Communication

To the Editor:

In recent years much discussion about the role of the University has been taking place. Many students have expressed their dissatisfaction with the current state of affairs. In particular, there is a growing sense of frustration with the administration's policies and decisions. A number of students have called for a more student-oriented approach to education and administration.

By R. W. PLATT and R. W. McCARTHY

The university has responded to these concerns by initiating several changes. These include a new curriculum, an increased emphasis on research, and a greater role for students in the decision-making process. While these changes are commendable, there is a need for further action to address the concerns of the student body.

Students are encouraged to continue to express their views and participate in the decision-making process. The university will continue to work towards creating a more student-centered environment.

University of Union Greeks

State College News,

Union of Greek Organizations

Ever since its establishment in 1948, the State University has been striving to attain closer cooperation among its constituent Greek organizations. One of the most effective ways of increasing communication and cooperation among the various groups is through the organization of formal events and social gatherings. This organization could effect a unity of the first degree that is not possible simply through a "New Letter" and conferences.Athletics help somewhat, but the trend to advertise differences rather than emphasize cooperation.

The advantages of such a system could be of great value not only to the University but also to our own Greek organization. The Greek community consists of several distinct groups: the Greeks, the Latin American students, and the students from other countries. Each group has its own particular problems and needs. If these problems are not addressed in a systematic manner, the resulting friction could lead to the dissolution of the system.

There is a growing consensus among the Greek organization to develop a more formalized structure that would allow for closer cooperation among the various groups. The establishment of formal events and social gatherings would be a step in this direction. By bringing together the various groups in a formal setting, it would be possible to address the problems that are unique to each group and to develop solutions that are tailored to the specific needs of each group.
