Presbie scores twice as booters top Brockport

By Mark Levinc

The Albany State men's soccer team scored two late goals to beat Brockport, 2-0, Wednesday afternoon in the last non-conference game of the season. The Danes defeated the Dutchmen, 256-90, in the second half.

The Albany State defense did an outstanding job of their own, containing the Dutchmen's attack and preventing them from scoring. The defense was solid in the midfield, allowing the offense to control the ball most of the time.

On the offensive side, Presbie scored twice, once in the first half and once in the second. He took full advantage of the opportunities given to him by his teammates, showing great skill and technique.

The Danes' winning goal came in the second half, when Presbie scored after a well-timed pass from his teammate. The Dutchmen were not able to respond, as the defense continued to dominate.

Overall, it was a solid performance by Albany State, as they prepare to face their first conference game of the season. The Danes are currently undefeated in the conference and are looking to continue their winning streak.

Danes' offense halted in 24-7 loss to Dutchmen

By Mark Levinc

The Albany State men's soccer team suffered a 24-7 loss to the Dutchmen Wednesday afternoon in the last non-conference game of the season. The Danes' offensive line was overpowered by the Dutchmen, who scored three goals in the second half to secure the victory.

The Dutchmen's goal came on a free kick, taken from the midfield. The ball was deflected by the Albany State defense, but it found its way into the goal. The Dutchmen scored two more goals in the second half, including a penalty kick.

The Danes' defense did their best to keep the Dutchmen from scoring, but were ultimately unsuccessful. The Dutchmen's attack was too much for the Danes to handle, as they were unable to score a single goal in the game.

The loss drops the Danes' record to 3-0-0, while the Dutchmen improve to 4-0-0. The Danes will now turn their attention to their first conference game of the season, looking to bounce back from this disappointing performance.

Upset Council member quits for new position

By Philip Lefevre

The Upset Council member, who was appointed to the position by the President, has resigned for a new position. The member, who had been serving on the council for several months, was appointed to the position by the President after being nominated by the Upset Council.

The member's resignation comes as a surprise to many on campus, as he had been an active member of the council and had been involved in several important decisions. His resignation is expected to have an impact on the council's operations, as he had been serving in a key role.

The Upset Council is a student-run organization that investigates and addresses issues of concern to the student body. The member's resignation will require the council to find a new member to fill the position, which is expected to be done quickly.
WORLDWIDE BRIEFS

Militia chief killed

(AP) An armed militiaman killed a police officer outside the police station Wednesday in the capital of the central African nation of Zaire.

(AFP) The military government of Zaire identified the officer as a detective of the directorate of national security.

A military official said the officer was killed by a bullet fired at the front of the police station in the village of Goma.

The official said the officer was shot while the military was waiting for the officer to help the military in the capital.

Cardinal Cooke dies

(AP) Cardinal John Cardinal Cooke, who was named a cardinal by Pope John Paul II in 1981, has died at the age of 88.

(Cooke) was born in 1902 in New York City and was educated at the University of Illinois and the University of Chicago.

He served as a cardinal in the United States and was appointed to the College of Cardinals in 1981 by Pope John Paul II.

Salvador ald cut

(AP) The Salvadoran government has cut the salaries of its workers by 20 percent.

The government announced the cut on Friday in an effort to reduce the country's debt.

The move comes after the government announced earlier this week that it would freeze salaries for all government workers.

Brink's verdict in

(AP) The jury in the Brink's armored car robbery trial has returned a verdict of guilty in the case against the four defendants.

The verdict was announced by the judge in the federal courthouse in Boston.

The defendants are charged with robbing the Brink's armored car of $2.5 million in cash.

The trial lasted for three weeks and featured testimony from more than 50 witnesses.

Correction

The article in the Sunday Times about the Brink's armored car robbery contained an error. The amount of money taken from the armored car was $2.5 million, not $2.5 billion as stated in the article.

An internal inspection was held on Wednesday, Oct. 7, 1983, at the SUNYA loading dock and a high volume of containers was returned.

Students riot in Chile

The Maid4 Student Movement, a radical group in Chile, has announced a series of protests and strikes to demand the resignation of the current government.

The group has called for a general strike on Wednesday, Oct. 7, and has threatened to occupy government buildings if the demands are not met.

An internal inspection was held on Wednesday, Oct. 7, at the SUNYA loading dock and a high volume of containers was returned.

Returned containers piled at SUNYA loading dock

UAS sees high volume of containers returned

By John Thorne

UAS officials said that the high volume of containers returned to the SUNYA loading dock was a result of a special inspection that was conducted.

The inspection was conducted in response to a report that the containers were being stored in a unsafe manner.

The inspection revealed that the containers were being stored in a unsafe manner.

The UAS officials said that the containers would be stored in a safe manner and that the inspection would be conducted on a regular basis.

Displaced students praise SUNYA accessibility

Speaker says resume is not enough to get jobs

By Ian Clements

Computer and business courses are important, but experience, research, and contact are also crucial to getting a job, according to John Alexander, a director of SUNYA's Career Planning and Placement Office.

Alexander emphasized these points during a lecture he gave on job-seeking strategies. He noted that employers are looking for candidates who can communicate effectively, both verbally and in writing.

"Networking" is also important, according to Alexander. He advised students to develop a network of contacts in their field. "People who can't communicate can't function in our society," he said.

Alexander suggested that students display their resumes and make contact with potential employers. "A good resume is like a good news story," he said. "It catches your attention and then moves you along." He explained that many employers don't have time to read each resume thoroughly and will pay more attention to an interesting one than a boring one. Looking ahead at arms talks

By Donald Birn

Rights will be at stake at the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union in Geneva starting today on medium-range missiles, a topic that will surely have symbolic and practical implications for the whole world. The talks have been scheduled to begin on May 4, after a delay of over a year due to the downing of a Korean jet by the Soviet Union.

The talks are crucial because of the potential for a new arms agreement that could have a significant impact on the balance of power between the two superpowers. The United States has long been concerned about the growing threat of medium-range missiles from the Soviet Union, which could be used to strike targets in Europe and even in the United States.

The United States has been working to reduce the number of medium-range missiles in the region, and the negotiations in Geneva are expected to focus on limiting the number of such weapons that each side can deploy. The talks are also expected to address the issue of verification, which is critical to ensuring compliance with any new agreement.

The United States is likely to push for a more stringent verification regime, including satellite surveillance and regular inspections, to ensure that any new agreement is enforceable. The Soviet Union, on the other hand, is likely to resist such demands, as it has historically been skeptical of such measures.

If a new agreement is reached, it could have a significant impact on the global arms race. The United States is expected to use the agreement as a bargaining chip in other areas, such as the strategic arms reduction talks.

The negotiations are expected to be difficult, as both sides have concerns about the impact of any new agreement on their military capabilities. However, the United States is likely to push for a strong agreement, as it has long been a proponent of arms control.

The talks are also expected to have implications for other areas of international relations, including issues such as trade and economic cooperation. The United States is likely to use the negotiations as an opportunity to strengthen its relationship with other countries that are important to its global strategy.

In the end, the outcome of the talks will likely depend on the willingness of both sides to compromise and find a mutually acceptable solution. The United States is likely to push for a strong agreement, while the Soviet Union is likely to resist such demands. However, a new agreement could have a significant impact on the global arms race and set the stage for future negotiations on other arms control issues.

An American In Munich: An Inside View
by Tom Kacandes

I'm really not sure how to explain the way that I fell in love with Germany. To some, this might sound strange, but my love for this place is quite simple. When I arrived in Munich several years ago, I was struck by the beauty of the city. The architecture, the art, the history—all of it was captivating. I felt a sense of belonging that I had never felt before.

But what really drew me to Germany was the people. I found them to be kind, welcoming, and open-minded. They welcomed me into their homes and shared their stories with me. It was a privilege to be able to learn from them and to experience their culture firsthand.

Today, I continue to be amazed by the diversity of the people I meet here. Whether it's an old man with a weathered face or a young woman with a fresh look, each person has a unique story to tell. It's these stories that have made Germany such a special place to me.

So, yes, I may be an American, but I'm also proud to call myself a German. The more I learn about this country and its people, the more I feel a sense of belonging. I'm grateful for the opportunity to experience this beautiful place and its rich history. deutschenstaat!
Elisa Monte Excites The PAC

The Elisa Monte Dance Company, touring much of Europe and the United States, was scheduled to perform at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts Center Friday night as the curtain rose. The Elisa Monte Dance Company, an ensemble of seven dancers, four female and three male, is included in the two-night run of its national tour, "Dance of the Seventies," which opened last night at the PAC. The company, founded by Elisa Monte in 1957, is known for its innovative and challenging works that push the boundaries of contemporary dance.

The two women appeared almost identical in their stage costumes, both wearing black leotards and pants, with their hair styled in elegant updo's. The older Tom, played by Jarka Burlan, contrasted with the younger Tom, played by William Salzman, who had a more youthful appearance. The older Tom was described as a gentle caller, arranged by Amanda, while the younger Tom was described as a bolder dancer. The audience was captivated by the chemistry between the two characters, creating a sense of longing and anticipation.

The first act ends with the anticipation of a second act, setting the stage for the rest of the performance, giving their unbridled energy and enthusiasm. The audience did not have to wait long to be impressed by the talent and skill of the dancers, who performed a variety of routines that showcased their strength, flexibility, and acrobatic abilities. The dancers moved fluidly and gracefully, their movements synchronized to create a harmonious whole.

Speaking In Heads

R.E.M.ark

R.E.M. is one of the most successful and long-lasting rock bands from the 1980s, known for their distinctive sound that blended rock, punk, new wave, and country music. The band was formed in Athens, Georgia, in 1980, and consists of Michael Stipe, Peter Buck, Mike Mills, and Mike Rutherford. Their music is characterized by Stipe's enigmatic lyrics and the band's distinctive guitar sound, which is often said to represent the voice of the American South.

The band's popularity has grown over the years, with hits like "The One I Love," "Losing My Mind," and "It's the End of the World As We Know It." The band has sold over 50 million albums worldwide, and their music has been featured in numerous films and TV shows. The band has also been influential in the development of the alternative rock genre, and their sound has been cited as an influence by many younger bands.

The band's latest album, "Murmur," was released in 1983 and features hits like "Losing My Mind" and "It's the End of the World As We Know It." The album solidified R.E.M.'s sound and showcased their ability to create hits that resonated with fans across the world.

The band's success has been achieved through a combination of talent, hard work, and dedication to their craft. They have remained true to their roots and have continued to evolve their sound over the years, ensuring that their music remains relevant and exciting to fans of all generations.

More on Flight 007

To the Editor:

I think it is best to avoid the discussion about the Crash of Flight 007. Such arguments are likely to complicate the situation further.

The Crash of Flight 007 occurred on August 2, 1983, in the Barents Sea, off the coast of Russia. The aircraft was a Soviet Ilyushin Il-62, and it was carrying 263 passengers and crew members on a scheduled flight from Moscow to Vladivostok.

Several theories have been proposed to explain the crash, including a military conflict, a technical malfunction of the aircraft, or an act of terrorism. However, these theories are not supported by any concrete evidence.

The United States government, under President Ronald Reagan, however, was quick to blame the Soviet Union for the crash, claiming that it was a result of a military conflict.

In light of these events, it is important to remember that the Crash of Flight 007 was a tragic event that resulted in the loss of many lives. It is also important to consider the impact that such events have on international relations and the need for effective conflict resolution.

The government's response to the Crash of Flight 007 was controversial and was met with criticism from various quarters. The government's immediate response was to demand an apology from the Soviet Union and to seek compensation for the families of the victims.

In conclusion, the Crash of Flight 007 was a sad and tragic event that had a profound impact on international relations. It is important to remember the victims of this event and to work towards preventing such tragedies in the future.

Women booters drop 5-1 decision to LeMoyne

By Mary Wierde

Central went into the halftime in the lead 1-0, but they couldn't maintain the lead. But, they did play well against the Albany State women's soccer team, which was recently defeated by the University of New York. They were unable to score in the first half, and Albany State went on to win the game 5-1.

In the first half, the Albany State women's soccer team played well, and Central was able to maintain the lead 1-0. However, in the second half, Albany State was able to score four goals and win the game 5-1.

Netmen dump Oswego in prep for SUNYACs

By Marc Heyman

The Danes will go into tomorrow's game with the same confidence in their offense as their opponents do in their defense. Albany and Oswego are both in the top 10 Division III schools, and Albany will be taking on the second-ranked team.

uling the 1-3 Danes will not be facing a team that is easy to beat. Oswego is ranked tenth in the country and Albany is rated seventh.

Richard Yulke, the Danes' top singles player, will be facing a tough challenge when he meets his opponent. Oswego's top singles player, John Gabriel, is ranked sixth in the nation.

The Danes will have to be prepared for a tough match, as Oswego is coming off a win against the University of Connecticut. The Danes need to focus on their own game and not on the opponent's strengths.

Candidate favor nuke arms control at forum

By Susan Aloe and Susan Milligan

The question of nuclear arms control was a major topic at the Democratic presidential forum in Denver. The candidates expressed varying degrees of support for arms control agreements.

Mario Cuomo, the Governor of New York, endorsed the budget but warned of the importance of the budget. He emphasized the need for a restoration of the federal budget of 1984 and the proposed budget of 1985.

The candidates agreed that the fundamental principles of arms control do not change, but the programs change.

SUNYAC budget proposes cut of 1,100 positions

By Ben Silberman

The SUNYAC budget proposes a cut of 1,100 positions. The SUNYAC budget is a proposal for the fiscal year starting on July 1, 1984, and ending on June 30, 1985.

The SUNYAC board of trustees approved the budget, which includes a $1.35 billion reduction in the SUNYAC budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1985.
