UN Forces Occupy Gaza; Nassar Violates Agreement

The UN Force in the Gaza Strip has been strengthened by the presence of UN troops, and Egypt has increased its military presence in the area. President Nasser has ordered the Egyptian army to occupy the Gaza Strip, and the Egyptian government has announced that it will not allow UN forces to operate in the area.

The question: "What does that word mean?" is not clearly answered in the text. It may refer to the word "UN" or some other term related to the UN's actions in the Gaza Strip.

When Emperor Haile Selassie was in power, he cooperated closely with the UN, and there were reports that even Russia had gotten into the act by advising Ethiopia that the U.S. wants the Red Sea Base.

SA To Nominate Today; Attendance Plan Changes

The State College News reports on the University of Illinois announcement of its decision to use a plagiarism detection system for all papers. The university has also announced that it will continue to use this system in the future.

New Affiliate System

The new affiliate system, according to the university, provides for a more flexible approach to research and development. The system will allow for greater collaboration between different departments and faculties, and will also encourage more interdisciplinary research.

The following programs will be the focus of the university's research effort:

- A program to study the effects of climate change on plant and animal species.
- A program to investigate the impact of human activities on the natural environment.
- A program to develop new technologies for the production of renewable energy sources.
- A program to study the effects of globalization on the economy and society.

The university has also announced that it will continue to use its current plagiarism detection system for all papers, and that it will continue to support the research and development efforts of its affiliated institutions.

Mykanga's getting busier as the year progresses. We're very pleased that they are, too. Yesterday, a member of Mykanga directed a meeting for those interested in starting a highly active student Association. Contributions and donations were collected to set up a new organization. The meeting was held at 7:30 p.m. and was attended by nearly all members of the group. Many new ideas were discussed and plans for the future were made. We're looking forward to seeing what this group will accomplish.

Communications

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my disappointment in the recent column by a contributor who consistently expresses opinions that are not representative of the majority of the student body. I feel that the writer's views are not only misleading but also harmful to the community. I urge the editor to consider withholding future columns by this contributor until such time as the writer can demonstrate a more balanced perspective.

Yours truly,

State, Federal Taxes Drain Pockets Of College Students

By FRANK SWISKEY

The time of the year when college students are counting their remaining wages and trying to figure out whether they will be able to live off their summer job for the next year is here, and the amount of money that federal and state governments are taking out of their pockets is staggering. According to a recent study, college students in the United States pay an average of $35 per week in federal and state taxes, which is equivalent to about $1,820 per year. This is a significant financial burden for students, who are often living on a tight budget and trying to save up for rent, food, and other expenses.

The study also found that the amount of money that college students pay in taxes is increasing each year. In 2010, the average tax bill for college students was $30 per week, or $1,560 per year. This means that the amount of money that college students are paying in taxes has increased by about 5% per year over the past decade.

The study also found that the amount of money that college students pay in taxes is not evenly distributed. Students at private universities tend to pay more in taxes than those at public universities, and students in larger cities tend to pay more in taxes than those in smaller towns.
