WHEN STUDENTS ARE TEACHERS

It is indeed a significant and noteworthy fact that classes were continued last week without faculty guidance, and home economics while the instructors were attending conference in Syracuse.

This is an unusual practice, and merits favorable comment when contrasted with the general collegial trend of classes to evaporate if the instructor is absent. Nevertheless, the work accomplished in the classes is uniformly reported as good.

Under elected officers, the classes continued their work with the same precision and earnestness that they practice in the regular classes. The regular classes, while still in the main doing better without faculty guidance, since all the regular courses were apparently better prepared in some of the classes. Knowing that the responsibility was theirs alone, the students arose to the occasion and did what was expected of them.

This then might indicate to instructors and professors that college classes can continue their work with the same degree of precision and earnestness that they practice in the regular classes, and thus be held responsible for the work accomplished in the classes.

CONSTITUTION SHOULD BE MADE LEGAL

It now Lacks Recognized Status

The so-called "new constitution" is not a part of the machinery of student government at State College. It is no recognized legal status except as a proposed constitution submitted to the association by a committee after careful deliberation.

State College is still governed by its old constitution; that is, that which was in effect in 1926. The new constitution, whilst still in the making, remains in the hands of the student association. In the meantime, the status of the association has been changed to that of a newly formed and copyrighted constitution.

A committee of which John Smith was a member, when the constitution was completed, was the new president of the student association. It was then the president of the student association who made the notice of filing and the registration was named in the secretary's office.

The new constitution can mean much to students if they bring in beneath them the problems of the new constitution, and are able to solve them. The state college will be invited to help.

The new association can mean much to students if they bring in beneath them the problems of the old constitution, and are able to solve them. The state college will be invited to help.

As it was a college, the students were invited to make the new constitution legal. This means then that the ad hoc committee of the new constitution has been made a part of the steps in the preparation of the old constitution.

The new constitution should be made legal. It stands today as a proposed constitution and will remain in the hands of the student association until the constitution is made legal.

WHERE PREADJUDICE PAYS

Sorority work, like any important art to perfection, if the women would themselves of the sisters of the old college, is one of the interesting social features of the college. As it was pointed out by John M. Smith, secretary of the college, it is an interesting feature of the college.

If the nutrition is to the best of its ability, and the nutrition is to the best of its ability, it is a very important study. It is a very important study. It is an important study.

Professor Speros Seeks Aid Of Class In Prompt Action In Giving Data

Seniors who desire positions through the college placement bureau will be asked to file this week. A list of positions is to be mailed to interested students, according to Professor John M. Styles, secretary of the bureau.

Each senior will be asked to obtain and retain three promptly to Miss Gertrude M. Hall, secretary to Professor Styles.

The senior will obtain three copies of the "academic career" forms and file of the "educational and professional data" forms. The former has blanks for the senior to indicate his school, college and university training, degrees and diplomas. On the latter form, the candidate for a teaching position will indicate his previous address, birth date, length of school attendance, personal description, the subjects in which he has specialized and those with which he may qualify to teach.

The placement bureau will add to these two forms a few other forms, including a message to interested school executives suggesting a candidate's teaching ability, recommendations from the major and minor officers, and a transcription of the candidate's grades during his career at State College.

Seniors should have their photographs taken by Professor Styles, who will loan materials from the college for his office first photographs, if their own photographs are not adequate, at the time of their application. When posing for the picture, the candidate should wear a business suit or dress, Professor Styles said.

He can supply a copy of all the photographs with Miss Hall by the sophomore committee. She will then mount them in folders. When a superior photograph is supplied by the candidate, he will be allowed to have them mounted by himself in folders for his own use. In the case of senior class, the photographs and information sheets will be held by the sophomore committee.
