Gridders Put Most Experienced Team On Turf

By Eddie Estes

Robert Ford, head coach of the Athens State football team, said the return of 11 seniors from last year's squad is a plus for the Gridders this year. "This team is much better this year than last," Ford said. "We're much better in every position, and I'm sure we can win some games." The Gridders' record last year was 4-5-1.

Ford said his team will face some strong opponents this year, including tough games against Furman, University of South Carolina, and the University of Tennessee. "We have to be prepared for those games," he said. "We can't take anything for granted." Ford said the Gridders will focus on improving their defense and special teams this year.

The Gridders' schedule includes games against the University of Alabama, Furman, and the University of Tennessee. "We have some tough games, but I'm confident we can win if we play well," Ford said. "We have a strong defense and a good offensive line." Ford said the key to success this year is preparation.

The Gridders' home games will be played at the Athens State Stadium, located on the campus of Athens State University.

Coed Sports Evolve

By Ariel Winters

The Athens State women's sports program is undergoing a transformation, as the school continues to expand its offerings in sports. Athens State, which traditionally focused on men's sports like football and basketball, is now offering a variety of coed sports, including volleyball, tennis, and soccer. "We're excited about the new offerings," said Athletic Director John Jones. "We want to give our students more options and more opportunities to stay active." Jones said the new sports programs are aimed at meeting the needs of the student population.

Through the transformation of the women's sports program, the school hopes to attract more female students and provide them with more opportunities to participate in sports. "The new programs are designed to meet the needs of our female students," said Jones. "We want to give them the same opportunities as the men." Jones said the new sports programs are part of an overall plan to make Athletics a more integral part of the academic experience at Athens State.

One of the key elements of the new program is the emphasis on coed sports. "We want to create a more inclusive atmosphere," said Jones. "We want our students to feel welcome and included regardless of their gender." Jones said the new coed sports programs are part of a larger effort to make Athletics more accessible to all students.

The new programs have already begun to attract students. "We've had a lot of interest," said Jones. "The volleyball and soccer programs have been especially popular." Jones said the school is committed to providing high-quality programs and competitive opportunities for all students.

The Athens State women's sports program is part of a larger trend in higher education, as colleges and universities continue to expand their offerings in sports. "We're seeing a lot of innovation in this area," said Jones. "Athletics is becoming more important to students and more integral to the academic experience." Jones said the school is committed to continuing to expand its offerings in sports and making Athletics a more integral part of the academic experience at Athens State.

The new coed sports programs are part of a larger effort to make Athletics more accessible to all students. "We want to ensure that all students have the opportunity to participate in sports," said Jones. "We want to create a more inclusive atmosphere." Jones said the school is committed to providing high-quality programs and competitive opportunities for all students.
Legal Services Due

By Matthew Cox

The Board of Directors of the legal services program on behalf of the SUNY students, are pleased to announce the legal services program to SUNY President Donald Gold. The board of directors has unanimously voted to approve the program.

The board is composed of attorneys and law students who have been involved in the legal services program for several years. The program will be available to all SUNY students and will provide legal services to those who qualify.

The program will be funded through a combination of state and federal grants. The board has also received a generous donation from a private individual.

The program will be administered by the SUNY Legal Services Commission, which will be established to oversee the program.

President Gold thanked the board of directors for their hard work and dedication to the program.

He said: "This is a great opportunity for SUNY students to receive legal services. I am confident that this program will be successful and will provide a valuable service to our students."

There's Safety in Advisors

by Ted Lebowski

On Monday, August 1, the house at 224 W. University Avenue went up in flames. Fortunately, it was early morning and the SUNY students who were residing there for the summer quickly escaped. They received emergency aid from the American Red Cross for their immediate needs; primarily food and clothing, and they were able to return for temporary accommodations at campus. All of the students were unhurt, but some of their personal items were damaged or destroyed by the fire.

This is not the first fire involving off-campus living at SUNY. In November, a fire at 224 State Street resulted not only in extensive property damage, but also destruction of property belonging to the students themselves. And it is probably not the last. If anything, it seems that there are more fires here today than there were a few years ago. The reason for this increase is not clear, but one possible explanation is that students lack a sense of responsibility.

If you are a student living off-campus this semester, it is important to be aware of the dangers involved in this type of living. The following information is provided to help you understand the risks involved and to encourage you to take necessary precautions.

- Stay informed. Stay up to date on local news and weather conditions. Know your evacuation routes and emergency contacts.
- Be prepared. Have a plan in place in case of an emergency. Know where you can go and how you will get there.
- Keep your home safe. Install smoke detectors, keep fire extinguishers handy, and keep your home clean and clutter-free.
- Be respectful. Respect your neighbors and the community in which you live. Avoid loud music, parties, and other activities that may disturb others.

The Office of Residential Life encourages all students to take these steps to ensure their safety and the safety of their neighbors. Together, we can make off-campus living a safe and enjoyable experience.

Under The Reign Of Cocaine

THEY SEEMED so happy, so content, but I knew there was something wrong. I could see it in their eyes, in the way they held themselves. They were hollow, empty. And then the night I saw her, I knew. She was the one. I felt a tinge of relief, but also a sense of dread.

I had heard stories about her before, whispers in the shadows, rumors of a woman who could make men forget their troubles. But nothing could have prepared me for the reality. She was unlike anything I had ever seen. Her skin was flawless, her hair cascaded down in waves, and her eyes were like pools of liquid gold. She was the embodiment of desire, but also of danger.

The night I saw her, I was out on a routine mission, patrolling the streets. I heard her name being whispered, and I followed the sound. The streets were empty, but I knew she was close. I kept going, and finally, I saw her. She was sitting at a table, surrounded by a small group of men. She looked up as I approached, and her eyes locked onto mine. I could feel my heart race faster, my palms sweat. She smiled, and it was a sickening sight.

"You're late," she said, her voice laced with venom. "I was beginning to think you wouldn't come at all.

I forced a smile, trying to maintain my composure. It was a futile effort. She was too powerful. "I had... other things to attend to," I stammered, trying to sound convincing.

"Oh, is that so?" she sneered. "I suppose I should feel honored that such a man as yourself would feel the need to overlook such an... insignificant little thing as your duty.

I tried to speak, but her words were like a thing of darkness, consuming me. I couldn't move, couldn't breathe. I was trapped in her gaze.

"But I suppose that's why they call you the Shadow. Because you can't be seen, can't be heard, can't be touched. You're like the shadows themselves, haunting the shadows.

I tried to protest, but my voice was a mere whisper. I felt my knees give out, and I collapsed to the ground. She stepped closer, her face inches from mine. "My dear Shadow, you have no idea what you've gotten yourself into.

And then the darkness engulfed me, and I was lost in the abyss of her power. She had taken me, and I was nothing but a pawn in her game. And now, I was her prisoner, and I was hers to do with as she pleased.

An Unhealthy Situation

At SUNY, students have no say in the contraceptive clinic. At Buffalo, the program is student controlled.

At SUNY, students must pay $18 for a gynecological exam. At Nassau Community it’s free.

For a large progressive campus, SUNY is seriously deficient in health services. The Campus Contraceptive Clinic is supported by student customers, yet students have no input in administrative decisions.

It is ludicrous to operate a student health service on campus and then force students into off-campus clinics for information on birth control, or counseling for pregnancy or rape.

The first steps are being taken. Student Association and the office of Student Affairs are currently investigating the feasibility of a sexuality clinic, but support is urgently needed if a student-controlled clinic of any shape or form is to work. And it’s needed now.

As The Stomach Turns

While the near confirmation of Eratosis as mayor of Albany may prove all real hope of major city improvement, perhaps it’s not too late to save the thousands who are presently suffering at the hands of our UAS quad kitchen.

Use any explosive you wish to describe it, the quad food has gone downhill since last year.

One could take pot shots at the food, saying the Federal government was forced to create a quality standard below “Usable for Human Consumption” to stamp the food. Or that the plant department is using the old food to poison the pigeons who roost on the P.A.C., or that the army is experimenting with UAS chili as a new biological weapon.

The truth, however, speaks for itself.

At Alumni yesterday, cheeseburgers consisted of a patty on a stale roll with an unhealthily piece of cheese on top. Indian last week got the hot when the kitchen served for dinner the “Heidi’s Delight” pimento stuffed into a tomato. Dutch Quad residents look longingly at the Koster diners as they slice into an undercooked chicken and dodge the spaghettios blood.

There is an old SUNYA axiom that applies to this case. “There are two ways to the heart of a student: through his cutie or his stomach.”

We could all use a 40 and a square meal.

So Lucky to be Depressed

by Joe M. Rameiras

An ex-girlfriend ran off with your best friend while you were on a four-day Harvard Greek reunion and you’re now planning to spend money on a conventional therapy. You’ve run out of self-respect and are now willing to pay someone $50 (a quarter of what they charge) to make you feel better.

You’ve been on antidepressants for years, but they don’t work. You’ve tried everything to get through this, but you can’t even look at a mirror without thinking you’re ugly. You can’t even go out to eat without feeling like everyone is staring at you. You’ve tried everything from dieting to exercise, but nothing seems to help.

So, you decide to try therapy. You call a number of therapists, but you can’t afford the cost of seeing a professional. You decide to try something different.

You start reading books about depression, and you realize that you’re not alone. You find comfort in the stories of others who have been through what you’re going through.

You start to feel better, and you begin to feel more confident. You start to see improvement in your life, and you start to feel like you’re getting better.

So, when you’re feeling better, you decide to stop taking the antidepressants. You think you’re better, and you don’t want to take the medication anymore.

But then, you start to feel worse. You start to feel like you’re back to square one. You start to feel like you’re never going to get better.

So, you start taking the antidepressants again. And you think to yourself, “I can’t believe I’m doing this. I’m so lucky to be depressed.” But you’re also grateful for the help it’s giving you.
The Time Goes Up in Smoke

by Melba Meneses

On December 12, 1979, the Albany Student Press was a front-page novelty entitled "Smoking Ban in Clan's Central South House." The article was a hit performer at the time. Now, on paper, the story seems rather farcical.

Traditional... things don't go their own way. As you know, back in 1979, the ASU held a series of articles on smoking regulations. Through their efforts, "NO SMOKING" signs abounded, the ASU was praised as a model for other schools to follow. And the students, who once smoked at will, were forced to find other outlets for their nicotine cravings.

The effect of the smoking ban was immediate. The rate of smoking dropped dramatically. Students were forced to find alternative ways to satisfy their cravings. Some turned to baking, while others took up knitting. It was a time of great change, and many students were left feeling lost.

But just as quickly as it came, the smoking ban was lifted. The students rejoiced, and the ASU was once again praised as a model for other schools to follow. And the students, who once smoked at will, were once again able to light up at their leisure.

To smoke or not to smoke, that is the question. And the question, in the end, is up to us. For, in the end, we all have to live with the consequences of our actions. So, let us all strive to make the world a safer place for all, and let us all work towards a future where smoking is a thing of the past.

Albany held its very own singles match and won both matches at home. Ted Kaspar, defeated Steve Handlow 6-1, 6-4.

The remainder of the double, however, went down to defeat in singles matches. Only Gary Black, the number two man, was close to victory, dropping second set tiebreaker 7-5 to Mitch Cohen.

Mike Perry, one year's junior, was the number six man, new playing in the number three spot, but he lost quickly to Andy Anzalone 6-1, 4-6 and Dennis Greene Gublerin lost to Randy Baddock 6-3, 6-3.

Albany was still in the match at this point. They needed to win all three doubles matches to keep the team together. They won one close but left one match short.

Fieldstone and Black beat Ruby and Mitch Cohen 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 and Gublerin and Greene took Handlow and Baddock 6-3, 6-2, but the Orange's team of Lestor and Steve Cohen defeated Perlberg and Anzalone 7-5, 6-4, giving the Orange the team.

"Great, I think we did pretty well," said one of the players. "It was better than I expected, and much better than we had hoped to have some doubles" the captain explained. "We had some problems in the beginning but several hard work and incentive improved. Actually Phil American returned my serve. After I missed, we should go stronger," added Lewis.

The players have set their sights on the showdown, tomorrow, when they travel to Cortland. But they have their work cut out for them.

Steve Martin, also added "It's a tough team.

Albany plans to hold counter-matches Monday, Sept. 19 against the University of Vermont, a Division II school.

Golf

London-based Tony Jacklin has been named the 1977 European Tour's Player of the Year after he captured the Scottish Open in July, the World Matchplay Championship in August, and the Portugal Open in September. His major triumphs included the British Open, the Italian Open, and the Turkey Open.

Basketball

Cranston, R.I. Forward Mark Tines of the Detroit Pistons was named a starter for the upcoming season and signed a multi-year contract with the club. The Detroit Pistons improved from an average of 96-190 to 93-175, and Tines is expected to play a key role in the team's success.

College Basketball

Tulsa, Okla. Wichita State University was chosen for the NCAA tournament in any opening round involving basketball player Marcus Perry, who was barred from playing in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Gridders Open Tomorrow

While tomorrow is Albany's first regular season game, they did play an exhibition game last week.

Albany, coached R.V. Pane in the game but will play this game with its best team.

"We need to know more about the quality of the game," said Pane.

"I hope our team will be better than the previous game. It was a very disappointing game. Our players were not focused and we didn't play our best," said Pane.

"I'm not sure if we will win," said Pane. "Our team is still young and unexperienced. We need to improve our teamwork and develop a better strategy."
Booster Open Year Versus Top British Team

by Ron Hunt
Albany State opens 1772 season November 17 on the island of St. Kitts. The game will be against one of the top collegiate teams in the British Commonwealth, the University of Birmingham. The game will be at 5 p.m. GMT. The game is important because it will be priced at 50 cents for students and $1 for anyone else.

The Birmingham exhibition game is the first of a series of regular season games that begin September 25, 1772, with a game against the University of Oxford. The series ends with a game against the University of Cambridge on December 25.

The teams are not only top in the British Commonwealth, but also in the world. The University of Birmingham is rated fourth in the world, and the University of Cambridge is rated third.

The series is being held because of the interest in American football among the British. The University of Cambridge, for example, has a football team that is considered to be the best in the British Commonwealth.

The game will be held in the University of Birmingham's stadium, which has a capacity of 20,000. The game will be broadcast live on the University of Birmingham's radio station, which has a reach of 10 miles.

The game will be an important one for the University of Albany. The university has been trying to establish itself as a top football program in the United States, and the game will be an opportunity to show the world what the university can do.
