From The Editor's Desk:

"News" Breaks Tradition, Enters Experimental Stesimal

We have two phrases of definitions to display this week. The first phrase is "newspaper," which we are not so keen on. The second phrase is "experiment," which we are not as keen on. To this we add the phrase "newspaper experiment," which we are not very keen on.

Last week members of the News staff returned to the pressroom to test out an idea that we had for a new feature. We felt that it was important for our readers to know what we were doing, and we decided to experiment with some new types of stories.

The newsroom was buzzing with activity as the staff worked together to create this new feature. They wereSO excited that we decided to share their enthusiasm with you.

"Thank you for believing in us," said the editor. "We are committed to providing our readers with the best possible reading experience.

We hope you enjoy our new feature and that it helps to keep you informed.

End lies the experiment.

Law Repealed:

"Have you ever thought about how much trouble you would be if you were caught smoking in public?"

"It's illegal, you know."

"I know, but I think it's just a matter of personal choice. I don't see why anyone should be punished for it."

"Well, it's against the law."

"I guess I'll have to quit, then."

Editors Participate In National Press Convention

Carol Ann Lefr;

"We had a great time at the convention. It was an opportunity to meet other journalists and learn about the latest trends in the industry."

---

State Board Considers New Rules

"We are looking into the possibility of implementing new rules for our school. We want to make sure that our students are protected and that our school is a safe place for everyone."

State, The Institution, and the Community

"As a state institution, we have a responsibility to serve the community. We need to ensure that our policies are in line with the wishes of the people.

Questions of the Week

"What do you think about the new experiment?"

"I think it's a good idea. It gives us a chance to try something new."
We made the discovery together.
