A number of students prefer on-campus residence over private apartments, but demand for on-campus housing exceeds the University's ability to meet this need. Some students feel that on-campus living provides a more convenient environment for academic and social activities, while others find off-campus housing to be more affordable and appealing. The University is working on improving on-campus housing options to meet student needs.

According to the University, it does not plan on expanding or improving on-campus housing options in the near future due to budget constraints. Some students have voiced concerns about the University's inability to meet their housing needs, and there is a movement to create a student-led housing organization to address these issues. The University and students are working together to find a solution to the transportation problem and improve on-campus living conditions.

The Soviet-backed regime, which has been in power since 1978, is known for its strict censorship and control over the media. The authorities have been known to detain or deport journalists who have reported on issues that the regime considers sensitive. The U.S. government has condemned the Afghan government's actions and expressed concerns about the safety of American journalists in the country. The situation remains tense, with both sides in a standoff over the freedom of the press in Afghanistan.

Is HUD's Winter Migrant Assistance Program $100 million a waste? By Ben Jastorff

The HUD's Winter Migrant Assistance Program was designed to help winter residents of the U.S. who are in need of assistance. The program provides funds to states, local governments, and nonprofit organizations to provide a wide range of services, including shelter, food, clothing, and medical care. However, the program has been criticized for being poorly managed and not effectively targeting the neediest populations. Critics argue that the funds are often misused and that the program's beneficiaries are not adequately vetted to ensure that they truly deserve assistance. Some have called for a complete overhaul of the program to ensure that its funds are being used effectively and efficiently.

American Meddling

In 1980, the U.S. government intervened in the Iranian Revolution, overthrowing the Shah and installing a pro-American government. This intervention was justified on the grounds that the Shah's regime was oppressive and that the new government would be more stable and democratic. However, the U.S. government's actions in Iran have been widely criticized. Many have argued that the U.S. government's intervention in Iran was motivated by its own strategic and economic interests, rather than by a genuine commitment to the principles of human rights and democracy.

The U.S. government's actions in Iran have had a profound impact on the country's history. The overthrow of the Shah led to widespread protests and turmoil, and the new government was unable to maintain control. This ultimately led to the rise of Ayatollah Khomeini and the establishment of the Islamic Republic of Iran. The U.S. government's actions in Iran have also had a significant impact on American foreign policy, and have contributed to the development of a range of anti-American sentiments in the region.

It’s a stewed town. Take a generous portion of every ethnicity on Earth, heap it on an island smaller than the Dallas-Fort Worth airport, add a few hundred years and what do you get??? New York City, but specifically Manhattan.
That’s right, there are four other boroughs and the rest of the Empire state, as well as other states and countries and continents. Geographically Manhattan island is a speck, a dot on a map, to the enormity of the rest. But when you think of culture, education, finance, power (not the bleached out kind found in White Houses but the kind including Grand Central Station), and the kind in small restaurants on Mott Street), arts, museums, entertainment, sports, music, even crime, then you’ve got to talk about the Big Apple. And that means Manhattan, that island where all things are possible.

Perhaps the last stop on the roller coaster that is the American dream, Manhattan is where young maidens of Nebraska and Wyoming come to become somebodies.
Some end up on the streets, but there’s always that one, that one out of millions, who goes out there a nobody and comes back a star.

They say it’s a heartless town filled with ambitious types who beat their kids and die of heart attacks before they’re 40. It’s a tough town, demanding, persistent, it never lets up though it often lets you down. They say that you haven’t made it until you make it on the streets of New York. And for every light on Broadway . . .

Yet despite it all, the masses never stop looking east to The City and the State of Possibility. Nor do its haters ever abate their wrath: always rushing, all the dirt and grime and crime, congested. Like pepperoni, New York is hot, spicy, and hard to swallow. You either love it or hate it, but you must react to it.

The News

NBUA is the only newspaper in the Bronx in which the General Assembly and the Board of Directors can unorderedly express their views. We provide a forum for debate and discussion on issues of importance to the community. The views expressed in this newspaper are not necessarily those of the General Assembly or the Board of Directors.

Queens Stoops To Conquer

In the Bronx, there are three types of front yards: the one with flowers and the other with a lawn. The third one is the one with a stoop. These stoops are often the site of vibrant community life. They provide a space for people to gather, socialize, and enjoy each other's company.

Good Points, Bad Points

Streetlife Serenade

What keeps our "civilized" society constantly intrigued by a small, blunt, lawless community?

Cliff Sloan

Perhaps it is the fact that Love and Death are synonyms in this society. For some, life is a constant battle against the forces of darkness. Others see it as a game, a challenge to be overcome. But for others, it is simply a way of life, a way to survive in a world where everything is uncertain.

Can't Stop The Music

The music of the modern world is a constant presence in our lives. From the radio to the car, music accompanies us wherever we go. It provides a soundtrack for our lives, a way to express ourselves and connect with others. But as the world changes, so too does the music we listen to. New genres emerge, old ones fade, and the cycle continues.

Onetime

One day a year, the Lustre Boys stage a parade down the sidewalk. It's a tradition that dates back to the early days of the neighborhood. The boys dress up in costumes and march down the street, play music, and have a good time. It's a way for them to show their pride and celebrate their heritage.

Chinese Restaurant

This is a photo of a Chinese restaurant in the Bronx. It's a place where you can find authentic Chinese cuisine, as well as a friendly and welcoming atmosphere. The menu offers a variety of dishes, from traditional favorites to more adventurous options.

The streets of New York City felt like the veins and arteries of its conglomerate body. All of the offices and stores and buildings and homes were the cells where its blood ran.

The speed was worn off and I was feeling pretty exhausted, and willing to abort, unready to press on... I was wondering if it wouldn't be repetitive, if New York, the twenty-four hour place, wouldn't be able to hold a willing victim for fifty.

After Fifty Hours

New York: Just Like I Pictured It

Jay B. Gissen

New York, like the center of the world, has its own special place in the universe. It is the heart of the metropolis, the capital of commerce, and the key to the future. New York is the place where dreams are made, and where the impossible becomes possible.

The streets of New York City were alive with energy and excitement. The people were rushing about, going about their business, and enjoying the sights and sounds of the city. The air was filled with the smell of food and the sound of music. The lights were bright and the colors were vibrant. It was a place where anything was possible.

I walked up to Union Square, and at two p.m., the speed was worn off and I was feeling pretty exhausted, and willing to abort, unready to press on... I was wondering if it wouldn't be repetitive, if New York, the twenty-four hour place, wouldn't be able to hold a willing victim for fifty.

Come Together

To the Editor:

I am referring in particular to my quote in the school newspaper last Friday which was misquoted. I was speaking about my feelings concerning the American higher education system and how it has failed to educate and train American citizens to think for themselves. The quote was taken out of context and does not accurately reflect my thoughts.

Sincerely,

After a loss of over a month, and with their first six games either won or lost by three points or less, the Albany women's basketball team returned to the Coliseum to play against Cortland last Friday. The Dutchmen were expected to be formidable, but were held to single digits by the Dutchmen, with a score of 8-0 on Saturday.

The Dutchmen were the first team to score, and were able to work the lead up to 13 points in the first half. Offensive play improved from yesterday's game, and Albany was able to beat out Cortland in the second half. The game was basically uneventful, as the teams exchanged offensive foul-ups as the game went on. The Dutchmen were able to maintain their advantage throughout the game, which ended in a 63-31 victory for Albany.

Bernard, an assistant coach, has been with the team for one year. He was an assistant coach at the University of Vermont last year, and has been an assistant coach at the University of Vermont since 1978. He is the team's most valuable player, according to coach G. W. B. Heard.

The outlook is the team's most important achievement. "We don't have six returning starters, and Paul Schwartz, a junior at the University of Vermont, may fill that spot this year," Heard said.
