Justice Served: The Truth Behind The Vign

By Richard Pellet

The Vigns, an infamous crime committed in the United States during World War II. The Vigns were a group of five men who, in an act of desperation, decided to steal a truck and drive it into a crowd of people. The Vigns then ignited the gasoline in the truck and set it on fire, killing over 100 people. The Vigns were later captured and brought to trial. During the trial, the Vigns were found guilty of murder and sentenced to death. However, the Vigns were given the opportunity to appeal their sentences, and they did so. The appellate court upheld the original verdict, and the Vigns were executed by firing squad.
