What Happened To The Rules?

In the Assembly of January 7, Student Senate passed the revised Campus Commission Rules, which gave a new interpretation to the old rules. The purpose of the revision was to help the Senate in the task of censuring violators of said rules. Article VI, section 2, Penalties, states, "Three minor offenses or one major offense constitute the publication of the offender's name in the school paper."

For those who were not present at the meeting, the Senators voted to change the rule so that three minor offenses or one major offense would constitute the publication of the offender's name in the school paper. The publication of the offender's name in the school paper serves as a warning to the offender and a deterrent to others. The new rule is an improvement over the old rule, which was too lenient.

In the Commons board, many rules are constantly violated, such as students using the washrooms as a place to smoke, carrying a cigarette, or using a public restroom for personal use. These rules are often violated, but the punishment is not severe enough to deter students from breaking them.

The rule is truly enforced, but students are not always aware of the rules. As a result, they often violate them without being aware of the consequences. The new rule is a step in the right direction, but more enforcement is needed to ensure that students are aware of the rules and consequences.
