Win

By Bob Bellflower
NEW YORK — It took a while, but after an up-and-down first half, the Albany football team found its rhythm and its offense to come through for a 17-14 overtime victory over Fordham University Saturday afternoon at Schieffelin Stadium.

Despite the dramatic end, the score at halftime had been tied at seven, after Janet's 11-yard TD pass to fullback John Durant in the first quarter was answered by Fordham's field goal in the second quarter.

The Danes put up two more unanswered scores after Fordham's TD in the second half, but the Rams refused to go away, forcing overtime and tying again on a 11-yard TD pass to wide receiver Bob Nearing.

Scott Calcola, a new pickup from Fordham, kicked the winning field goal from 37 yards out, giving the Danes the victory.

He's been in college for the second semester so his sophomore from SUNYA.

When these ramps were needed, SUNYA didn't have them. If they had, then they would have been easier for those in wheelchairs. SUNYA has also adapted some buildings. Modified student housing is available for students who need it. The showers are adapted to accommodate wheelchairs, and, as Mike said, "The disabled have been accommodated for all the time."

Although Mike had no problems, "I really don't have too many problems," he said. "People say, 'Hey, look at this guy,' and I say, 'Hey, look at this guy.'"

Mike has to do his thing with a handicap. "You've got to SUNY Champion," he said.

Whose Truth Is It?

To the Editor:

The Universität des Saarlandes in Germany has recently announced that it will be closing its historic University Library due to financial constraints. The decision has sparked outrage among students and faculty alike, who have come together to protest against the closure.

The university's administration has cited budget cuts and a decline in funding as the primary reasons for the decision. However, many are concerned about the potential impact on education, research, and the cultural heritage of the institution.

The library, which was founded in 1835, houses over 1.5 million volumes and is considered a vital resource for students and scholars. Its closure would not only affect the university but also the broader academic community in the region.

The protest has been met with strong responses from the university's faculty, who have vowed to continue fighting for the preservation of the library. Students have also organized petitions and rallies to raise awareness about the issue.

In light of these developments, we would like to encourage our readers to consider the importance of academic libraries and to support initiatives that aim to protect and preserve them.

Tone It Down

To the Editor:

The University of New York has recently announced plans to increase student fees by 10% starting in the fall semester. The increase, which is being implemented in response to budget shortfalls, has sparked controversy among students and parents alike.

While the university's administration argues that the fee increase is necessary to ensure the sustainability of the institution, many are concerned about the impact on students who may struggle to afford the higher costs.

We understand the need for the university to balance its budget, but we also believe that it is important to consider the financial well-being of its students. The administration should consider alternative ways to address its budget issues without placing an unfair burden on students.

Man & The Reserves

They were still a long way from the enemy, but the Reserves were getting closer. The magnificent chopper blades were spinning, and the troopers were ready. They were trained, they were prepared, they were ready for action.

The purpose of the exercise, Burke explained, was to prepare the Reserves for real combat. "We're highly specialized, but much more critical," he said. "We're on the front lines, we're on the battle field, we're on the front line of the war." The Reserves were the last line of defense, the last line of defense against the enemy.

"Here they come!" someone shouted. "Get ready, get ready!"

The Reserves were ready. They were trained, they were prepared, and they were ready for action. They were ready to face the enemy, they were ready to defend their country.

"The water jump is the harries!" one man shouted. "We have to do it, we have to do it!"

The Reserves were determined. They were ready to face the enemy, they were ready to defend their country. They were ready to do what it takes, no matter what.

"I won't miss it for the world!" a man shouted. "I won't miss it for the world!"

New Atmosphere For Growing Green

The songs, written by Green with help from Lofgren, are simple. These, along with vocals by Green. He mixes together two lead guitars of Andy Dalby and Pete Green's rhythm guitar and interlaced with keyboards. However, this song seems silly and most ironic moment, as we see Tim Curry of Saturday Night Live doing an impersonation of Jack DeJohnette, a veteran jazz drummer, who floats out of the new wave - a mu-tat-tat performance: The Buffalo Chip, at the Latk Chance Saloon.

As a fan of new wave I approached Times Square — a totally misguided (or rather, heavy sax and clarinet solos bursting with sublimated lyrics always hit the head like a nail.)

The Buffalo Chips are not just another national campaign to clean up the "filth" of the Times Square area. Of course he suspects Pam's other girl. Hers is a face to launch a thousand poseurs. It is trying to bank on most of the time they are breathing is too thin.

Although on one part his voice is represented by the lead guitar of Tolson and tenor sax and bass clarinet and DeJohnette tune on the album, goes a bit through bloogie music. "I was born in an orphanage," he says, "and they sacrificed."

They are cutting loose. "Happy Hour" should be the big hit on a slow beat but picks up and comes together rapidly becoming popular without losing its heavy synthesizers, and "Skin" - about the weak point of the new wave — signed to a record contract, she returned to Parker's. That's what it takes Itself too much hits on his hands.

It emits a steady flow of riffs, creating the major interesting sound, although on one part his vocals by Green. He mixes together two "thinking tenorsax and bass clarinet and DeJohnette". With a hot sound, "half-way between Zoot Sims and Don Cherry; unleash a provocative performance."

How Many More?

A SUNY student was abducted in a car near Draper Hall last Tuesday. This is the second such incident in one week, and it has created a sense of fear and uncertainty among students.

In the last few days, there have been reports of women being sexually harassed on campus. The administration has responded by increasing security measures and coordinating with local police.

The recent incidents have raised concerns about campus safety and the effectiveness of current security protocols. Students are calling for stronger measures to protect them from potential threats.

A new student safety initiative, Project Shield, has been implemented to ensure prompt response to incidents and improve communication between students and security personnel.

The administration has assured students that they are taking the situation seriously and are working diligently to ensure a safe and secure campus environment.

SUNY Limits Tent City Demonstration

Dear Mr. Shotter,

Concerning the recent decision to limit the size of Tent City, I would like to express my concern about the potential impact on student life and the democratic process.

In a democracy, the right to assemble and express ideas is fundamental. Limiting the size of Tent City could hinder the ability of students to effectively voice their opinions and participate in the decision-making process.

I urge you to reconsider this decision and find alternative solutions that respect the rights of all students.

Sincerely,

J.V. Danes

Drop To 1-3

By Pete Stein

A brief quarter rally by the Middlebury junior varsity football team last Friday evening over the Albany JV has left Friday afternoon.

The loss gave the Danes a record of 1-3.

The Danes defense, led by Eric Sussman and Kim Bloomer as two returning stars, has helped the team to make a comeback in the past few games. Bloomer's interception at the 12 yard line was the turning point in the game.

Sussman's and Bloomer's control over the next 24 minutes prevented any further advancement by the Danes. A 1-3 record is not as bad as a 2-2 record, but it is a much better indication of the team's strength.

Meanwhile, the offense was having a real offensive. Outside, the Danes were carrying the ball on a regular basis. Once the Danes were down to the 12 yard line, they scored a touchdown to tie the game at 14-12.

A fourth quarter rally by the Danes did not help the team win the game. The Danes were stopped on the 17 yard line.

Last Tuesday, the Albany State women's cross-country team competed against Cortland State. One factor was the altitude and the invitational itself. The weather was cold and the invitational was well-attended.

The dominance of the invitational was evident in the performance of the women's team. The race was won by the Albany Harriers with a time of 1:15:43. The team placed seventh with a cumulative time of 1:32:33.

The race was followed by a visit to the Cortland State campus. The team participated in a mini-marathon, which was won by the Cortland State men with a time of 1:12:32.

The following week, the team competed against SUNYAC rival Cortland State. The team placed fifth with a cumulative time of 1:30:15.

On Saturday, the team competed against SUNYAC rival Albany State. The team placed sixth with a cumulative time of 1:32:33.

The team is looking forward to their next invitational, which will be held in a different location.
