Van Liew, Grand President; Emily Hamilton, 20, National Secretary; Harriet Church, '19, alumnae representative, and Florence Stanbro, '22, delegate.

Baseball Practice Begins

Manager Arranges Good Schedule

After two weeks of getting used to the ball field, the junior baseball team, under the supervision of the old manager, began their practice schedule last Thursday in Beverwyck Park. About thirty men made up the team, and the infield and outfield are well manned. Twenty-five players reported at the field, and twenty-nine were on the practice game last Thursday in the gymnasium of the college. Four members of the baseball team were given a delightful auto ride through the city of Madison and around its fine neighboring lakes. Friday evening an Omicron Nu banquet was held for the members of the conclave. At Madison the guests were entertained at Barnard and Lithrop halls.

Historical Episodes Dramatized

Novel Entertainment Given by Frosh

Friday afternoon, April 16, Quiz Section F, under the direction of Margaret J. Brubacher, Manager, announced that the students of History 2, presented in the auditorium a group of sketches based upon historical episodes. In the first scene Sir Walter Raleigh (Thomas Bentley), gallantly cast his cloak upon the ground so that Queen Bess (Agnes Scott Smith) might pass over the muddy spot. The queen's attendants were Katherine Bina and Laura Bell. The first appearance of Virginia tobacco in England was portrayed. Sir Walter Raleigh and a servant (Lea Woliusky) were the characters.

Intersorority Ball at Ten Eyck

The Intersorority ball will be held Friday evening, April 23, in the Ten Eyck. The societies of State College have all banded together instead of having individual dances. The committee in charge are as follows:

General arrangements, "Chi Gamma: dance orders, "Osi Omega; decorations, "Delta Delta; invitations, "Alpha Epsilon Phi; "Phi Chi Sigma Theta: music, "Eta Phi."
The Overalls Movement

Overalls have taken the country by storm. The vogue has spread rapidly until it has invaded not only the city street but the business office, the school, the court, and even Congress and the pulpit, and wherever it spreads, in the movement, there has come much talk about cutting down the "overalls spirit," not only for"

SENIOR SONG CONTEST

Continued from Page 1 whose songs were: "Come on, Let's Go" and "The Four Ages of Tarasque." The decision was given by Miss Bennett.

The class has voted to give a memorial window, which is to be dedicated to all those who paid the supreme sacrifice during the post war event.

HISTORICAL EPISODES

The program proved very interesting and well planned. Some of the more interesting and appropriate music by Dante Camerino and Anna Dorsey, piano, and Grace Ammon and Ethyl Hepp, violin, contributed much to its success. It is hoped that this will not be the last of similar entertainments.

FRIDAY ASSEMBLY

Tomorrow morning in Student Assembly Auditorium will be presented the last lecture on Dante's "Divine Comedy."

CLAYTON HAMILTON TALKS UPON THE THEATER

On Thursday night, March 18, the Dramatic and Art Association presented Mr. Clayton Hamilton, who gave a talk on the economic problems of the theater. Mr. Hamilton, who has seen all the noteworthy plays for the last twenty years, said that a prosperous theatrical season from the standpoint of the box office was usually a poor season for the drama. This year has been just the reverse, financially prosperous time, for people crowd the theatres regardless of the plays that are shown. People complain because there are not enough serious and important plays produced. They say that American authorship is at fault, but they do not understand the situation. For there are plenty of important and serious plays with them, but they can produce enough money weekly to stay in a theatre in New York. So the plays that draw the crowds are given bedroom farces and "who killed whom" plots. For even with the price of theater tickets doubled these plays can run indefinitely.

Mr. Hamilton explained briefly the aim and history of the theater guild. To satisfy the desire that a great many people have to see great and classic drama, a number of artists, actors and designers organized a theater guild whose aim was to produce great plays by great authors. The theater guild realized that its greatest problem was an economic one, and made it possible to save money by eliminating the stage manager. A business manager or bookkeeper was hired.

Their first great success was "John Ferguson," which has taken its place as a great play only through the guild. So, in so far as the theater guild is concerned, it has solved for itself the economic problems of the theater.

There are several items in our 1920-21 budget which have fared better, financially, than basketball. Why couldn't part of the surplus amount of one of these items be applied to clean up the basketball slate? As an argument against this, it has been stated that whatever surplus there remains from any item is to be applied to that item on the next year's budget. If that be the case we would be applying money paid expressly to support 1919-20 activities at State College, for supporting unspent obligations of next year, while an existing obligation contracted this year would remain unsettled. Does such a construction seem logical? If not, why not make the appropriation, as the simplest and most logical solution of the matter.

Bear in mind this fact—if we don't play square with the men this year, how much of a showing for basketball are we going to have next year?

This is merely an expression of opinion which does not aim to intrude upon the duties or prerogatives of the athletic council. Should the council have taken favorable action in the matter before this appears in print, I am sure that we are all behind them in their action.
